It should be obvious that the man who is actually engaged in the presentation of the performance is the logical person on whom such responsibility should be placed, as any other method calls for holding one person accountable for another person's actions.

While it is likely that no serious difficulties are encountered with the system as at present constituted, still, it is not at all improbable that the future may bring about such changes in theatre practice as will make this system untenable.

With two or more men in the projection room all engaged in similar duties, thus presenting a good chance for overlapping and duplication of duties, it is difficult to place responsibility upon any one of them and there results a splendid chance for argument should anything go wrong.

Recognizing the weakness of such a system, Houston S. Morton, who is employed in a Detroit theatre, after considerable work has evolved a system which, even though it may not be directly applicable in its present form, certainly contains the nucleus around which a most flexible operating method in the projection room can be constructed.

Centralized System Endorsed

This idea, when presented to such men as Edward Werner, head of the Musical Division of the Michigan Theatre, Detroit, Thomas Moule, Supervisor of the Kunsky Corporation, affiliated with Publix, and various Union officials, was enthusiastically received and promised practical cooperation with the view toward placing it in theatres for the purpose of giving it a practical test.

Briefly, the system calls for the centralization of all controls on all pieces of projection equipment at one point in the projection room, at which point a projectionist is stationed for the purpose of exercising entire control over all equipment.

This centralization is obtained by grouping all switches, meters, indicators, resistance controls, and signal systems on a single panel board, the controls for the various projectors then being sectionalized to avoid confusion.

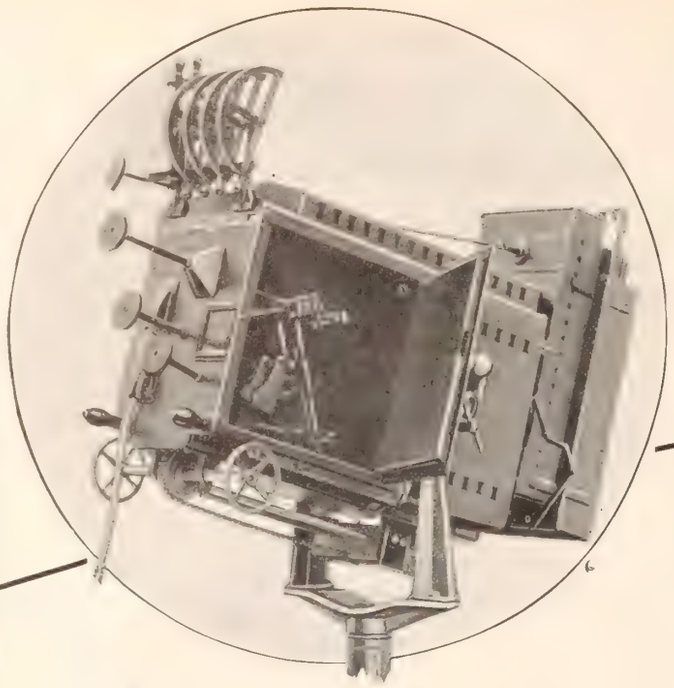
More specifically, the idea, as explained by Morton and illustrated by drawings, calls for a row of nine double-pole, double-throw switches across the top of the main panel board. These switches are for the purpose of instantly changing from the regular source of electric current to an emergency source in case of the failure of the first.

Below this, the board is divided into nine stations, two deep by three across. In the upper left hand and upper right sections are placed the voltmeters, ammeters, and resistance controls for the effect projectors, stereopticons and spotlamps. That is to say, the effect projector and one spotlamp would be in one section and the stereopticon and one spotlamp in the other.

In the top center section of the board are placed a clock, synchronized with the rest of the house clocks, and a schedule board timing the program.

In each of the three lower sections are placed the meters, control resistances, indicators, and switches for each of the three motion picture projectors, together with whatever signal devices may be required.

Method of Operation



The proposed method of operation is as follows: One projectionist on each shift is selected to be stationed at the control board before which he will be seated, so as to view the screen through a suitable porthole. A control for every projection device in the projection room is within easy reach.

The man selected makes a careful study of the particular program in advance of its presentation and his duty is to do nothing but direct the performance as far as concerns the projection end of it.

The second man does nothing but attend to the projection equipment and sees to it that the carbons are properly trimmed, films are inspected and rewound, magazines properly loaded, etc. He has nothing to do with the actual direction of the show, since his work is merely that of an attendant during the course of the show.

In this manner, one man, and only one, is responsible for the operation of the equipment from a mechanical standpoint and another man is entirely responsible for the performance as presented to the patrons. Each man is accountable for his own particular work; and there can be no passing of the buck, since the two jobs do not in any way overlap each other.

This operation may be continued for a week or for a day, whichever may seem most desirable, whereupon the men on duty can alternate in their respective jobs, so as to give each one a chance to direct the show. Thus each man will be required to thoroughly understand the schedule, since each in turn will have exclusive control over its destiny, and the blame for any carelessness or mishap can be immediately placed on the party who was the cause of it.

PERFECTLY BALANCED —Always!

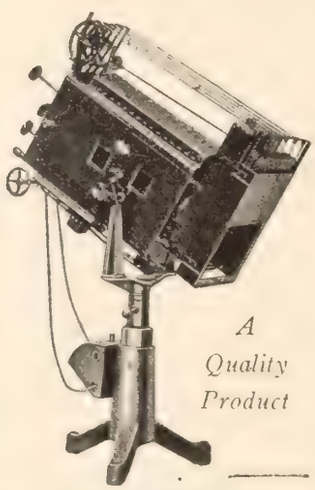
That means perfect control of the light beam



In these days of elaborate presentations the projectionist must work in split-seconds if one act is to follow smoothly upon another.

To facilitate this, the BRENKERT C-14 Spot-Flood Lamp is perfectly counter-balanced and remains so always. This feature, which is of outstanding importance, is accomplished through the action of a compact counter-balancing mechanism placed conveniently out of the way beneath the lamphouse.

This device is entirely automatic in nature and its positive action permits the projectionist to leave the lamphouse unclamped, free to be moved in any direction at an instant's notice and with a minimum of effort.

To appreciate fully the many refinements and all-around superiority of this lamp you need only to see it in action. Let us arrange a demonstration for you. Just write to

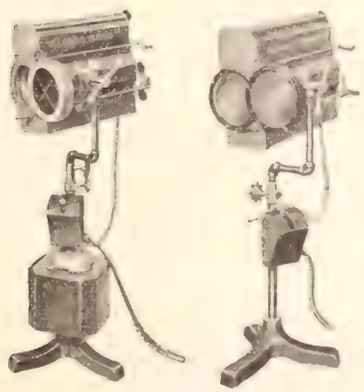
New And Improved Equipment

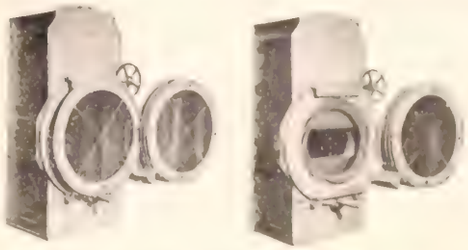
A Review of the Latest Developments in Theatre Engineering

Electrically Operated Safety Device for Fire Prevention



CONSIDERING the number of film fires which continue to occur in motion picture theatres, any device which tends to eliminate the causes for such fires will be particularly welcome to exhibitors.

The most promising apparatus for the prevention of fires that has yet come to our attention is the Sentry Safety Control, which has just been placed on the market by the Sentry Safety Control Corporation of Philadelphia. This apparatus has been passed by the National Board of Fire Underwriters, and has been approved by the insurance companies.



The Sentry Safety Control is easily attached to all makes of standard projectors. Further, the device in no way hinders the operation of the projector. It consists of a series of electrical controls, which function in unison whenever there is trouble with the film, by causing a special douser to cut off the light beam directly in front of the arc.

Instances of trouble which will cause the Sentry Safety Control to function are as follows: perforations mutilated to a degree that the film will not go through the projector properly; breakage of film; loss of lower loop; trouble with the take-up; or in general, any cause which tends to prevent the proper passage of the film through the projector. Also, in case a belt should break or slip off its pulley, the special Sentry douser immediately falls in front of the light beam.

This douser drops faster than the ordinary projector douser does, giving assurance that the time elapsing between the time the film stops running through the projector and the time the light beam is cut off, is not sufficient to ignite the film at the aperture.

New Spotlight is Controlled from Rear of Hood

A NEW spotlight for use in projection rooms has recently been placed upon the market by Kliegl Bros. of New York. This spot embodied improvements and new features, being so constructed that color frames, iris shutter, curtain shutter and arc are all controlled from the rear of the hood.

This spotlight has a positive control of color frames through a series of small levers which permit the color of the light beam to be changed instantly without reaching to the front end of the lamp or sliding frames in and out of place.

The mechanism for throwing the desired color frame in or out of position in front of the lens, consists of a number of levers extending from the front to the rear of the spotlight, each lever operating a separate color screen and marked to correspond to the screen it controls. The levers are series of concentric tubes, telescopic fashion, around a center bar, providing simple and compact arrangement that occupies little space.

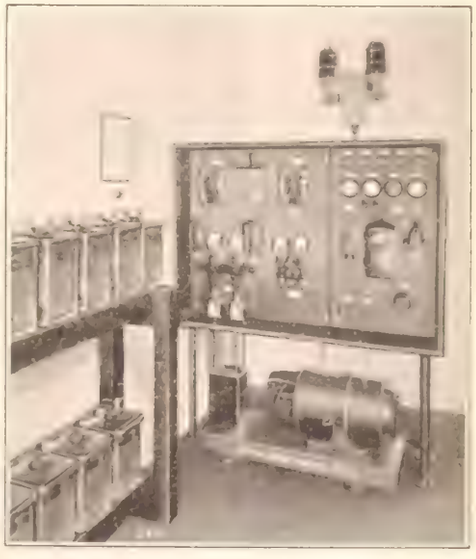
Means are also provided for rear control of the iris shutter and curtain shutter (which are made part of the spotlight), as well as the usual controls for the arc. The hood is mounted on an improved stand, with a heavy base, and is balanced and flexible so as to allow ease in "following."

Roth Emergency Power Unit for Projection Rooms

AS many states are now requiring emergency lighting equipment to be installed in mottion picture theatres, the Roth emergency lighting system, manufactured by Roth Brothers and Company, of Chicago, Ill., which is proving successful in theatre installations, will be of interest to exhibitors.

This system provides emergency power under practically any set of conditions and has three different sources of supply, which combination affords an interlocking type of protection that makes this system dependable.

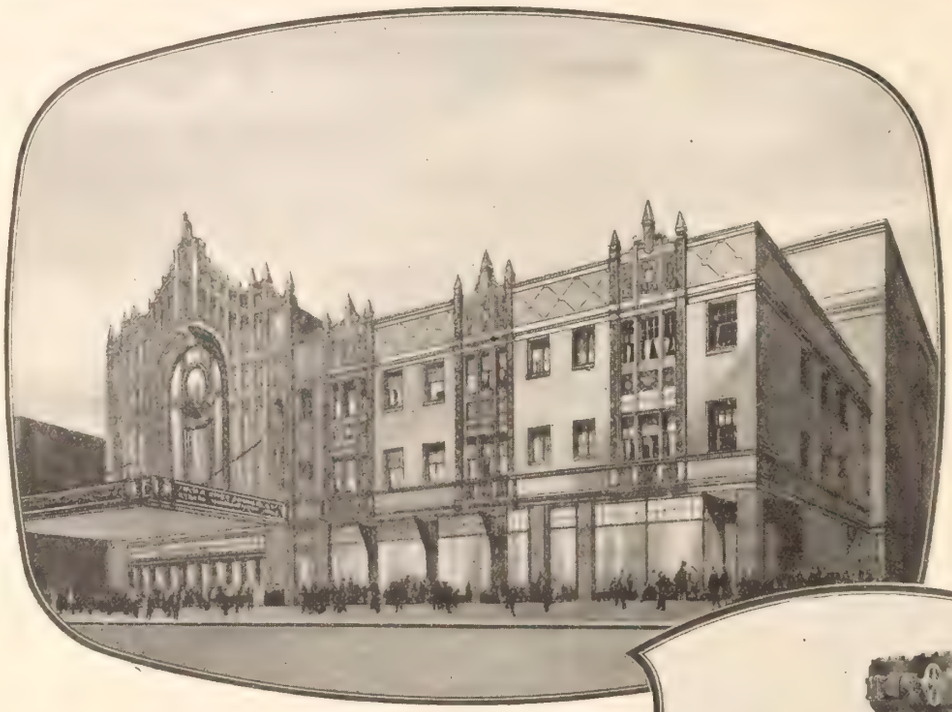
The Roth system operates emergency lights and may also be employed to operating the projectors. Further, a portion of the general lighting may be thrown on to this system.



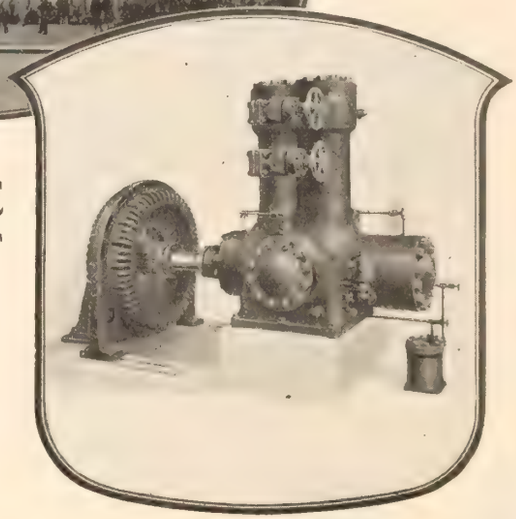
The three individual sources of power for supplying this emergency lighting are derived through the following methods: One source is the regular power supply, either from central station lines or from the private generator plant. The second source is the heavy duty storage batteries, which form a part of the Roth emergency system, while the third source is obtained from the Roth generator set itself. This combination, it is claimed, practically eliminates any danger of a theatre becoming dark.

Resonator Increase Volume of Orchestra Music

AN equipment that is gaining recognition for its worth when installed in motion picture theatres is the Gallagher Resonant base, or Resonator, as it is commonly known.



This is a sound amplifying instrument, 2½ feet wide by 3 feet 8 inches long. It is built like a violin or violincello. The top is made of a specially prepared spruce pine, with a hole in it covered by a grating which permits vibrant tones to be emitted. These sections are placed in the orchestra pit floor, one and sometimes more under each instrument. The top of these sections forms the finished floor of the orchestra pit.



When the orchestra is playing, the sounds produced by the string instruments, wood-winds, and the brasses, are transmitted to these resonators through the sounding board top, or floor.

Air Cooling & Purifying Systems for Theatres

Hot weather is just around the corner, and you know what will happen to those houses that are not prepared for it—they can throw away their S. R. O. signs, for they won't need 'em.

Investigate the York system now—being curious won't cost you anything—besides, we would like to tell you about the long list of York theatre cooling installations now under way. There are some mighty fine houses on the list.

would bring out Switzerland, perhaps with a Yodel, and I lost. How did you come to pass it?"

The public know what they like, and the man who knows what they know they like is the showman. When the entertainment suits the taste of the entertainment seeker, that's fine, and he will request more, but if on the other hand it fails to suit, there is nothing to do about it but revise the entertainment, casting it into the popular mold, or quit being a showman.

"I am a middle-aged, radio-interested, Wagner-type-of-music-loathing, unemotional, ex-Army officer and I am telling you right here and now that your concert yesterday afternoon was the most beautiful thing I have heard over the radio (or anywhere else, for that matter.)" Thus runs a letter to Roxy, and thus is illustrated the fact that your entertainment seeker has the courage of his convictions. He knows what he likes, and that's what he wants.

These are but a few typical expressions of the radio fans, a mere drop in the bucket of advice, suggestions, applause and criticism which give us a better understanding of what Roxy means when he says "No man or woman can have contact with a great listening audience without being benefited by it both spiritually and practically."

No Change of Policy During 14 Years

Fourteen years without change of policy and still one of the most successful theatres in Massachusetts is the record of the Rialto Theatre in Worcester, of which James Greeko is owner and manager. Not only is he one of the most successful owner-managers but he is likewise one of the most popular.

The policy which has built success for the Rialto is a daily change of features, a comedy, serial and a twice-weekly change of International Newsreel. To this may be added a three-piece orchestra, of which Mrs. Harry Felton is director.

The Rialto is a community type theatre seating 1,200, with three shows daily except Saturday, when continuous performance is given. Mr. Greeko established this policy when he built his first theatre, a small pioneer type house, followed by a second and larger theatre and now occupying a modern structure built some two years ago. The theatres have been in the same neighborhood. Many of the customers have attended regularly, year after year, with a second generation now attending—for fourteen years in the motion picture exhibitorship stamps one a pioneer.

While Mr. Greeko is now actively engaged in various other enterprises, his motion picture business was the commencement of his success. He is widely known as a real estate operator but confines his theatre activities to the one theatre.

Prologue Passes from Special Showing

The prologue, which previously flourished as a traditional adjunct to the special "road show" presentations of pictures at Broadway theatres, has practically vanished. Yet it was little more than a year ago that the unorthodox step of dispensing with the prologue was taken by Major Edward Bowes and his assistants, David Mendoza and Dr. William Axt, in the arrangements of musical settings and presentations.

This was in connection with the musical setting for "The Big Parade," the first special presentation to break away from the tradition that important screen productions should be introduced by a stage prologue.

It is Major Bowes' belief that pictures are complete artistic achievements in themselves and that music is the logical medium of interpreting the mood and character of the story. Accordingly, the entire artistic and dramatic emphasis for the presentation of "The Big Parade" was placed on the music score.

What is it worth to you?

To know that the stage requirements of your theatre will be thoroughly understood—that the same genius which has created practically all the outstanding developments in stage equipment and rigging during the last quarter of a century is applied to the problem of originating equipment for your individual stage.

And to know also that all equipment installed is guaranteed and will maintain its initial efficiency throughout the period of its use.

The value of such service cannot be measured or compared. Yet, it costs nothing. For in Peter Clark, Inc., installations you pay only for the equipment itself and the cost of installing it.

11 "BEAU GESTE" ROAD SHOWS USE THE LIBERTY SYNCROVERTOR

THERE is a striking significance in the fact that the projection equipment of all 11 road shows of "Beau Geste" as promoted by Paramount-Famous Players are augmented by individual installations of the Liberty Syncrovertor.

Under every legitimate test in the conversion of A. C. to D. C. the Liberty Syncrovertor has proved itself more efficient and economical than motor generator service. With the Syncrovertor, the actual rectification is done at the commutator—NOT within the motor. The transformer of the Syncrovertor is the machine's own emergency unit.

Revivals As Summer Box Office Attractions

the country, placed Douglas Fairbanks up with the leading stars of the return engagements of the summer season.

Owing to the popular demand for the successes of the past, the distributing companies very likely will prepare lists of available re-issues providing a wide range of material for the exhibitors making use of the revival performances this season.

Sources from which suggestions for the request and revival weeks may be had are many. The exhibitor's own efforts at preparing a list of the "best 20" or "best 10" of the past two or three years should be an excellent guide, for the selections made will be based upon his own experience with the pictures, and thus will represent the popular choice of his particular patronage. The Motion Picture News Booking Guide, which gives the date of release in addition to titles, producer, star, etc., should prove helpful in refreshing the memory of those who set out to make up "best" lists.

For the general run of theatres the revival is, of course, an expedient. As such it has advantages, in the novelty aspect which can be worked up around it by means of judicious advertising and stunts. Since the system of releasing during the summer the "weak sisters" produced the previous season at the studios has been thrown into the discard, and the release schedules for July and August are now as well balanced as those of any other month of the year, there is every inducement for those theatres which can do so to continue along with "business as usual" policies.

However, where circumstances which the showman cannot control—such as over-powering competition from counter attractions, heat which cannot be effectively combated because of the lack of an elaborate cooling system, and a general lowering of interest in his theatre on the part of a public so constituted and situated that out-of-order amusements take complete command of their enthusiasm—the revival week holds possibilities which can be turned to advantage.

ARCTIC NU-AIR SYSTEM

By Breaking Box Office Records Shatters Its Own Sales Records

2000

So far this year more Arctic Nu-Air Systems have been installed in the theatres of America than any other system.

Sales for the first four months are 78% ahead of the same period last year. Every month shows a big gain—April is 88% ahead of March.

In 1926 four times as many Arctic Nu-Airs were installed as in the previous year. At the close of 1927 there will likely be over 3,000 Systems in use.

This overwhelming preference is simply the result of past performance records—records of box-office gains. Arctic Nu-Air Completely Controlled Ventilation has won this enviable position of leadership by proving itself to be the most efficient and economical means of summer-cooling and winter-air-conditioning.

In the light of such evidence can you afford to further postpone the ARCTIC NU-AIRIZING of your theatre? Summer is right around the corner—every hot day burns holes in your bankroll.

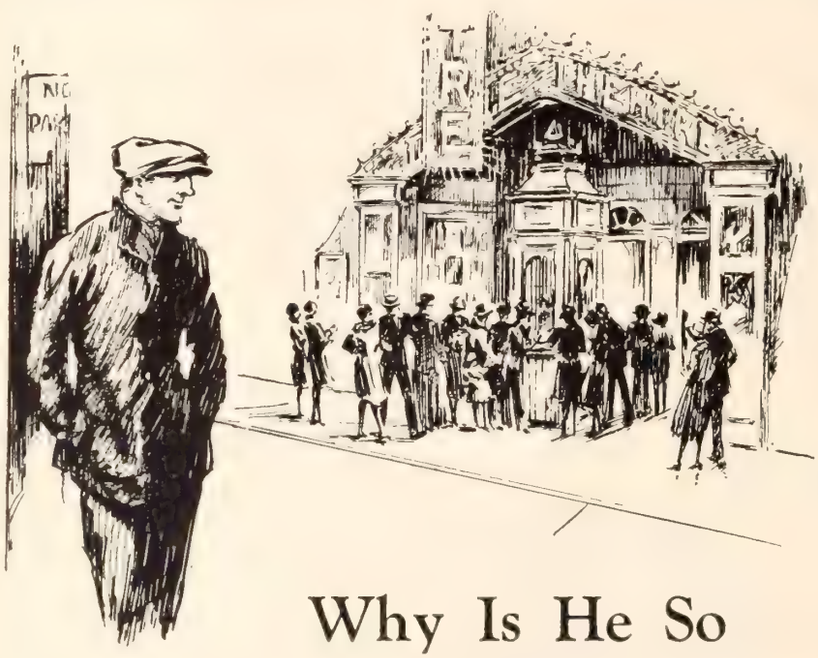
imagination, but clumsy in design. Most of the German spotlights are equipped with a three-legged stand, which is very heavy and requires at least two men to carry, at the same time occupying much floor space and offering an excellent opportunity to stumble over the projecting legs.

The Germans have a most ingenious and cleverly constructed cloud machine, which is so heavy that it requires practically a crane to move about. With it they can and do obtain some very realistic effects, but to get these effects they are forced to subdue all the other lighting to a point where the stage becomes quite dark. They use this apparatus a great deal, and much of the time the intensity, in the writer's mind, is far too low for the most effective stage picture. In practice, they are inclined to be too theoretical.

The writer believes that it must constantly be kept in mind that the stage is at best an artificial thing, and the attempt should not be made to imitate nature too closely. Where colors appear in nature, they should be heightened when reproduced on the stage.

As another illustration of this point, mention might be made of the production of the opera "Nerone" at LaScala Opera House in Milan. Here they have one of the most elaborate and complete installations of German equipment that there is. It is very well installed, and represents a considerable investment. The first act of "Nerone" takes place at night and, in the attempt to reproduce nature, a very low intensity of blue light is used on the cycloramic background. The cloud machine is very prominent, and the cloud effects produced are excellent, varying in direction, intensity, etc., but for at least one half hour of action the intensity at the front part of the stage is so low that the audience cannot see a single character except in a shadowy silhouette. True, at night one would not see people clearly, but when viewing a scene on the stage, one is in a different mental state and should see things which actually would not be seen out of doors. The writer believes the mental reaction in such a picture is much better if a low intensity of greenish-blue light simulating moonlight is allowed to fall on the scene.



German Spot Lights

The Germans, in designing lens and mirror systems, strive for extreme control of the light and produce very sharp "cut-offs" with their spot lamps. As a result, an actor must be very careful of just where he stands in the scene, otherwise a part of his body is in complete darkness. At one opera the writer witnessed a prima donna sing an entire aria in a decapitated state. A spot lamp was so directed as to strike where she was supposed to stand, but she chanced to lean forward a bit and her body from the neck down was quite well illuminated, but her head was outside of the light beam.

Too theoretical a treatment of stage lighting is obviously not desirable. A knowledge of what the equipment will do and how to use it is far to be preferred to the best made apparatus improperly used. All things considered, the writer noted the best lighting effects at the Opera in Vienna, where they have only very old-style equipment, but know how to use it and give careful consideration to its operation.

In America at the Metropolitan Opera the same condition exists and, in spite of what has been said in the press to the contrary, their lighting is on the average far, far ahead of anything on the other side of the water. Other American producers, such as Belasco first and foremost, use lighting in a most intelligent manner.

For a great deal of the historical data presented above, credit should be given to a very interesting publication issued by the Ward Leonard Electric Company, entitled "Theatre Lighting—Past and Pres-

And in the Specifications Include---

EVENHEETERS

WHEN you are planning the organ chamber for that new theatre, investigate this method of organ protection as well as the organ itself and include EVENHEETERS in your specifications.

Again when you are planning your equipment don't forget this protective device for the organ. Stipulate EVENHEETERS in those plans too, to be doubly sure they are purchased.

EVENHEETERS have been specified in the plans of most every large theatre. Architects realize their value. They realize that this protective measure will save maintenance costs in the future.

Protect your client against loss of organ use and save him from costly delays due to breakdowns caused by temperature changes and dampness by specifying EVENHEETERS in your plans. They are a wonderful investment in organ welfare.

TEAR-PROOF
SILVERSHEET
"It Just CAN'T Be Torn"

The Tear-Proof Silversheet is the only screen made which offers these four recognized points of superiority all combined in one screen, and selling at a price no higher than that of ordinary screens:

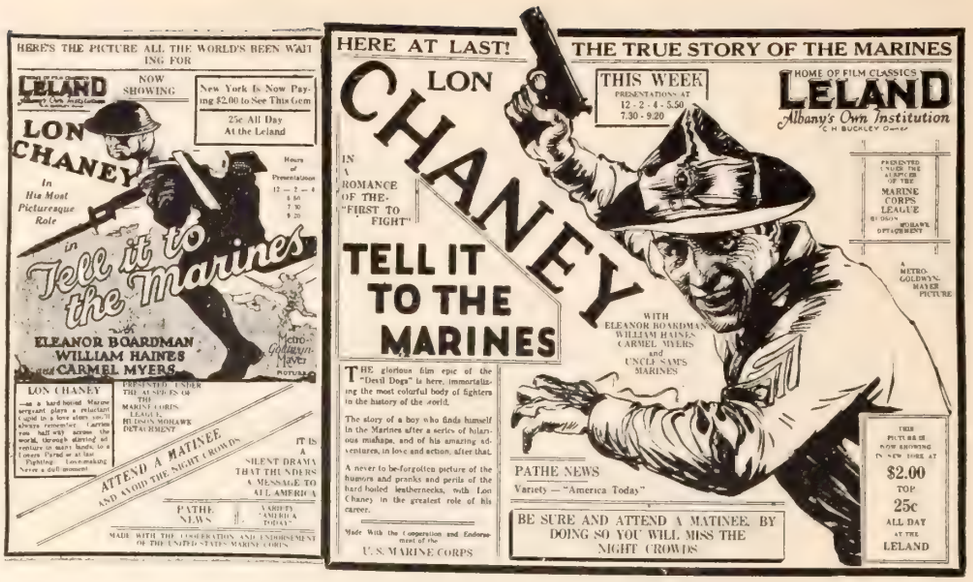
1. CANVAS BASE

The Tear-Proof Silversheet is built on a non-tearable, abuse-resisting, puncture-proof canvas base. This fabric is so tough it resists the damage that would ruin a screen built on a lighter base.

2. SPECIFICATION SURFACE

The Tear-Proof Silversheet is the only screen made with a specification-built surface on a canvas base. This is the same Knobel-built pebble surface that has brought Silversheet world-wide fame for its projection qualities.

3. GENUINE REDWOOD FRAME



The genuine Redwood Silversheet tension frame is fitted with our well known steel jacket tension device, which always keeps the screen taut and gives the frame unlimited life.

4. SATISFACTION GUARANTEED

We back each Tear-Proof Silversheet with a money-back, absolute guarantee of satisfaction in every respect. Why experiment when you KNOW you can't go wrong on a positively guaranteed Silversheet?

Two of the ads in the smashing newspaper campaign used at the Leland theatre, Albany, for "Tell It to the Marines"

The News Angle as Leading Feature of Newspaper Display Ads

THAT a motion picture theatre's advertisements are fundamentally news items, carrying information of specific interest to the theatregoers and, therefore, to be treated from much the same standpoint that a newspaper handles its feature news stories, is the working principle which Alex Sayles, manager of the Leland Theatre, Albany, employs in mapping out his display announcements.

Sayles attracted considerable attention recently as the result of his newspaper campaign receiving editorial commendation from an Albany newspaper. The campaign cited as having special merit was for "Tell It to the Marines."

With regard to this campaign Sayles said: "If I have what I think is a big picture I believe in telling the public in a big way and through the newspapers. I do not believe in circus play in exploiting a picture, preferring to make the appeal in a more legitimate form of advertising, the newspapers and magazines being, of course, the effective mediums of this class.

"Leading up to the 'Tell It to the Marines' picture I ran several small teasers, driving home the fact that the picture was still running in New York at a high price of admission. Then on Sunday, the day before opening, I used a big smash, a display six columns wide and eleven inches deep, in which the news line 'Here at Last! The True Story of the Marines,' was used as a heading and which featured the name of the star in letters dominating the type of the display.

"This was followed, on Monday, with a smaller ad, carrying a different illustration—both the opening and the follow up ads were built around stock cuts selected from the press book—but still the layout gave prominence to the angle that New York was paying $2 top to see the picture.

"The result of this campaign was a good opening, and after the opening the rest was easy, the co-operation of former Marines helping a lot.

"In giving my views on this subject I am not talking from the standpoint of experience as an advertising man, but from the viewpoint of an old newspaperman.

"My attitude with regard to theatre displays is that I want people to know what I have at the theatre, with the added virtue, of course, of getting into the copy and the layout that something that will carry to the readers the 'come and see me' suggestion."

Stars' names and titles are always the highlights of the ads which Sayles prepares for his exploitation through the newspapers.

"In making up the layout I bring out as prominently as possible the name of the star and the title of the picture," he says. "I make them as flashy as possible, consistent with clarity, for a flash which attracts attention is one thing and a dazzling effect which leaves the reader with no clear-cut impression is another. But when a reader opens the paper I want him to be attracted by the headlines

"The opening is the objective of our advertising campaigns. For, if we get a good opener and the picture is worthy, we do not have to worry about the remainder of the week. If the picture is not up to the mark as a week stand attraction, of course business tapers off toward the end of the week."

SOL FABRICS
BRIGHT AS THE SUN
WEARS FOR YEARS

Designed and Created by Lee Lash Studios, Mount Vernon, N. Y., using "Sol" Fabrics.

It Is the Performance That Counts

FROM the public's standpoint, theatres are designed to be pleasure houses. But unless the management selects materials with one eye on maintenance expense, profits may disappear in replacements.

Where Hexter decorative fabrics are used, replacement costs are negligible. Our famous imported "Sol" Fabric is especially popular for theatre use. The lustrous texture; the 40 guaranteed fast colors—brilliant and glowing, or soft pastel tints; the high standard of quality; and the modest cost—these give it a strong appeal for this arduous service.

We also have other fabrics to meet every decorative requirement of the motion picture theatre, for foyer, auditorium, proscenium, drops, loges, lounges, promenades and upholstery—Hexter Mohairs, Fast Color Silk Taffetas, Glazed Chintzes, French Marquisettes, and fast color Velvets.

Edison Lamp Works Engineers plan the lighting for many of the finest theatres in the country.

How much has lighting progress benefited You?

LIGHTING has gained a new significance. Its usefulness goes far beyond its original purposes,—so far beyond that many claim its chief purpose is to beautify and attract. It is a business asset whose value depends entirely on how correctly and scientifically it is used.

The kind of lighting that will attract patrons into your theatre—and bring them back again—is probably quite different from the lighting you have today.

Why not have an expert examine your lighting and make recommendations for improving it.

The services of our lighting engineers are yours for the asking. They are experts with wide experience. Their advice and recommendations are in no small way responsible for the success of many of the finest theatres in the country. Pathe-P.D.C. Hold Conventions

Separate Sessions Held Simultaneously, with Joint Meet on Tuesday; Conclaves in Chicago and Los Angeles

PATHE P.D.C. held the first of three joint sales conventions in the Grand Ballroom of the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York City, on Tuesday afternoon, May 24. This marked the climax of the individual conventions held simultaneously by the two companies which were opened on Monday, May 23, at the Pennsylvania, and continued in session for three days. The second of the joint sessions held in Chicago started May 27 with three days to run and the third is scheduled for Los Angeles starting June second and concluding June fourth.

The first joint session, in New York, was presided over by John C. Flinn, vice-president of P. D. C. The sales forces of the combined companies were addressed by J. J. Murdock, president of the affiliated companies, who sounded the keynote of the policies of the organization, Paul Fuller, president of Pathe, Elmer Pearson, vice-president and general manager, Phil Reisman, general sales manager, Harry Scott, general sales manager of short subjects, E. A. Eschmann, Pathe Feature sales manager, Ray Hall, editor of Pathe News, and others.

In his address Mr. Pearson declared "We are now in an ideal position, a position I have hoped for. No organization is as complete as this organization, with its affiliations." Mr. Reisman declared that a 100 per cent club will be established for the salesmen and that future branch and district managers will come from the club.

The individual Pathe sessions were started on Monday morning with Harry Scott presiding. Mr. Pearson, J. E. Storey, assistant general manager in charge of short subjects, S. Barret McCormick, editor of Pathe Review, Ray Hall, editor of Pathe News, W. A. V. Mack, Harry Lewis, art manager, Jack Level, editor of the Pathe Sun, and other executives of the Pathe organization addressed the salesmen during the Monday sessions. On Monday both Pathe and P. D. C. conventions attended a performance of Cecil B. De Mille's "King of Kings," at the Gaiety Theatre, New York.

Tuesday's morning sessions were devoted to sales talks by Harry Scott and John Humm, treasurer of Pathe. The afternoon meetings were given up to the combined convention and, on Tuesday evening, all those attending the convention were present at a banquet during which addresses were delivered by high executives of both companies.

The second of the joint sessions, that in Chicago, was addressed by Cecil B. De Mille, who outlined the feature-length productions which he will contribute to the Pathe-P.D.C. program for the new season. Home office executives of both companies, who journeyed from New York, were present at this meeting, at the close of which they will travel on to Los Angeles for the final sessions.

Those attending the New York sessions included: From Pathe—Paul Fuller, president; Bernhard Benson, vice-president; Elmer Pearson, vice-president and general manager; E. C. Lynch, chairman of board of directors; J. E. Storey, assistant general manager in charge of short subject production; John Humm, treasurer; Lewis Innerarity, secretary; Harry Scott, general sales manager; G. L. Chanier, general superintendent of laboratories; Mrs. Elizabeth Richey Dessez, director of educational department; Arthur Rousseau, export manager; E. A. Eschmann, feature sales manager; Charles Henschel, Eastern Division sales manager; Pat Campbell, Southern Division sales manager; Stanley Jacques, Central Division sales manager, W. A. V. Mack, director of exploitation and publicity; J. T. Richards, manager supply department; Ray Hall, editor Pathe News; S. Barret McCormick, editor Pathe Review; W. C. Smith, comptroller; Harry Lewis, art manager; L. E. Franconi, manager film editing department; Henri Brunet, head booker; Emmet Cashman, manager sales statistical department; Carl Goe, assistant to feature sales manager; Rutgers Neilson, exploitation and publicity department; Charles Stombaugh, special representative; John Level, editor Pathe Sun; Jack Kyle, assistant manager film editing department; E. Oswald Brooks, production manager of the Eastern serial unit; Arch Heath, director; Paul Fairfax Fuller, Eastern scenario editor; and Gilbert Gable, supervisor of convention details.

Jolson Will Appear in "The Jazz Singer"

WARNER BROS. announce that Al Jolson will make his debut on the screen in the title role of "The Jazz Singer."

During the filming of "The Jazz Singer," Jolson will be both seen and heard in a number of specially selected songs.

He will be the first artist in the world to be both seen and heard in a feature picture by the aid of the Vitaphone, which will be one of the incidental features of the production of "The Jazz Singer."

Jolson is now in Hollywood and starts making "The Jazz Singer" immediately.

Chas. F. Schwerin to Sell Kolograph Projector

Charles F. Schwerin, former home office representative for United Artists, and well-known throughout film distribution circles, announced this week that he had signed a five-year contract for world distributing rights to the Kolograph projector for use in the school and church field.

The projector, which has been on the market for ten years, is manufactured by the Kolagraph Company, Indianapolis, and is in extensive use by the State Boards of Visual Education of Indiana and Ohio, by the United States Government and most of the governments abroad. The factory is in Indianapolis.

He was formerly with Fox, and was manager for First National, World and Select in Pittsburgh for eight years.

Midwest Theatres Open New Kansas City House

The new Rockhill theatre, suburban house of Kansas City, opened its doors last Saturday. The house, which is operated by the Midwesth Theatres, Inc., is located at Forty-sixth and Troost avenue. 1,500 seats were installed by the American Seating Company.

Franklin Emphatically Denies Report of West Coast-F. & R.-Saxe Deal

A PUBLISHED report that West Coast Theatres, Inc., are negotiating for control of Finkelstein & Ruben and the Saxe Circuits is emphatically denied by Harold B. Franklin, President and General Manager of West Coast, in telegraphic advices to Motion Picture News from Los Angeles.

"There is absolutely no truth in the report," said Mr. Franklin. A denial has also been issued by M. L. Finkelstein in Minneapolis.

Modern Large Theatres' Incomes Stressed

House of 5,000 Seats Nets Bigger Receipts Than Small Houses With Same Aggregate Capacity

THE ratio of profit is larger in a theatre seating from 2,000 to 5,000 persons and the theatre building itself is a sounder investment than would be a score of small houses seating the same number of persons, states the Wall Street Journal, in a recent article stressing the fact that the opening of large motion picture houses will mean, in the long run, greatly increased income for the amusement companies as well as more stable values behind their balance sheets.

One fact supporting this declaration, states the Journal, is that, although weekly receipts during the summer decline as much as thirty to forty percent from the winter mark, examination shows the weekly gross of a number of the large Broadway houses maintains a high level of income during the hot season. Another angle, checked by the Journal, discloses that the first run houses in the big cities fill their seats on the average 18 times a week, whereas the attendance at theatres in a village of 1,500 population averages 350 weekly with shows only two nights a week.

Big City houses earn one to three million annually, netting about 30 per cent, states The Journal, citing the Roxy and Paramount theatres, New York City, as examples of the earning power of the great modern theatres. The Roxy, with a high week of $129,000, netted its owners nearly $80,000, deducting $50,000 overhead. The Paramount, with a gross averaging at a rate of $3,000,000 annually, is expected to yield Paramount a net of over $750,000 and, including an income of $500,000 for film rentals, approximately $1,250,000 a year.

Paramount theatre expenses are charged up as follows, according to the Journal: weekly rental to Paramount building $10,000; wholly owned by Paramount, $10,000 weekly film rental, most of which goes to the film department of the company and $20,000 operating expenses, such as wages, music, etc.

The Wall Street Journal quotes the following table, compiled by the Film Year Book, shows gross receipts and seating capacity in leading film theatres last year:

Theatre	Seats	Gross

Moore of Tacoma Sells His Various Washington Houses

H. T. Moore, head of the H. T. Moore Amusement Company of Tacoma, and one of the operators of the string of West Coast houses in that city, last week sold his interest in various houses in Aberdeen, Hoquiam, Centralia, Chehalis and Olympia, Washington, to Ed Dolan and his associates. The sale price was reported at $225,000 cash. Mr. Moore retains his interest in the Tacoma houses, and Mr. Dolan will add the recently acquired houses to his present chain.

Lakeside Theatre, Seattle, Again Robbed

For the second time within two months the Lakeside theatre, one of John Hamrick's suburban houses in Seattle, was the victim of thieves last week. The total loss this time was $100, more than $1,000 more being overlooked by the robbers after they blew the door from the safe.

Montreal Theatre Managers Assoc. Elects Officers

The annual meeting and election of officers of the Montreal Theatre Managers' Association, Inc., held at the club rooms, Sherbrooke Street West, Montreal, May 19, saw the election of George Rotsky, manager of the Palace theatre, as president in succession to George Nicholas, managing director of United Amusements, Limited, who had served three years. Mr. Rotsky had been vice-president for three years.

Joseph Cardinal, general manager of the Cardinal Amusement Company, operating six Montreal theatres, was elected vice-president. B. M. Garfield, manager of the Rialto theatre, was re-elected secretary-treasurer of the association by acclamation for the eighth year.

Directors for 1927 include: Harry S. Dahn, manager of the Capitol; James Adams, Loew's Theatre; George Nicholas, United Amusements, Ltd.; F. J. Shields, Dominion Park, and Frank H. Norman, proprietor of Stanley Hall. The association now has 42 members, representing all of the principal theatres in Montreal.

Large Chicago Delegation to Attend Columbus Meet

Early indications are that there will be a large Chicago delegation at the national convention of the M. P. T. O. of A. which will be held in Columbus, Ohio, June 7th, 8th and 9th. Among those who have signified their intention of going, are: President Jack Miller, Secretary Ludwig Siegel, Fred Gilford, Aaron Saperstein, Joe Pastor and others from the Exhibitors' Association of Chicago.

An effort to line up a sufficient number of Chicago and Illinois exhibitors to make the trip on a special, going to New York, Canada and Niagara Falls, after the convention, is being made, and theatre men are urged to get in touch with organization headquarters immediately.

Annual Paramount Convention Ends

ON Monday of this week the annual international conventions of Paramount officially came to a close with the return to the home office of executives following the concluding sessions at San Francisco. New announcements concerning the production, publicity, advertising, sales and exploitation campaigns on the forthcoming feature and short product will be made shortly as a result of formulation of plans, which was one of the features of the gathering.

Sidney R. Kent, general manager, and John D. Clark, manager of the Western division, returned to New York on Sunday, having foregone the trip from San Francisco to Los Angeles. A majority of the home office officials returned home on the Century on Monday, having spent a day at the studios. Among the Century group were Emil E. Shauer, John Cecil Graham, Charles E. McCarthy, Russell Holman, Edamuel Cohen, hJosep Seidelman, A. O. Dillenbeck, G. B. J. Frawley, Stanley Waite, M. H. Lewis, Ollie Taggardh, Carl York and Albert Deane.

M-G-M Salesmen Hear Plans

Field Force Apprised of Product and Policies for New Season During Convention in Los Angeles

SOME of the highlights of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer convention, held on Los Angeles May 20-24, were the addresses by Louis B. Mayer, Felix Feist and other executives of the company, the cabled offer to Charles Lindbergh proffering him the leading role in "War Bird's," M-G-M's forthcoming story of aerial warfare, and the entertainment of the visiting sales force.

Development of screen personalities is one of the important tasks confronting the picture industry, Louis B. Mayer told the sales force, adding that an intensive study in this direction is now under way in the M-G-M organization. Further discussing the problems of the producer he said, "producers have two great problems; one comes from the fact that stars, who a few years ago packed the theatres, are today stars in name only and no longer have a grip on their audiences; the second is the scarcity of material in books and plays—M-G-M has met this situation by developing with the aid of the public, its own stars; secondly by assembling a large staff of original writers for the screen."

The session opened with an introduction of the executives by Paul Burger of the New York home office, and a welcoming address by Felix Feist, general sales manager. Following this a review of audience preferences in pictures and the current film season was contributed by Mr. Burger; W. F. Rodgers, manager of the Eastern Division, E. M. Saunders, manager of the Western Division, T. J. Connors, manager of the Southern Division, and Howard Dietz, director of publicity and advertising. Arthur Loew, discussed the market for American film products across the Atlantic, while Arthur Cohen, Canadian manager, spoke on Canadian conditions.

Other speakers included Irving G. Thalberg, studio associate of Mr. Mayer; Harry Rapf, Hunt Stromberg, E. J. Mannix and Bernard Hyman, studio executives.

Felix Feist, general sales manager; and Howard Dietz, director of advertising, exploitation and publicity, spoke on various angles of the short subjects promised for release during the season of 1927-28 by the M-G-M organization. Dietz and Pete Smith, director of publicity at the studios, discussed the advertising and publicity plans for the season.

The welcome given the delegates started long before the convention train reached Los Angeles County. A real Western hold-up was staged in realistic fashion near San Bernardino, when the delegates were routed from bed in the early morning hours by bands of Indians and cowboys headed by Tim McCoy, who boarded the train and kept the delegates busy during the rest of the run to Los Angeles.

At the depot of the camera city public officials, film stars and studio executives joined in staging a welcome. Mayor Geo. E. Cryer delivered a speech welcoming the men, to which Felix F. Feist, M-G-M's general manager of sales and distribution, replied. Louis B. Mayer, vice-president in charge of production; Irving Thalberg, Harry Rapf, Hunt Stromberg, Eddie Mannix, Bernard Hyman, Erich Pommer and Paul Bern headed the studio delegation. After these ceremonies the delegates entered cars provided for them, and with three bands and six floats, representing all branches of the industry, paraded the downtown streets and out toward Culver City, where all were tendered an official welcome by Mayor Reeve Houck, who presented the city's keys to Mr. Feist.

The parade proceeded through a floral gate, past throngs throwing serpentines and confetti, all the way to the M-G-M studio. The Hal Roach studio was out in force, and two hundred girls in bathing suits, with noise-makers that vied with a big display of daytime fireworks.

The entire M-G-M personnel turned out to welcome the delegates within the studio gates. The visitors were then taken on a complete inspection tour of the great plant, and watched six production units filming the coming M-G-M product.

An elaborate luncheon was provided in a beautiful outdoor garden set, at which all the stars and directors were introduced to the visitors. The afternoon was sent in viewing "The Unknown," Lon Chaney's new film, several new short subjects and other Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures.

After a dinner at the Hotel Biltmore, which is convention headquarters, the men witnessed a special review of "Old Heidelberg" at the West Coast Boulevard Theatre. Great enthusiasm was displayed for this new Lubitsch film, which co-stors Ramon Novarro and Norma Shearer.

[illegible] in America, Europe and Canada were discussed at length [illegible] One hundred delegates, reresenting the film markets of America, Canada, Europe, South America and Australia, heard details of types of plays which are liked best by audiences and general reaction to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures.

Friday night the delegates at the convention were entertained at a boxing exhibition in the Hollywood Legion Stadium, and the entire convention visited Venice, the Southern California seaside resort. The convention closed May 24 with an old-fashioned Western barbecue, at which the stars and featured players on the M-G-M roster were hosts to the salesmen. A huge carnival was staged in connection with the barbecue.

Toronto Court Dismisses Appeal

THE appeal of the Canadian Performing Rights Society, Toronto, from the decision of Mr. Justice Rose at Toronto dismissing its action against Famous Players Canadian Corp., Limited, in which it sought a declaration and $10,000 damages that it has the exclusive right to allow the performance in Canada of a great number of musical works, was dismissed by the Second Divisional Court, Toronto, on May 20.

The plaintiffs complained that certain musical compositions had been played at the Regent and other theatres in Toronto without authority. The claim was dismissed on the ground that there had been no registration of the society's alleged rights in these works with the Canadian Government at Ottawa.

It is said that the society claims to control at least one million musical composition through its affiliation with the British Performing Rights Society. As the Canadian registration fee is $2 per composition, the apparent cost to the society would be enormous.

Warners Deny Company Has Sold Reisner Contract

Charles F. Reisner, director of "The Better 'Ole" and "The Missing Link," has not severed his connections with Warner Brothers. The company wants it emphatically understood that contrary to published reports Director Reisner is still under contract to Warner Brothers. Upon his completion of Buster Keaton's next comedy, for which he has been loaned, Director Reisner will return to the Warner studio to resume the direction of comedies. The Warner Brothers' statement also declares that their contract with the director is not for sale, has not been sold and will not be sold.

Union Square, Cleveland, O., Opened to Public

The Union Square theatre, Union Ave. and East 115th St., Cleveland, O., was officially opened to the public and to invited friends Saturday evening, May 21st. This is the newest house to be built by Variety Amusements, Inc., a recently formed $3,500,000 corporation in which the Silverman interests and the Fine & Kramer interests were united. It has 2,000 seats and claims to be the largest neighborhood house in the vicinity. V. E. Hudson is house manager.

"Mike" Marks Projects Big House at Oil City

An 800,000 theatre at Oil City, Pa., is projected by Mike Marks, owner of the Venango, who has formed the Vemark Theatre Corporation with G. J. and J. B. Beach, Oil City businessmen. Rapp and Rapp, Chicago theatre architects, are already working on the plans, which call for a seating capacity of approximately 2,500. The new house will be known as the Colonel Drake, in honor of the man who first recognized the wealth of the Oil City region.

Tentative Program of M. P. T. O. Convention

Details of Sessions Announced by Wood; Presence of Roxy, H. M. Warner, Reichenbach Confirmed

ANNOUNCEMENT of the tentative program for the eighth annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, to be held June 7-8-9 at Columbus, Ohio, was made this week by P. J. Wood, secretary of the convention committee, following his return to Columbus from New York City. While in the East Mr. Wood secured confirmation of the presence at the convention of S. A. (Roxy) Rothafel, Harry Reichenbach and H. M. Warner of Warner Bros., who will be among the speakers at the convention. He is now conferring with producers relative to the appearance at the convention of a number of motion picture stars.

Mr. Wood said that the convention would open at 8:30 on Tuesday morning, June 7th, with registration of delegates at the Neil House, Columbus, where association headquarters will be established.

There will be a meeting of the Administrative Committee on the opening morning and a meeting of the National Board of Directors that evening. On Tuesday, the second day of the convention, a business session will be started by an address from J. J. Harwood, of Cleveland, Chairman. State President W. M. James, of Columbus, Ohio, will welcome the exhibitors and Mayor James J. Thomas, of Columbus, will speak in behalf of the city. Hon. Eli Whitney Collins, Mayor of Jonesboro, Ark., and Past President of the National Organization, will give a response.

Formal opening of the business session will be made by National President Woodhull. Reports will be made by Joseph M. Seider, of the Board of Directors; National Treasurer Louis M. Sagal; Past President Sidney S. Cohen, Chairman of the Advisory Committee, and there will be a debate on the question, "Resolved that the synchronization of music with motion pictures will remain a potent factor in the future progress of the motion picture business."

On Wednesday, Business Manager M. J. O'Toole, of New York City, will report. Reports of Special Committees will follow and there will be a general discussion of vital exhibitor problems. Nomination of National Directors will take place and at this session "Roxy" and Harry Riechenbach will speak.

At the Convention Banquet, which will take place at the Neil House, Wednesday evening, Will Hays, or a representative, will speak; also Harry M. Warner of Warner Bros., Governor Vic Donahey of Ohio, and other notable lights.

The convention will close on Thursday with a session that will start at 11:30 A. M. with the election of National Directors. Fred J. McConnell, Editor of Exhibitors' Daily Review; Martin J. Quigley of Exhibitors' Herald, and others will speak on this program. This outline of the program, of course, does not take into consideration the Handicap Golf Tournament, which will be open to men in every phase of the industry, and which takes place on Monday, June 6th, at the Elks' Country Club, Columbus, and various other recreative features in which especially the ladies of the convention will be guests.

Tiffany Starts New Films

Script Writers Preparing Stories; "Grass Widows" and "Times Square" Scheduled for Production Soon

CONTINUITY writers and scenarists of the writing staff of Tiffany Productions, Inc., are now working on several scripts for the Tiffany schedule of 20 productions for the 1927-28 season. Through M. H. Hoffman, vice-president of Tiffany, it is learned that three scenarios engage the attention of the continuity writers, two of the scripts have been completed and one of the forthcoming pictures is now in work.

Two of Tiffany's specials for the new season will be "Wild Geese," Martha Ostenso's widely-read novel, and "Times Square," to be an extended run production, which will be made in all likelihood in the Third Dimension pictures process controlled by Tiffany. A. P. Younger has completed the script for the picturization of the Ostenso novel and the production department will probably begin filming it in the near future. The production department is now preparing the script and working schedule for "Times Square."

Sarah Y. Mason is finishing the scenario on "Grass Widows," and Douglas Bronston has completed the continuity on "Ladies of the Night Club." Violet Clark is working on the scenario for "The Girl from Gay Paree," and expects to have it in the hands of the production department within a short space of time.

Now in production at the company's studio in Hollywood is "The Tired Business Man," scheduled with "Wild Geese" for release during the month of June. The cast, now being assembled for principal roles, will be announced shortly.

Alexander Hague, Bombay Theatre Man, Due in N. Y.

Alexander Hague, of Bombay, India, left Hollywood, May 25, on the First National special convention train for New York, where he will stay at the Roosevelt Hotel for two weeks while looking over accessory and equipment markets. He sails for London on the Majestic. Hague controls the rights to First National and Pathe pictures for India.

The delegates to the national convention will be L. M. Sagal, Joseph Walsh, Dave Weinstock, Ollie Hamilton, Harry Cohen. Mr. Raffille is temporary secretary until the organization engages a paid permanent secretary.

First National Convention Ends

International Meeting Closes on Enthusiastic Note; Ten College Student Screen Aspirants Chosen

FIRST National's first international convention closed May 23 with a banquet at the Ambassador Hotel, Los Angeles, for the 300 delegates who attended the sessions held at the Burbank studios of the company. The convention consisted of talks on production and distribution by executives of both department and the entertainment features, arranged by John McCormick, West Coast production head, included a rodeo, staged by Ken Maynard; a barbecue presided over by Colleen Moore, and numerous other diversions.

Ned E. Depinet, general sales manager, presided at the opening session, at which the speakers were Will Hays, Richard A. Rowland, general and production manager; Harry T. Nolan, Denver franchise holder; Samuel Spring, secretary-treasurer; Irving Rossheim, treasurer of the Stanley Company; Harold Franklyn, of the West Coast Theatres; John Dillon, of the banking firm of Hayden, Stone & Co.; Charles Skouras, of St. Louis; Ned Marin, assistant production manager; H. A. Bandy, of the foreign department; Joseph Skirboll, manager of European exchanges; A. W. Smith, Jr., Eastern and Canadian sales manager; Stanley W. Hatch, Western sales manager; W. E. Callaway, Southern sales manager; Charles M. Steele, supervisor of exchanges, and the entire foreign delegation.

A feature of the first day's business session was the announcement of the winners of the Lieber Month plaque and cup, and of the prizes for the best sales records offered by Norma and Constance Talmadge by Inspiration Pictures and by Chas. R. Rogers.

The Norma Talmadge watch for the salesman making the best record in the Hollywood Appreciation Drive was won by George Almon, of the Atlantic branch; the Constance Talmadge watch, for the salesman making the next best record, went to T. J. Gibbons, of the Seattle branch; the Inspiration Pictures watch to Gerald Hoyt, of the St. John branch, who made the third best sales record. The Charles R. Rogers kit bags, awarded to the branch manager of the office making the best record, and to the fourth ranking salesman, were won by D. P. Rathbone, manager of the Memphis exchange, and by Salesman H. P. Eiford, of the Cincinnati branch.

The eighteen members of the K. O. Club were given seats of honor at the business sessions of the convention.

One of the most enjoyable of the entertainment features was the barbecue given by Colleen Moore, Sunday afternoon at the Gables, a beach resort on the West Coast. Mingling with the executives and sales force were all of First National's stars and leading players, producers, directors and the studio force. Aside from the barbecue the beach entertainment consisted of swimming, posing for still and movie pictures.

The barbecue was preceded by a sightseeing trip by busses through the hill districts around Los Angeles, including Beverly Hills. A stop for refreshments was made at the home of Carey Wilson, First National producer.

Saturday was production day at the convention. John McCormick, West Coast production manager, presided and introduced the producers, who outlined their pictures for the coming season. Among the speakers were Robert Lieber, Richard A. Rowland, M. C. Levee, Joseph M. Schenck, Milton Sills, Emil Jensen, Florence Strauss, Sam E. Rork, George Fitzmaurice, Al and Ray Rockett, Carey Wilson, E. M. Asher, Wid Gunning, Harry Donner, Guy Morgan, George Landy and Ned Marin.

Saturday night First National producers gave a dinner dance for the visiting delegation at the Breakfast Club with a gala entertainment.

The business sessions of the international sales convention ended with a session Monday morning. At noon ten college boys out of a total of 14,261 applicants from thirty-six of the country's leading colleges and universities won their chance for movie fame when they were chosen by the votes of 200 salesmen and 110 Los Angeles newspapermen and Hollywood magazine writers as the best ten film bets in American colleges.

The ten winners will be brought to the company's Burbank studios and given summer contracts as soon as the colleges close for the summer vacation. Those who make good in pictures will be given five-year contracts at salaries which will increase from year to year. Those who do not make good during the summer will have their return expenses paid by the company back to their colleges in time to resume their studies at the opening of the fall semester.

The ten winners are:

John Westwood, of Princeton University, from New York City; Richard Miles Glendenin, University of California, from Piedmont, Calif.; Leland S. Wilcox, University of Michigan, from Columbia City, Ind.; John Van Cleave Morris, Purdue University, from Shelbyville, Ind.; Stuart Clayton Knox, Yale, from Mystic, Conn.; Walter Graham Smoot, Northwestern University, from Evanston, Ill.; Thomas Kelsy Denton, Michigan University, from Saginew, Mich.; Edward E. Karges, Northwestern University, from Storm Lake, Ia.; John Howland Stambaugh, Chicago University, from Oak Park, Ill.; Daniel C. Cassidy, of the Georgia Institute of Technology, from Lagrange, Ga.

The newspaper representatives and the First National salesmen made their selections at the Ambassador Theatre, where the twenty best tests out of the 360 were run on the screen.

Monday night a big banquet for the sales force was given at the Ambassador Hotel. Richard A. Rowland, general and production manager, on Sunday night gave a party at an exclusive restaurant for the eighteen salesmen who, by the sales record, have won membership in First National's K. O. Club.

[illegible] with the 300 First National delegates on [illegible] pulled out of the Los Angeles station on its return trip East at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning. A stopover was made in Salt Lake City to hear the complete pipe organ recital at the Mormon Temple.

Northwest M. P. T. O. to Handle Gotham Product

Contracts were signed last week between W. A. Steffes, president of Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the Northwest and Budd Rogers, vice-president of Lumas Film Corporation, whereby the distribution for the Gotham Product for 1927-28 will be released by the M.P.T.O. of the Northwest.

For Gotham exhibitor and distributor representation in the States of Minnesota, North and South Dakota, is secured by the contract.

The terms and details of the contract were discussed in detail upon Mr. Steffes visit to New York last week and the contract was ratified by the members of the committee of the exhibitor's organization upon the return of their president to Minneapolis.

Austrian Archduke to Act Von Stroheim's Next

From Erich Von Stroheim's studio in Los Angeles an announcement has just been issued that the Archduke Leopold of Austria, grandnephew of his late Majesty Emperor Franz Josef I, and cousin of the late Emperor Charles, will play a featured role in Von Stroheim's next picture which will be filmed as soon as the cutting of his current Paramount production, "The Wedding March," is completed.

Archduke Leopold arrived in Los Angeles two weeks ago on a pelasure trip. He will be seen in one picture only to be made from an original story by Von Stroheim entitled "H. I. H.," a tale of one of the Hapsburgs after the war.

Premiere of Paramount's "Wings," San Antonio, Attended by Notables

MILITARY attaches of the United States and nearly every other country of the world viewed the Paramount roadshow production, "Wings," at the world premiere held at San Antonio, Texas, on May 19. The performance was in the form of a benefit, the funds of which will go toward the erection of a memorial to the famous second division, only one exhibition being given in the Southern city.

Included in the list of honor guests were: Governor Dan Moody of Texas; Secretary of War Davis; assistant secretaries, Hanford McNider and F. Trubee Davison; Brig. Gen. G. A. L. Dumont, military attache from France; Major Angel M. Zuleaga, military attache from Argentina; Brig. Gen. A. Villa and Commander T. G. Hetherington, military attache from England; Major W. H. S. Alston, also from England and Captain S. Isoada, Japan. From Washington, D. C., came also Brig. Gen. J. E. Fechet and a representative staff.

The motion picture delegation from the Paramount studio in Hollywood included William Wellman, director; Lucien Hubbard, supervisor; John Monk Saunders, author; and Carl Pierson, cutter.

Blue Law Cuts Flood Fund

Protest of Ministers at Highpoint, N. C., Stops Sunday Benefit; Wrangles Continue in Other Cities

THE Mississippi flood sufferers lost a considerable sum of money through the protest of ministers at Highpoint, N. C., against Sunday motion picture flood benefit performances in that city. The ministers drew up a letter addressed to the manager of the local picture house requesting that pictures not be shown on Sunday for the Mississippi benefit, as had been announced. No definite stand was taken by the management of the theatre except to say that the matter would be taken up with the Charlotte headquarters.

Meanwhile the question of closed or open theatres on Sunday continues to agitate many cities and towns through the country. The Kansas City, Kans., Ministerial Alliance reopened its fight against Sunday shows this week when a resolution was adopted pleading with the Wyandotte County attorney to enforce the Sunday labor law, which, it was alleged, was being violated. Unlike former years the resolution this week found unexpected opposition among ministers of the Alliance, the resolution being adopted only after a two-hour controversy, the vote being eight to five.

Stanley and Cecil, owners of the theatre at Bedford, Iowa, financed an election to decide whether the towns folk wanted the Sunday shows. The members of the city council acted as judges at this unofficial election, which resulted in a vote of 531 against the Snuday show and 308 for the support of the Blue Laws. Stanley and Cecil have accepted the decision and will not open their house for the Sunday show.

The reverse of this decision was made by the people of Seymour, Iowa, where C. R. Coons has the Lyric Theatre. Mr. Coons ran a Sunday show to test out whether the city ordinances would be put into effect. For two Sundays he has risked arrest but a friendly council has refused to arrest or fine him. So he will continue with the Sunday show.

The Cozy Theatre, at Toledo, Iowa, has been the storm center of another Sunday show controversy. The city council is favorable to the Sunday show and it is believed that a number of the business men are convinced that the theatre is of great importance to the prosperity of the town. But a number of the church workers have brought the matter to a head. And Mr. and Mrs. Regan, who have the Cozy, have decided to close the theatre temporarily until the matter is pleasantly settled.

J. W. English, proprietor of the only theatre in Homestead, Florida, was refused permission by the town council to operate on Sunday. It was reported that Mr. English announced that he would demand enforcement of an ancient blue statute, and in consequence drug stores in the city announced that they would close on Sunday, beginning with May 15.

"Drop Kick" Will Follow "Patent Leather Kid"

Richard Barthelmess' next production for First National release, to follow "The Patent Leather Kid," will be "The Drop Kick," according to an announcement from John McCormick, production chief at Burbank. The football story is taken from Katherine Brush's novel, "Glitter." Al Rockett, who is now managing the production of "The Patent Leather Kid," will produce the new Barthelmess vehicle. Adela Rogers St. John adapted the story and Winifred Dunn is now writing the continuity.

Half Million Theatre Bldg. Planned for Roanoke, Va.

A theatre and office building to measure 100 by 130 feet is being built by the Sun Investment Company, at Roanoke, Va., and the approximate cost of the structure will be $500,000.

Comerford to Build in Mauch Chunk, Pa.

Plans for the erection in Mauch Chunk, Pa., of a $100,000 theatre, by the Comerford Amusement Company, of Scranton, are announced following news that the company has purchased the Mauch Chunk Opera House property from the borough, through action of the town council. The price paid for the Opera House property is $12,000. The Comerford interests operate more than one hundred theatres, including many in the hard coal mining regions of Pennsylvania, and theatres in New York, New Jersey, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Massachusetts and Illinois, and are constantly increasing their holdings through the purchase or erection of theatres.

The company has prepared plans for the erection of the theatre in Mauch Chunk which will have a seating capacity of 1,022.

Twenty Europeans Working for Paramount Here

With the signing of Marietta Millner, young Viennese screen actress, to a long term Paramount contract, the number of Europeans working for that organization is brought up to an even twenty.

England is represented by Clive Brook and Philip Strange, players; Elinor Glyn, Frederick Lonsdale and P. G. Wodehouse, writers; France is next with Arlette Marchal and Jeanne Navelle, players; H. D. 'Abcadie D'Arrast, director; and Alfred Savoir, writer; Germany has two in Ernst Lubitsch and Emil Jannings; Sweden is represented by Einar Hanson, actor; and Mauritz Stiller, director; Lajos Biro and Ernest Vajda, writers, are from Hungary; Erich von Stroheim and Miss Millner are from Austria; Poli Negri is from Poland; Vera Veronina, from Russia; and Arnold Kent from Italy.

Ten New Films Going Into Work at Burbank

TEN new First National productions go into work at the Burbank studio between May 20 and May 30. Four or five will be placed into work in June.

The first of the late May productions on which photography was begun is a George Fitzmaurice, as yet untitled. Mary Astor and Lewis Stone have the leading roles. On May 23, three new pictures went into work. Colleen Moore's "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling," which has Jack Mulhall as leading man; Wid Gunning's production of "Hard-Boiled Haggerty," starring Milton Sills, and "Captain of the Strong," a Ken Maynard vehicle which Charles R. Rogers is producing.

On May 30 two more stellar pictures are scheduled to start. They are "The Drop Kick," featuring Richard Barthelmess and "The American Beauty," a Billie Dove vehicle. A Constance Talmadge picture, tentatively titled "Breakfast," was also started this week. Don Alvardo is Miss Talmadge's leading man.

First National's advertising and publicity department has tied-up with the publishers of the song, "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling."

In and Out of Town

So that he may get in touch with pictures now being produced at the West Coast studio of Warner Brothers, Morris Safier, in charge of the Warners extended run department, is in Hollywood for a conference with Jack L. Warner. While there he will look over all of the forthcoming extended runs now completed and will return in about one month, stopping at several Warner exchanges on his way back to the home office.

Ed. J. Smith, general sales manager of Tiffany Productions, Inc., left last week on an official visit to the various Tiffany exchanges for conferences with managers and salesmen about the sales policy on the Tiffany product for 1927-28. His itinerary includes Albany, Gloversville, Buffalo, Indianapolis, Minneapolis, St. Louis, Chicago and Milwaukee. He will stop at Columbus to be present at the Theatre Owners' convention while on his return trip.

Edward A. Golden, president of Golden Distributing Corporation of Boston and New Haven, was in New York last week for conferences with Jesse J. Goldburg, president of First Division Distributors, Inc.

Claude Ezell, Central sales manager for Warner Brothers, left New York this week on an extended sales tour which will take him as far West as Kansas City and as far South as New Orleans. This is Mr. Ezell's first sales trip since his assumption of the new duties designated him by Sam E. Morris, the Warner Brothers' general manager of distribution. He will not return to New York until the middle of June and will visit Charlotte, Atlanta, New Orleans, Dallas, Chicago, Kansas City and St. Louis.

Carl Weeks, who was recently chosen by Columbia's president, Joe Brandt, for the newly created post of personal contact man between the home office and exhibitors, left this week for an extended tour in the interests of his company. He will go through part of the South, the entire Middle West and Northwestern territory and will be gone from five to six weeks with his final destination, the Columbia studio, on the West Coast.

No Controversies Before Kans.-Mo. Meet

MANY conventions of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri have come and gone, but the ensuing convention, to be June 1 and 2 at the Hotel Kansan, Topeka, Kan., will be the most unusual, in one respect, at least, of any previous meeting ever held. For once—and for the first time—there is no problem of a controversial nature to be considered. There is no grievance with the exchanges or producers to be aired.

Therefore, the convention will have its greatest attraction in the election of officers and the perfecting of the organization to guard against emergencies of the future. Scores of exhibitors and members of the board of directors are prevailing upon R. R. Biechele to be a candidate for re-election as president, but Mr. Biechele has not decided definitely yet. Under his leadership the M.P.T.O.K.-M. has grown to be one of the strongest exhibitor bodies in the Middle West.

Two Regional Sessions of Fox Sales Forces

Grainger Announces Roxy Theatre for Chicago Loop; Remy Presides at Memphis Convention

JAMES R. GRAINGER, general sales manager for Fox Films, told 70 members of the Fox sales force, in convention in Chicago, that William Fox plans the erection of another Roxy theatre, to be constructed in the Loop section, Chicago. Branch managers, assistant managers, salesmen and bookers from exchanges throughout the Middle West attended the sessions, which were held at the New Stevens Hotel.

Mr. Grainger outlined the selling policy for the ensuing year, and called attention to the fact that Fox will release, in addition to its regular product, a series of 12 roadshow type productions which will be marketed one a month. The first two of this classification are "Carmen" and "What Price Glory."

F. T. (Pick) Gomersall, who last Monday assumed his duties as short subject sales manager, told the conventioneers of the short subject selling policy for the coming year, and spoke of the reception given the Movietonized Fox News reel showing Lindberg taking off on his Atlantic flight by the audiences at the Roxy Theatre, New York City.

Among those who were present at the Chicago regional convention, which had been arranged by District Manager Clyde W. Eckhardt, were the following: General Sales Manager J. R. Grainger, Short Subject Sales Manager F. T. Gomersall, District Managers Eckhardt and W. C. Backmeyer, of Cincinnati, and Branch Managers Fred Sliter, of Milwaukee; M. A. Levy, of Minneapolis; Harry Melcher, of Omaha; Ben Rengold, of Des Moines; H. Bradley Fish, of Kansas City; C. W. McKeon, of St. Louis; George Landis, of Indianapolis; Ira Cohen, of Cincinnati; Wood E. Scott, of Cleveland, and Lester Sharp, of Detroit, and salesmen and bookers.

While the Fox Films' Midwestern sales force was meeting in Chicago, the Southern Division, headed by District Manager Lou Remy, was in session at the Peabody Hotel at Memphis, Tenn. The Southerners led the Fox organization in all sales endeavors this season, and their meeting was in the nature of a celebration of their victory, for while George Allison's Atlantans led the organization on sales for 1926-27, Benny Dudenhofer's New Orleansans dictated on billings for the season. The sessions were in charge of Mr. Remy, who outlined the corporation's plans for 1927-28.

"What Price Glory" was shown to the managers, assistant managers, salesmen and bookers. A banquet on Monday to Lou Remy by his managers and another on Tuesday given by Remy to his entire Southern sales division featured the convention.

The following Southern Fox Film managers were present: George R. Allison, of Atlanta; Benny Benny Dudenhefer, of New Orleans; W. A. Ryan, of Oklahoma City; Claude McKean, of Memphis, and P. K. Johnston, of Dallas.

Vocafilm's Sound Device

David R. Hochreich Heads Concern Which Will Market Motion Pictures Synchronized With Words of Music

A new concern, Vocafilms Corporation of America, has been founded by David R. Hochreich and W. Harry Williams, of Pittsburgh, Pa., and financial associates. The firm will distribute Vocafilms, which are motion pictures said to be perfectly synchronized with certain musical selections, both of which are recorded at the same time and both carrying absolute synchronization from start to finish.

The officers of the corporation are David R. Hochreich, president; W. Harry Williams, of Pittsburgh, chairman of the board of directors; A. L. Siegal, secretary, and W. Harry Williams, Jr., vice-president and treasurer. The latter will be in New York most of the time in charge of financial matters.

The experimental work of the original inventor of Vocafilms lasted 20 years, it is said. All information concerning the device and its activities has been withheld until the proposition is fully developed technically. Experimentation is now ended and the company is now ready to make installations in theatres throughout the country.

Vocafilm has studios producing pictures. A long lease has been taken on the Longacre Theatre, New York City, commencing June 24.

Lloyd Decided Upon Story for His Next

HAROLD LLOYD has determined upon the story for his next production, a story possessing a New York background that will take him to the Eastern metropolis for at least four weeks during the height of the baseball and the Coney Island season. Both the Yankee Stadium and Coney Island have important settings in the new Lloyd story.

Ted Wilde, who directed "The Kid Brother," was selected this week by Lloyd to again handle the directorial reins. With John L. Murphy, production manager, once more in charge of the shooting, Lloyd's production staff is completed. John Grey heads the scenario staff and Lex Neale and Howard Emmett Rogers are assisting him.

Lloyd will bring his Westwood studio site into operation for the first time since he purchased the property nearly four years ago. Walter Lundin and his assistant, Henry N. Kohler, will again be on the cameras. Actual production will start June 1.

Four New Pictures Start at M-G-M Studio

Four new productions got under way in one week's time at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio recently. The quartet included "Terror," a new story for Lon Chaney, which is based on the Russian revolution and which Benjamin Christensen is directing; Tim McCoy's new starring production based on an original story by Peter B. Kyne and visualizing the Boxer uprising in China, work under direction of W. S. Van Dyke. "Spring Fever," William Haines' initial starring picture, which is based on the stage comedy of the same name by Vincent Lawrence, which Edward Sedgwick is directing. Monta Bella again put a Norma Shearer film into work when production was started on "After Midnight," a story by Bell and Lora Moon.

Turpin Short Feature from Pathe Week of June 5

Ben Turpin in "The Pride of Pikeville," a two-reel Mack Sennett production, heads the program of short features due from Pathe the week of June 5. The other releases of the week include "The Spy," chapter eight of "Melting Millions;" "A Dog's Day," one of the Æsop film fables, Pathe Review, Number 23, Topics of the Day, Number 23, and Issues 48 and 49 of the Pathe newsreel.

Alf Goulding directed the Turpin comedy under the supervision of J. A. Waldron. Thelma Hill, Andy Clyde and Ruth Taylor are Turpin's assisting players. Presented in the current issue of the Pathe Reviews are "The Fine Art of Dry Paint Etching;" "Peaks of the Priests;" and "Trapping Wild Game in Africa."

T. O. of Eastern Mo. and Southern Illinois Convene

The annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois will be held at the Elks Club, St. Louis, Mo., on Tuesday, May 24, Fred Wehrenberg, of St. Louis, president of the organization, has announced.

It is anticipated that approximately 125 exhibitors from St. Louis and elsewhere in the district served by the organization will attend sessions. A noon-day banquet will be a feature of the gathering.

In view of the wide-spread havoc wrought by the floods of the Mississippi Valley and the very serious situation that has dveloped in Southern Illinois because of the national coal strike it is very probable that both problems will come up for consideration.

Delegates to the national convention will also be named.

F. B. O. Raises Frankie Darro to Stardom

FRANKIE DARRO, eight years old, who for the past year has been identified with Tom Tyler in Western pictures, has risen to stardom in his own right in the last week.

Joseph P. Kennedy, President of F.B.O., saw the boy's work in "Judgment of the Hills," a picture just completed at the Company's Hollywood studios and was so impressed with it that, after conferences with William Le Baron and sales executives from New York, he decided to elevate the youngster to stellar ranks.

His first starring vehicle has been selected. It is "Little Mickey Grogan," an original story of American boyhood by Arthur Guy Empey. Leo Meehan has been chosen to direct the picture.

Taking over the Austin and Palace, Nacogdoches, and the Pines and the Palace, Lufkin, as the first move in the expansion program of Jefferson Amusement Co., a new chain has been inaugurated under the name of East Texas Theatres, with headquarters at Beaumont, Texas. Sol E. Gordon, of Beaumont, is president; J. C. Clemmons, vice-president and general manager; E. L. Kurth, of Lufkin, is chairman of the board.

Anton L. Kliegl Dies Suddenly in Germany

ANTON L. KLIEGL, President of Kliegl Bros. Universal Electric Stage Lighting Company, Inc., 321 West 50th Street, New York City, died suddenly in Bad Kissingen, Germany, on May 19th, while on a business trip. His death occurred far from the field of his life's activities and achievements, and by a strange coincidence, he passed from this life in the same place where he was born fifty-four years ago. He leaves a widow, Mrs. Leopoldine Kliegl; no children. His late residence was 2182 University Avenue, New York City. His body will be brought to this country.

Anton L. Kliegl became known the world over for his remarkable achievements in theatrical lighting, scenic effects, and the development of high intensity lights used in motion picture studios.

Europe M-G-M Gross Now 45 Percent of World's Total, States Arthur Loew

IN the past seven years the gross foreign film revenue for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures has increased from fifteen to forty-five per cent of the World's total, Arthur Loew, foreign manager for M-G-M, told the international sales convention of the organization at the Hotel Biltmore, Los Angeles. Mr. Loew declared that the coming decade would see an even more rapid rise and indicated that the day might not be far off when Europe's film income might surpass that of the United States.

Continental Europe, asserted Loew, although a much smaller area than the United States, has two hundred and twenty million people belonging to sixteen different nations, in a concentrated film market, asking for American productions. In conclusion he pointed out the possibilities of China and the Orient as a great screen market for the future.

Equity Plans Annexation of Thirty Philly Houses

Expansion Carried Out Immediately; Cohen Group Controls 25 Theatres in Penn and New Jersey

EQUITY THEATRES, headed by William Cohen, plans the annexation of thirty more theatres within the next few months to be added to the pool of twenty-five houses now controlled by the company. In addition sites for four more houses are now being negotiated.

Houses pooled in the new company include the 14 houses of the Franklin Amusement Co., at Reading, Pa., and Bridgeton, N. J.; the seven houses of Green and Altman and the three operated by Cohen.

The firm, which begins active operation June 1, has title to several of the theatres and has leases and option to purchase on several more. Real estate activities are in the hands of Cohen and of Ben Amsterdam who, with Louis Korson, operates the Franklin chain. Holdings of the pool are declared to represent $9,000,000.

Another circuit declared negotiating admittance to the pool is the Max Wax Theapiatre Co., which operates the Keystone, Olympos, Royal and Strattmore.

Vita Recording on Coast

Overcrowding at New York Plant Responsible, States Warners; Two Stages Completed and Two Under Way

OVERCROWDING of facilities at the New York Vitaphone recording studio in the Manhattan Opera House caused Warner Bros. to erect four stages, especially built for this work, at the Warner studios in Hollywood, it was announced this week. Two of these stages have already been finished and two are rapidly nearing completion of construction.

In order to eliminate all foreign noises a new lighting system has been installed and panchromatic film will be used in the filming of the Vitaphone attractions.

Bryan Foy will handle the megaphone for Vitaphone Presentations made on the West Coast. Foy has been well known in vaudeville circles, as a screen writer, and as a director. His knowledge of short feature production and his experience in the vaudeville field are responsible for his selection as Director of Vitaphone Presentations. Ed. Du Par is cameraman; Arthur Kay, musical director; Major Nathan Levinson, in charge of Western development of Vitaphone; Colonel Nugent H. Slaughter, division engineer; O. O. Ceccarini, equipment engineer, and Robert Head, recorder.

Regular production of Vitaphone Presentations will be handled in this studio, as well as the synchronization of Warner Productions. There will be other special productions with the use of Vitaphone as a vital part of production.

The stages are located at the rear of the Warner Bros.' West Coast Studios property at Sunset Boulevard and Bronson Avenue in Hollywood. The stages are 90 by 150 feet.

Roxy Violinist Promoted to Conductorship

When the first showing of "The Love Thrill" was staged at the Roxy Theatre recently no leader for the orchestra was available. Volunteers were asked for among the musicians and Edward Paul, who had hitherto been sitting inconspicuously in the last row of the first violin section of the orchestra, made so favorable an impression that he will now alternate regularly with Erno Rapee, Maxmilian Pilzer and Charles Previn during the musical accompaniment for the picture.

Key City Reports

Detroit

AFTER two weeks of less than ordinary business, the downtown houses made a nice comeback. Excellent weather, good attractions and heavy advertising helped the owners recuperate to a surprising extent.

The Adams theatre offered Karl Dane and George K. Arthur in "Rookies," a much discussed and heavily attended attraction. Movie fans flocked to the box office with intentions of viewing these performers, Dane being a heavy drawing card in this city. However, the S. R. O. signs were not in evidence during every performance.

"Captain Salvation," combined with an elaborate presentation and the customary added novelties, did nicely throughout the week at the Michigan.

An excellent stage show and "The Climbers," with Irene Rich went along fairly well although many patrons attending the Capitol were not entirely pleased with its story material.

Babe Ruth clouted a home run on the screen in "Babe Comes Home." When baseball enthusiasts heard of this they went taking their wives, friends, husbands and sweethearts, to see how it was done. Result—a heavy score for Ruth and the treasurer. Business picked up enormously.

At the Madison, "Taxi, Taxi" maintained a good record with the help of Vitaphone and the Dempsey-Tunney fight films during its second and final week.

"Monte Cristo," at the Broadway-Strand, made a sweeping start and is to be held over for at least another week.

Tampa

"Good" business seems to be getting to be a habit with the down-town first run houses. Following a run of "fair" and "average" business the last three weeks have all chalked up "good."

The Tampa had "Rookies" as the feature attraction the first half, and it pulled good, with "Lovers" keeping the crowds coming the last half.

The Strand had "Naughty Nanette," "The Clinging Vine" and "Frisco Sally Levy." All three pictures seemed to please. Over at the Franklin, Tom Mix, who is one of the favorites, pulled excellent business in "Outlaws of Red River," with "Tarzan and the Golden Lion" and "Grinning Guns" doing nicely. Tampa managers are keeping their houses cool and comfortable and they are "selling the idea" to Tampans. This combined with excellent programs, is pulling the business.

Minneapolis

THE weather has been wretched in Minneapolis during the past week and the picture business has not been anything extraordinary, but as far as that goes, there have not been any pictures of the boxoffice smash variety to draw the crowds.

Billie Dove in "The Tender Hour" did a fair business at the State, where Al Jolson's Vitaphone debut served as an added attraction. Lon Chaney in "Mr. Wu" was only for a week at the Strand, a small house which holds the big ones two weeks or more. The Garrick has closed for the summer, and much of its business should have been directed to the Strand and State. pantages featured Olive Borden in "The Monkey Talks" over its regular vaudeville program and did a good business, while the Hennepin-Orpheum showed "Wandering Girls" as its picture feature. At the neighborhood houses, business ranged from fair to good. Some of the attractions were Buster Keaton in "The General" at the Loring, Milton Sills in "The Sea Tiger" at the Lagoon, Douglas McLean in "Let It Rain" at the Rialto, and Jack Holt in "The Mysterious Rider" at the Lyndale. The Aster, a loop house, attracted good crowds with Tom Mix in "The Great Train Robbery." The movies ran into some tough competition when "Trelawney of the Wells," with John Drew and its famous all-star cast, dropped into town for three performances at the Metropolitan.

Seattle

DESPITE the fact that there were really no outstanding productions on local screens last week, business generally showed a noticeable improvement over the previous week's receipts.

One of the best of the box office films was "Sorrows of Satan" which opened its first week at the United Artists Theatre to very good business.

Another good drawing card was "The Yankee Clipper" at Manager Robert W. Bender's Columbia Theatre. This film did a very pleasing business all week, but was not strong enough to last more than the seven days.

At the Fifth Avenue Theatre, a slight improvement was noticeable. "Special Delivery" was the film attraction, and although it was not as well liked as "Kid Boots," it at least was better than the last two pictures at this house. Armanda Chirot, Mexican vocalist, was just about the whole stage show.

"The Better 'Ole" and the second series of Vitaphone subjects at John Hamrick's Blue Mouse Theatre continued to line the patrons out every night for the third week, and the film goes into a fourth week now. At Hamrick's Egyptian Theatre in the University district, Manager Carl Mahne packed the patrons in at every performance with "The Kid Brother" as a second run neighborhood attraction. This film also stood them out.

Manager Al Raleigh at the Coliseum offered his patrons "The Sea Tiger" but it was a little rough for this house and lasted only three days. The half-week engagement brought the Coliseum back to its regular mid-week change date, and "Rookies" opened to big business.

"Madame Wants No Children" played the Embassy and "Moulders of Men" was the Winter Garden attraction. Both played to good houses.

Des Moines

AN unusually heavy bill was played at the Des Moines Theatre where "Alaskan Adventures" was played up and shown with "Senorita." The week's business was fair.

"The Winning of Barbara Worth" played at the Capitol with a fine Publix Show and an extra stage stunt and the orchestra playing an extra attractive number in "The Doll Dance." It went very well. "The Sky Rider" playing at the Strand in "See You In Jail," a double feature program unusual for Des Moines theatres and especially for the Strand reported good business with the flyer picture undoubtedly a drawing card. "All Aboard" finished the week with fair business.

Central Pennsylvania

Not even such counter attractions as a big out-of-doors carnival, could cut down the attendance at "Rookies," at Loew's Regent, Harrisburgh, the week of May 16. It was declared by many who saw it to be the best comedy film play of many weeks.

Tom Mix, always popular in Harrisburg, made a big hit at the Colonial in "The Broncho Twister." Attendance was very satisfactory in spite of the bad weather and the counter attractions.

"The Telephone Girl," with Madge Bellamy, was a popular feature at the Victoria and drew paying crowds, while the photoplay at the State, "Madame Wants No Children," showed some pulling power.

Another Tom Mix film, "The Last Trail," was offered successfully at the New Rialto, a neighborhood house that operates at popular prices, while the Royal's feature offering was "The Runaway Express," starring Jack Daugherty. This proved popular in Harrisburgh which has a big population of railroaders and their families.

Salt Lake City

SALT LAKE has experienced an unusually extreme variation in weather during the past week. Picture business has remained good, according to announcements of the downtown managers.

Adolphe Menjou in "Evening Clothes" went over very good at the Paramount Empress, and "Ressurection" was a big drawing card at the Victory. The double feature bill at the American, consisting of Milton Sills in "The Silent Lover" and Norman Kerry in "The Claw," drew large crowds. A very satisfactory business was enjoyed at the Gem during the showing of "The Little Adventuress," starring Vera Reynolds with the second showing of "My Official Wife" having proved to be quite an attraction at the Kinema. In addition to the comedy screen offering "Love Makes 'Em Wild," which was enthusiastically received, the personal appearance of Robert McKim, one of the screen's most notorious villains, in connection with the regular vaudeville offerings, drew capacity business all week.

The Orpheum also offered an added attraction in the form of a dance revue, and this revue in addition to the vaudeville program and the first run picture "Naughty Nannette" packed the theatre. Second run and suburban houses as a whole have experienced a fairly good week..

Kansas City

AN exceptionally strong lineup of pictures withstood the opposition of amusement parks, which opened this week, in Kansas City. The weather, however, was much more favorable to theatres than parks.

At the Newman Bebe Daniels in "Senorita" played to good sized audiences all week, attendance being much better than the previous week. At the Royal, "Women Love Diamonds," as could be expected, did a big matinee business, attracting women fans.

"Broadway Nights," with Lois Wilson and Sam Hardy, drew better than an average week's attendance at the Mainstreet theatre. At the Pantages the screen version of "The Cradle Snatchers" proved a good drawing card.

"Finger Prints" at the Globe did about an average week's business.

Milwaukee

UNUSUALLY cold weather combined with plenty of rain made this a rather slow week for the picture houses in the down town section. On Monday, however, the managers were more than glad to see business slack, for that meant that crowds were gathering at the Auditorium to attend the Flood Relief Benefit sponsored by the theatres and exchanges of the city. Exact returns have not yet been received but it is estimated that over 100,000 tickets were sold. This of course was reflected in the down town theatre business.

The Alhambra offering of "The Love of Sunya" won popular approval and drew very fair houses during the entire week. "Three Hours" at the Wisconsin was also very popular and did very good business. "The Notorious Lady" at the Strand and the "Auctioneer" at the Merrill were very well received. "Pleasure before Business" was a popular attraction at the Garden.

The Tower celebrated its first birthday this week with gala celebration. An exceptionally good program was offered, and the theatre's festivities were very well exploited, all of which resulted in great numbers of participants in the celebration. "The Sea Tiger" was the picture around which the program was built. Other neighborhood houses also [illegible] good. The Colonial with "Matinee Ladies" was always well attended. "An Affair of the Follies" drew crowds to both the Savoy and the Milwaukee Theatres. "Night of Love" was well received at the Venetian.

Tax Revision Depends on Industrial Condition

RECOMMENDATIONS for tax revision will be based on conditions existing when Congress convenes next December, and no predictions can be made at this time as to the extent of the cuts, visitors to the White House have been told in response to inquiries as to the views of the President.

It has been indicated by the President that the recommendations in his next annual message, based upon the situation as viewed by the head of the Treasury Department, will depend largely upon the extent of the surplus, its sources, the conditions prevailing at the time, and the amount of money which will be needed for reconstruction and protective work along the Mississippi River as a result of the present flood. A large part of the Government's income is now derived from the corporation tax, and is subject to fluctuation with the ebb and flow of business, and the industrial situation next winter, therefore, will be an important factor in considering tax reduction.

There is every reason to believe, however that further elimination of the remaining war taxes will be included in the legislation, even though it may be necessary to defer reductions in other ways.

Chicago

THAT the seasonable slump in business had set in much earlier than usual was indicated by reports of poor business coming in from all parts of the city of Chicago and its suburbs, even strong pictures failing to bring business up to normal in a great majority of theatres. In the loop, which as a rule feels depression less than neighborhood houses, business was hardly up to the average.

The Chicago was slightly under average with "The Tender Hour" as its screen feature and an excellent H. Leopold Spitalny orchestral production, in addition to the Publix offering "Way Down South." At the Roosevelt "Babe Comes Home" was in its last week and business was only fair. The same was true of McVickers where "McFadden's Flats" was the feature. The Oriental had "Cabaret" and Paul Ash and his gang in "Night Club Nifties;" business came near being up to the average.

Oon the north side the Uptown with "Children of Divorce" and an unusually elaborate stage show, played to fair business. At the Granada "Vanity" Charles Kaley, the singing director, and Vitaphone, seemed to meet the public's fancy and business was good. The same was true at the Sheridan where Verne Buck and his orchestra is making a hit. "Senorita" was the screen offering. The Senate with "Children of Divorce" and the Harding with "Casey At the Bat" reported only fair business, although the Harding seemed to have the best of it.

On the south side, the Capitol with the strong feature, "The Better 'Ole," Del and his merrymakers, and Vitaphone, played to average business, and the Tivoli, with the popular Bennie Kreuger and "Senorita" did fair business.

Baltimore

A VERY big surprise was handed the Baltimore film fraternity during the week beginning Monday, May 16, when the Russian picture Potemkin was shown at the Embassy Theatre with Charlie Chaplin in "Carmen" and the Eastman color film on the same program and did a $9,000 business during the week at a 50 cent top for all seats. They took in as much in one day as that house has been doing during a whole week. The theatre was rented out for the showing of the film. The advance advertising and publicity was handled in a nice and efficient manner by Irvin Shapiro who was on the job night and day while in Baltimore.

But the week, generally speaking, was an off one for the majority of the movie houses. Another surprise came when the Babe Ruth picture, "Babe Comes Home," was shown at the Rivoli and it might have been expected that it would excellently as Baltimore is the Bambino's home town. Quite the opposite was the case for it did only poor business.

"The Wreck" at Keith's Hippodrome did [illegible] at night but the matinees fell off while "Hey! Hey! Cowboy!" at the Garden, only did fairly. At both those houses five acts of vaudeville are given with the picture. "Bitter Apples," with Vitaphone attractions, did pretty good at Warner's Metropolitan and the best business was done Saturday night.

John Barrymore in "The Beloved Rogue," pulled good houses at Loew's Valencia during the second week there and "Evening Clothes," with Adolphe Menjou, pulled good patronage in Loew's Century. "White Gold" only did fair business at the New Theatre.

Los Angeles

A NEW theatre was added to the list of long run houses in Los Angeles this week when Sid Grauman opened his new Chinese Theatre with "The King of Kings." The management reports heavy advance sales at $1.50 top for evenings and $1.00 top plus tax for matinees.

"Seventh Heaven" at the Carthay Circle looks promising for a long run. "Mr. Wu" closes this week at the Forum after a run of six successful weeks.

"Tillie the Toiler" at Loew's State preceded by a heavy advertising campaign is doing good business.

"Resurrection" in its fifth week at the Criterion is chalking up fine business. "Rookies" at the Million Dollar is playing to normal receipts. Raymond Griffith in "Wedding Bells" at the Metropolitan is reported to be doing nicely.

18 Features Season Announcement of A. C. A.

AMERICAN Cinema Association's product for the new season, just announced, will comprise eighteen feature productions and another series of Edgar A. Guest Poetic Jewel releases. Ten of the new pictures will be adaptations of novels serialized in several of the country's leading magazines. Some of them will be produced by Hartford Productions, Inc., and the remainder by selected producing units on the West Coast.

The titles and authors follow:

Tabor, "Love, Devil and Divorce" by Edward Lester; "Be Yourself" adapted from "A Rookie's Diary" by Lee Leonard; "Four Bells" by Ralph D. Paine; "Flapper Ann" by Corra Harris; "Forbidden Lips" from Clara L. Burnja's "The Lavarohs"; "The Wall Street Girl" by Frederick Orin Bartlett; "The Passion of Hate" by Harwood A. Stock; "Putter Perkins" by Kenneth Brown; "The Death Dodger" by Joseph K. Morton; "First Down" from Ralph D. Paine's "First Down Kentucky"; "The Pirate of Pittsburgh," H. E. O. Whitman's story; "Flowers of Evil" by Ben S. Bernard; "The Marriage Code" by Mina M. Marshall; "Peg of the Alley" by Frederick Orin Bartlett; "Human Cargo" by David W. Glenn and "The Inner Flame" from Clara L. Burnham's novel of that name.

San Francisco

THE first run theatres in San Francisco and those in the residential section did well during the past week with but a couple of exceptions. Even though the week was warm, one day being the year's warmest to date, the average receipts for the week were good.

"The Night of Love," attracted many to the St. Francis Theatre where it was shown for a third week. Many sent their friends. "Knockout Reilly" attracted a fair number to the Granada. "Long Pants," attracted at Loew's Warfield. The people desire comedies in this city. The presentation act, "The Aerial Ballet," was popular, also.

"Mother," shown at the California Theatre attracted a few, but not what was expected. "Love Makes 'Em Wild" at the Pantages Theatre, together with the vaudeville acts attracted thousands. At the Golden Gate Theatre, "The Masked Woman, proved popular on the screen which with the acts also caused many to attend and send their friends.

"The Haunted Range" and "Redheads Preferred," both shown on the screen at the Union Square together with a few acts proved popular. "Hey! Hey! Cowboy" and "Oh! Baby" both shown on the screen at the Cameo Theatre brought good crowds who desired to see far western and comic pictures.

"Hard Boiled" shown on the screen, together with the musical comedy "War in China" at the Wigwam Theatre, a residential house, attracted a good many persons. "The Red Mill" as shown at the Coliseum Theatre, also a large residential house did well.

Boston

ANOTHER week of excellent business has been done by the Boston theatres following a brief period of somewhat spotty business and in the face of daylight saving.

From talk in the theatre district, it would not be surprising to find one or two of the larger picture theatres which have heretofore been playing double feature films, abandon the double feature part and replace it with one feature and additional news reels and short subjects. Keen competition in the news reels, with the prospects of ever greater competition within a short period, has caused some managers to consider using two and even three different news reels. Methods of selling may also bring such a plan about.

The Metropolitan, Loew's State, Loew's Orpheum, the Washington Street Olympia and the Modern and Beacon Theatres have done a big week's business and anticipate continuing another week.

"The Whirlwind of Youth" is the feature at the Metropolitan and it has been favorably received. Gene Rodemich and his jazz band continues for another week.

Lon Chaney in Mr. Wu is at Loew's State with the theatre cashing in on the publicity of the missing French flying ace, Capt. Nungesser, in "The Sky Raider." There are two stage numbers, the Chinese Syncopators and The Rollickers. Loew's Orpheum features "Slide, Kelley, Slide" with a showing of "The Sky Raider" and the double orchestras of Charles Hector and Karle Rhodes.

"Monte Christo is running at the Orpheum and the Fenway Theatres to good box office receipts. The twin houses, Modern and Beacon, are playing "The Yankee Clipper" to unusually large audiences, sea pictures having a strong appeal to the people of Boston and vicinity at all times. "White Flannels" is the other film on their double feature bill.

"The Telephone Girl" at the Scollay Square, "Ritzy" at the Keith-Albee Boston and a double bill, "Getting Gertie's Garter" and "What Every Girl Should Know" at the University are well patronized.

Within the next two weeks two of the legitimate houses close for the summer which will turn additional patronage into the picture theatres.

Philadelphia

CONTINUED rain and cool weather caused Philadelphians to turn from outdoor amusements to the motion picture theatres for entertainment this week, and almost all houses report good business.

At the Stanley Harry Langdon in "Long Pants" played to almost capacity houses with a program that was augmented by Cliff Edwards, better known as "Ukulele Ike," and Kathleen O'Hanlon, Theodore Zambuni and Amati Grassi, famous Spanish dancer. One of the Will Rogers travelogues made a big hit.

"Cabaret" with Gilda Gray, played to good business all week at the Stanton.

The Fox, with "Is Zat So?" the Brahms Quartette, Arnaut Brothers and a hold over of the Herman Timberg Company, had a most satisfactory six days, with the evenings especially big.

The Aldine opened to capacity business with Syd Chaplin in "The Better 'Ole," and a new Vitaphone unit.

The Arcadia did just average business with "Whirlwind of Youth." The Karlton reported only a fair week with "Women Love Diamonds."

John Gilbert and Renee Adoree in "The Show," which had its first run at the Stanley more than a month ago, held up well for the week at the Palace.

"Slide, Kelly, Slide," originally put into the Stanton, repeated to splendid business at the Victoria.

The Globe introduced "What Every Girl Should Know," for a week and played to very satisfactory business.

St. Louis

GENERALLY speaking business in the St. Louis theatres was but fair to middling the week ending on May 20, but considering the condition of the weather and the season of the year perhaps the management of the several houses had not much reason to sing the "blues."

In the neighborhood houses with very few exceptions business was bad. It took much hard work to put up some of the bigger pictures booked for prominent outlying houses of North and South St. Louis. In the smaller houses attendance was far from what it should have been, even figuring weather conditions.

The Grand Central's screen offering was "The Notorious Lady." Across the street the Missouri offered "Monte Cristo" with John Gilbert, Renee Adoree and Estelle Taylor. Business was good everything considered.

The St. Louis had a fair week with "The Cradle Snatchers" as the screen attraction.

Down town the Ambassador and Loew's State got their share of the week's business for the first runs. The Ambassador had on its screen "The Tender Hour" with Billy Dove and Ben Lyon, while at the big Washington avenue house the offering was "The Love of Sunya" with Gloria Swanson.

Cleveland

THE unsettled weather predicted for the week settled down to rain for every day. This inclemency outdoors, combined with a list of especially good photoplays, to make the week's theatre business a considerable improvement over preceding weeks.

"The Better 'Ole" with Vitaphone heard for the first time at the Stillman, boosted business up. The program will be continued. "Special Delivery" at the Allen, coupled with "jazz week" specialties, did phenomenally well for this time of year.

The State played to full houses all week. "Broadway Nights" was the fairly well-liked photoplay. Hamid Bey, the Egyptian miracle man was the big attraction, however. Babe Ruth's picture "Babe Comes Home," playing at the Cameo, was a disappointment. The picture proved conclusively that as an actor Ruth is a first class baseball player. Business was slow except on Friday night when Ruth made a personal appearance at the theatre. "The Yankee Clipper" was a complete success at Keith's Palace. Well exploited with lobby sets, and sea "atmosphere," the picture did better than any picture has done at the Palace for the past few weeks. "Bitter Apples" just about got by at the Park.

"The Lily" with Belle Bennett was moderately successful at the Circle where Vitaphone trimmings continue to draw heavily. "Down the Stretch," did average summer business at Keith's East 105th St. where it played all week, but failed to attract much of any business at Reade's Hippodrome, where it played the first half of the week. "Marriage" the attraction at the Hippodrome the last half of the week, did better. Suburban houses reported that business looked up a bit last week, too.

Albany

FROM the standpoint of attendance, "Senorita," running for the week at the Mark Ritz in Albany, proved an exceptionally good drawing card for this house. The attendance was far above several of the previous weeks. At the Mark Ritz, business continued good throughout the week with Eddie Cantor's "Special Delivery" as the attraction, coupled with three Vitaphone selections. At the Leland, "Venus of Venice" ran to good business, although it had been previously advertised that "The Scarlet Letter" would be the attraction. It was decided to switch, however, the management feeling that "The Scarlet Letter" would prove rather heavy entertainment following the week of Lon Chaney in "Mr. Wu."

At the Clinton Square theatre, "Corporal Kate" did only fair. The Lincoln, in Troy, used a split week with "Bitter Apples" playing to good business on Sunday, but failing to excite much comment the other three days. The last three days given over to "See You in Jail" were nothing remarkable. "Resurrection" did not draw exceptionally well at the Troy, while "Footloose Widows" at the American, appeared to please.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Alaskan Adventures" — Pathe, Roxy Theatre, New York City

Morning Telegraph: "If it is necessary that you limit your motion picture budget this week, by all means select 'Alaskan Adventures' as the film which must be seen. . . Contains thrills of realism, incomparable beauty, offers for your delectation scenes and incidents never before captured by a camera. . . Remains unequaled for scenic beauty and for pinnacle of pictorial splendor it offers you grandeur of midnight sun. One picture you must not miss."

Post: "A fine picture is 'Alaskan Adventures,' giving a record of three years' exploitation in the Far North by Captain Jack Robertson and Art Young."

"Annie Laurie" — Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Embassy Theatre, New York City

Telegraph: Offers bold entertainment in as thrilling love tale as any ever filmed. If there is a bit of Scotch in your views, you'll find it difficult to suppress impulse to leap on your chair and indulge in wild battle yell when you see marching clans."

Post: "Affair of gorgeous moments and swashbuckling. Kerry one of our really fine romantic heroes. There is, too, as savage and splendid battle scene as has struck these movie-tired eyes."

Graphic: "Vehicle of exciting fights, gorgeous sets, cleverly contrived mob scenes, splendid direction and love theme. . . . Picture of directorial laurels. John Robertson did himself one better in this latest effort. Miss Gish at her best. Norman Kerry makes flesh-and-blood hero, realistic, broad-chested, one of 'wild men who have a way with women.'"

American: "Replete with color, romance and atmosphere of moors and glens. Lillian Gish and Kerry's portrayal excellent. Patricia Avery charming and honest little actress. Robertson one of screen's most capable megaphone wielders."

Herald - Tribune: "Norman Kerry stunning; Lillian Gish as charming as ever. Some of scenes magnificent—for instance, frequent encounter of rival clans and ensuing sword play."

Mirror: "Settings, stunning costumes, Oliver Marsh's photography and flow of decorative action join with Josephine Lovett's story under John Robertson's direction of Lillian Gish and her supporting cast to unreel in 'Annie Laurie' delightful, romantic and exciting film."

Daily News: "Viewers of photoplay were enthusiastic over blood and thunder of film, and daring of various members of cast. Some of spectacular sets were breath-taking."

Evening World: Full of lovely photographs and wild Scotch atmosphere. . . . From out of their mountain fastnesses come clans, armed to teeth, swaggering along in romantic plaid costumes, haughty and insolent."

Telegram: "I shouldn't wonder if a lot of Scotchmen themselves would buy tickets to see it. Lillian Gish charming, and account of traditional animosity between clans of Campbell and McDonald stirring. Has all inevitable glamour which attaches itself to feud tales."

"Mr. Wu" — Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Forum Theatre, Los Angeles

Examiner: "Puts Chaney's artistry as make-up specialist to supreme test. Not only convincing, he is positively uncanny. Renee Adoree has some scenes that for intensity of drama equal anything she has yet played. 'Mr. Wu' a play of emotions. Medley of suspense, sympathy and horror, all-compelling in interest. Breath taking in its intensity. Makes one's blood run cold. Young Forbes has personality and manner that bespeak real screen future."

News: "Name Lon Chaney like word 'sterling' on silver. A guarantee. This picture a fascinating one, elaborately staged, with magnificent costume effects. Rapid moving story. As stoical Mr. Wu, Chaney adds another laurel to wreath of successes."

Herald: "I doubt if Chaney has ever given a more perfect portrayal. All mystery, subtlety and all strange ethics of Chinese code interpreted with clearness by Chaney. I believe this is Chaney's finest acting part and one of most notable things he has ever done. Actor's capitol achievement but one of three reasons why this picture should not be missed. Adoree, unless I miss my guess, will soon be seen in a picture in which she, and she alone, is featured player. There is no doubt that she combines genius of acting with beauty and versatility."

Record: "Brings Chaney to screen in one of most superb characterizations he has ever achieved. Picture finely directed, fittingly cast and beautifully photographed. A picture that takes precedence over many of films released recently. I have never seen a more adept piece of work on the screen than Chaney as the dying Mandarin. Honors also must go to Renee Adoree. Great things have been predicted for this little French girl and in 'Mr. Wu' she fulfills the prophecies. In the acting, Miss Adoree comes up to the strong acid test."

"Mr. Wu" — Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Capitol Theatre, New York City

Graphic: "Chaney holds interest of audience throughout picture. Direction unusually good and sets of princely house in China beautiful. Renee Adoree gives delightful portrayal of dainty Chinese girl who was broken by ill wind of love from West. Entire cast gives good account of themselves."

Sun: "Chaney excellent as mandarin giving clever, dignified and touching performance. Renee Adoree gives thoroughly poetic and [illegible] producer could hope for. 'Mr. Wu' far better than average film."

[illegible] sprig has been added to the laurel wreaths of Lon Chaney and Renee Adoree. 'Mr. Wu' best release to hit Capitol since 'Flesh and the Devil.' Oriental restraint and yet very human emotions with which Miss Adoree and Mr. Chaney unfold story containing most terrific sacrifice to cruel laws of Chinese Gods are enough to arouse admiration of severest critic. Direction handled in most competent manner by William Nigh. Film, in our way of thinking, a real success, and two principals may take unto themselves large part of credit."

Telegraph: "Seldom has there been so beautiful picturization of so poignant tragedy. It lulls with dreamy splendor, only to stir with terror of expectancy. Strips heart, and throat too; it sweeps one along in surge of its irresistible tide to where East meets West—and one dies. As all world knows, Chaney's latest triumph is his portrayal of his Chinese Excellency, 'Mr. Wu,' skilled in ways of Occident, but Oriental in heart and soul. Renee Adoree is as fair an almond-eyed maid as she is a French mam'selle. She distinguishes herself in role of 'Xing Ping' who is unafraid of love and death. She reflects sunshine of sorrow of her part with all clear cut beauty of cameo. Ralph Forbes as handsome as ever. Louise Dres-[illegible] himself in art of Chinese make-up and has affected Eastern mannerism to degree that adds to convincing quality of performance. Picture boasts most artistic settings that have been seen in many a movie moon. Exquisite of design and intricate of workmanship, they quite unintentionally share honors with story and players. 'Mr. Wu' packed with beauty, intrigue and romance. Is indeed novel film fare."

News: "'Mr. Wu' displays gorgeous background, revealed as we've always pictured Chinese castles and lotus gardens in our fairest dreams, film boasts splendid cast and gentle, tender direction. Chaney's excellent interpretation of Oriental Mr. Wu is praiseworthy characterization. Renee Adoree lovely, indescribably adorable, in her daughter role. Ralph Forbes as handsome and as charming as he was in 'Beau Geste.' 'Mr. Wu' can be heartily recommended as exquisite production."

Eagle: "Hard to recall when Lon Chaney, justly designated man of thousand faces, has been more effective in screen role than he is in 'Mr. Wu.' Renee Adoree marks one of finest performances of career. Film splendidly directed

Studio Briefs

Stuart Holmes, screen heavy, who about six months ago played in two Pathe comedy releases of Hal Roach, is back again on the Roach lot where he is acting in a Western burlesque in the comedy producer's star series, directed by Louis Gasnier. In the cast also are Martha Sleeper, Theodore von Eltz, Gene Pallette and James Finlayson.

"The Gingham Girl," an F. B. O. production which featured Lois Wilson and which was directed by David Kirkland, has been completed and is already in the hands of the editors.

Having arrived at Los Angeles, Edward S. (Tex) O'Reilly, writer, soldier of fortune and world traveler, will confer with Paramount studio executives and Richard Dix on the adaptation of the latter's story, "Shanghai Bound." O'Reilly will collaborate on the adaptation of the story and will also act as technical advisor in its filming. "Shanghai Bound" will be the first of his stories to reach the screen.

"When Irish Eyes Are Smiling," a composition of Chauncey Olcott, the singing Irish actor, has been bought for screening purposes by First National. A scenario to fit the song will be prepared by one of the members of First National's staff of authors. The music for the song was written by the late Ernest R. Ball.

George Marion, Jr., son of George Marion, stage and screen actor, and title writer, has obtained the assignment of doing the titles on "Service for Ladies," Adolphe Menjou's next Paramount release. The story was filmed under the working title of "The Headwaiter." It is Marion's second consecutive Menjou picture, the first having been "Evening Clothes."

Casting on "The Jazz Singer" continues at the Warner Brothers' studio, where Director Alan Crosland is getting ready to put the screen version of the Broadway stage comedy into work. Otto Lederer, it is announced, has been given the leading comedy role portrayed on the stage by Sam Jaffe. "The Jazz Singer" will be one of the extended run productions from Warner Brothers during the coming season.

Another important part in "The Clown," one of Columbia's pictures for the new season which is now in production, has been given Dorothy Revier, whom Harry Cohn, Columbia vice-president in charge of production, signed for the leading feminine role. Miss Revier will enact a dual role—that of mother and daughter. William James Craft will direct "The Clown."

Richard A. Rowland, general and production manager for First National, has signed Philip Bartholomae, playwright, to write original scenarios for First National. Mr. Bartholomae left New York for the West Coast this week. For six years he was scenario editor for Pathe.

George Cooper, now portraying a comedy role in "The Trail of '98," has been signed to a long term contract by the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer company. Cooper has been in pictures for seventeen years and had featured roles in the two recent releases from M-G-M, "Tin Hats" and "Women Love Diamonds."

Martha Matto, character actress, has been signed for an important part in "Honor and the Woman," a Universal Jewel production and screen version of the stage play, "Counsel for the Defense," by Henry Irving Dodge. Miss Mattox recently finished a featured role in "The Cat and the Canary."

Richard Travers and Tom O'Brien have been added to the cast of John Gilbert's new vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, "Twelve Miles Out," now in work under the direction of Jack Conway. Joan Crawford is the heroine of this story of rum running.

"Cupid and the Clock," another of the O. Henry comedies, has been placed in production at the studio in Fox Hills. The cast includes Sally Phipps, who had a featured role in "Love Makes 'Em Wild," Nick Stuart, John Hilliard, George Stone, Fred Spencer and Ella McKenzie. Gene Forde is directing under the supervision of George Marshall.

Heinie Conklin, character comedies, has been signed for the forthcoming Universal Laura La Plante picture, "Silk Stockings." The story is an adaptation of the stage play, "A Pair of Silk Stockings" by Cyril Harcourt. Wesley Ruggles is handling the direction. In the cast are Johnny Harron, Dorothy Earle, Burr MacIntosh and Otis Harlan.

Louise Lorraine, who has acted in "Rookies," "The Frontiersman" and other pictures from the studios of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has joined the cast of "On Ze Boulevard," a new French farce in which Lew Cody and Renee Adoree have the leads. It is a romance of Paris and was written by F. Hugh Herbert and Florence Ryerson, Roy D'Arcy, Tenen Holtz and Anton Vaverka have prominent parts in the picture.

"The Circus Ace," a Tom Mix starring vehicle, has just been completed at the Fox Films studio under the direction of Ben Stoloff. The picture has most of its settings in circus life, and in addition to Tony, Mix' horse, there is a kangaroo which furnishes much of the comedy in the film. Natalie Joyce is the foremost feminine player, and others in the cast are Stanley Blystone, Jack Baston, Duke Lee, James Bradbury, Dudley Smith and Buster Gardner.

Several professional prize-fighters will act as movie extras in "The Smart Aleck," William Haines' next starring picture for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Lew Lipton, Haines' director, is now engaged in recruiting well-known pugs to appear in training camp sequences of the new film which will be a comedy of the ring.

The Fox Imperial comedies and one Fox Animal comedy were recently finished at the studio of Fox Films—"A Roamin' Gladiator," "Wine, Women and Sauerkraut," and "A Wolf in Cheap Clothing."

On the Fox directorial staff are such comedy makers as Jess Robbins, Jules White, Orville Dull, Zion Myers, Eugene Forde, Harry Sweet and Mark Sandrich. The Scenario Department of the short subject division is made up of William Conselman, creator of "Ella Cinders," comic strip; Murray Roth, Andrew Bennison, Harold Tarshius, Marty Martin, Sam White, Arthur Greenlaw and Henry Johnson.

Another example of an erstwhile newspaper man making marked progress in pictures is that of Clyde Bruckman, a former writer for the Los Angeles Examiner, who directed Monty Banks in his current comedy, "Horse Shoes," and who has been signed by Hal Roach to a long term contract to direct short feature comedies for release through Pathe. Another item of interest from the Hal Roach studio is the return of H. M. Walker, vice-president of the Roach plant, and title writer, from his annual month's "vacation" in New York when he takes in each show and prominent cafe around the region of Broadway. Reed Heustis substituted for Walker in his absence.

The first picture to come from the Warner Brothers that will star Rin-Tin-Tin during the coming year will be "Jaws of Steel," and it will be directed by Ray Enright, according to a recent announcement from the Warners. The story, by Gregory Rogers, will be adapted by Charles Condon and camera work is scheduled to begin within the lapse of one month. Enright directed the dog star's latest vehicle, "Tracked by the Police."

Formerly Betty Jane Young, but now grown up sufficiently to be leading lady to Wallace Beery in "The Big Sneeze," Sally Blane has signed a new contract with Paramount. A recently selected Paramount junior star for 1927, she is now working in "Rolled Stockings," the youth film which Richard Rosson is directing.

"Tumbling River," the first Tom Mix production on the Fox Films schedule of releases for 1927-28, will incidentally be that veteran's 72 picture for the Fox Company. Lew Seiler will make the picture on an elaborate scale, the entire company going to Prescott, Arizona, in about three or four weeks. Mix is enjoying a vacation at Palm Springs; his last picture was "The Circus Ace."

"Eve's Love Letters"

(Roach-Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

WITH the names of Agnes Ayres and Forrest Stanley for your marquee and the comedy of Stan Laurel, in which he is nobly aided and abetted by the aforementioned, there is no good reason why this Roach production should fail to find favor with those who pass your theatre, and having stopped to look, become part of the audience.

Agnes and Forrest, happily married, are menaced by the grim specter of blackmail, due to a former romance of Agnes' who wrote letters. A demand of ten thousand dollars is made of Agnes and, attended by her butler (Laurel), she visits the place of their concealment and retrieves them. Meanwhile hubby, alarmed at her absence, follows, sees her with another man, and becomes jealous, but the trouble is finally straightened out.

Good story, direction, performances and camera work. Directed by Leo McCarthy.

"Jane's Sleuth"

(Universal-Stern Bros.—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Ray Gallagher)

IN this latest of the "What Happened to Jane" Series, Charles Dorety plays the part of Oscar, a correspondence school detective. One of the things Oscar learned in the course was that it was his duty to shadow suspicious looking people. In following out this instruction he follows a man trailing a woman. After a struggle with him Oscar learns he is a real detective. At a house party later, Oscar again meets the detective, shadowing two crooks bent on securing a diamond necklace from one of the guests. The mistaken identity idea is brought into play here with good effect. Oscar finally emerges victorious in capturing the two crooks. S. Newfield, the director, has done a good job, getting everything possible out of the story. Ethlyne Clair is pleasing as Jane. It is a good comedy.

Bruce Scenic Novelties

(Educational—One Reel)

BRUCE scenic shots sub-divided as follows: "Gray Days," mountain and sky scenes in the Tropics which are camera treats; "A Dash Thru Hawaii," which would be more interesting if the train, from which the camera was focused, hadn't rushed so fast through the country filmed and "Hello, Hilo," more camera views of more portions of Hawaii.

Just fairly interesting.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"Queer Ducks"

(Christie-Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

CONSTANT repetition of gags spoils this comedy of the trials and tribulations of a young couple trying to wed despite irascible male parents; the latter deadly enemies because of a quarrel over a golf match. The first reel of this situation-slapstick affair furnishes a few laughs but the latter portion of the footage proves boresome as there is no let-up in the endless series of chases. The fault lies with the story, not the players.

Jack Duffy, Jimmie Harrison, Billy Engle, and Ann Christy make up the cast which was directed by Harold Beaudine.

"Doctors Prefer Brunettes"

(Universal—One Reel)

THERE is nothing particularly new introduced in this latest Neely Edwards comedy, but it is well done and amusing. Neely as Dr. Jack, a physician without patients, is desperate and at his wits' end. Looking from his window he sees pretty girl apparently struck by an auto. He rushes to her assistance and into her prizefighter sweetheart. The girl escapes injury and Neely tries to follow suit by keeping out of reach of the jealous lover. His efforts furnish the fun until the girl fakes an injury to visit the Doc's office, where she is discovered by her sweetheart. He proceeds o beat up the Doctor for what he considers his too personal attention. Vin Moore directed and Consuelo Dawn plays the feminine lead.—RAY GALLAGHER.

"Jungle Heat"

(Mermaid-Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

THIS one registers as a fairly amusing collection of gags with Al St. John and Clem Beauchamp posing as big game hunters who, in reality, are terrified at sight of their own shadows. Having boasted of their prowess they are elected chief procurers for a hunting party and the fun begins when the party sights an elephant herd. Al and Clem take refuge in a shack which, unknown to them, is strapped to an elephant's back and the jungle beast takes them on a merry ride.

The rest of the cast is made up of Lucille Hutton, Jack Lloyd and Glen Cavender. Stephen Roberts directed and Jack White supervised.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"The Pride of Pikeville"

(Sennett-Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

BEN TURPIN'S latest releases a goodly number of laughs, but it is not quite so humorous as his previous starring vehicle; the comedy in this number is of the slap-stick order, whereas the last one was built on humor in the situations contrived. Ben, looking like a burlesque edition of Von Stroheim, portrays the role of "the hero of a thousand battles and a thousand loves," traveling through the country via train. A rustic maiden is smitten with his charms, but her gun-totin' daddy objects until Ben and the girl are discovered in a compromising position; then daddy insists they marry and the rest of the footage is devoted to Ben's attempt to escape matrimony.

Fair, but it won't cause a riot.

Pathe Reveiw No. 22

(Pathe—One Reel)

THE units making up the Review this week comprise exponents of the art of Terpsichore, "Penetrating the Stream of Life," a microscopic exposition of the working of the blood in the human body, fox breeding in Wisconsin and Pathecolor views of the geysers of Yellowstone Park.

Ten minutes of time well spent.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"Do or Diet"

(Universal-Bluebird—One Reel)

POOR, hungry Charles Puffy has to marry a girl in order to get some food in this one, for his mother is trying to make him reduce almost to the point of starvation. She even takes his money away so that he is forced to pawn his clothes. Even that fails, for the broker does him out of the money. After the wedding ceremony another disappointment is due, for the servants beat him to the turkey. This will do well enough for houses wanting this sort of filler.—E. G. JOHNSTON.

"Felix the Cat as Roameo"

(Educational—One Reel)

THESE cartoons become more entertaining and ingenious with each succeeding issue as the artist's bag of tricks seemingly has no bottom; he never appears to be at a loss in devising new antics for Felix to perform. This week we see the cat as the great lover who travels from country to country leaving a trail of broken hearts behind him until he is finally confounded when his sweethearts get together.

Good for a lot of giggles.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"North of Nowhere"

(Cartoon-Educational—One Reel)

THOUGH containing a number of ingenious bits of business this Life Cartoon does not come up to the standard of the older established brands of pen-and-ink works as a whole because of poor work either on the part of the artist or the process used in filming these drawings; the backgrounds are rarely clearly defined, always presenting a smudgy appearance.

It is just mildly amusing.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

Pathe Review No. 23

(Pathe—One Reel)

PATHECOLOR views of some of the temples in the Far East, the etching process shown in detail by Rosalind Abramson and another installment of the adventures of the Smithsonian-Chrysler expedition to Tanganyika make up the contents of the current number of the Pathe Review which should afford patrons an educational diversion.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"A Gym Dandy"

(Cameo-Educational—One Reel)

ONE of the brand famous for its roughhouse action which goes big with some people. The action takes place in a gymnasium peopled by the Educational Beauty Brigade and the principals of the piece, all of whom are banged about considerably during the run of the footage. What matters the story?

Okay if they like this type, of which it is a good example.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"A Dog's Day"

(Fable-Pathe—One Reel)

THE current issue of Aesop's Fables is about as funny as the average, that is to say it contains the usual quota of gags pulled by the cats, dogs and a miscellaneous assortment of animals. In this reel a dog plays the featured role, the business of the piece revolving around the pranks he plays to get Al Falfa's goat. He succeeds.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

Avenging Fangs

Vehicle for Dog Passably Good

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

SANDOW, whom Pathe bills as "America's greatest police dog," gets an even break in this, his latest release in one time. Large and wolfish, a suitable figure for vengeance, with his snarls and weight he can easily bowl a man over. Teaming with hate for the villains of the piece, he is a dangerous animal when he has his man down and is attempting to reach his throat. This was our first opportunity of viewing his stuff and the opinion offered that though he is not so handsome a dog that point should not be stressed for he displays an even quantity of intelligence and histrionic ability. His opportunities for showing his wares are not so many as at times he is lost in the march of events—is made conspicuous by his absence; more attention is placed on the doings of the humans in the plot than seems necessary.

The plot is nothing much. Sandow's master is murdered and the dog casts his lot with friend of the deceased, the two trailing the slayers to a Western town where after the dies have been cast and the anticipated punishment is inflicted on the villains, the victorious trio—Sandow, his new master, and the girl who aided in the capture—feel that effervescent glow of something done, a fulfillment of their aims.

A familiar theme, is it not? But it certainly would be fallacious to conclude that audiences will find it spiritless for in face of the fact that it is not new and that this oldness detracts from what dramatic values it possesses, these "old reliables" generally please.

The Cast: Sandow (Dog), Kenneth McDonald, Helen Lynch, Jack Richardson, Max Asher. Directed by Ernest Van Pelt from George Pyper's story.

THEME: Drama of vengeance on part of dog and human friend who seek and find murderers of dog's master.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The murder. Jailbreaking. Sandow cornering the heavy and making him retreat. The denouement.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Good suggestions incorporated in press book.

DRAWING POWER: The patronage of average theatres should regard it okay as entertainment.

Produced by Chesterfield Pictures Corp. Distributed by Pathe. Length 4,335 feet. Released June 5, 1927.

Mr. Wu

Chaney In His Element In Entertaining Film

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT stands to reason that Lon Chaney with his gift for weird characterization must be given stories heavily embroidered with melodramatic action and suspense. After many seasons of portraying uncanny studies the plastic Lon has established a large following, bent upon seeing the last word in make-up. The star doesn't disappoint them with "Mr. Wu."

The plot is no great shakes. Adapted from the stage play it follows the familiar groove of the racial barrier. Thus we see the daughter of the house of Wu frowning upon a Chinese husband to go "Butterfly" with a young American. The idea is built upon Oriental vengeance exacted by Wu when he learns that the girl has fallen in love with the Occidental. Chaney starts his sinister punishment from the moment that a gossiper informs him of the romantic goings-on and is silenced with a sweep of a curved dagger.

Of course, the mandarin is disappointed in his evil plotting. The acting is the chief appeal here. Chaney gives an excellent performance of Wu, the Oxford graduate who reverts to type. He shades the character with the accepted subtlety and cunning of the Oriental. Renee Adoree extracts sympathy as the heroine.

The Cast: Lon Chaney, Louise Dresser, Renee Adoree, Holmes Herbert, Ralph Forbes, Gertrude Olmsted, Mrs. Wong Wing, Claude King, Anna May Wong, Sidney Bracy, Director, William Nigh.

THEME: Melodrama of Chinese vengeance when mandarin's daughter prefers American's love in preference to a Chinese marriage.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The fine acting by star and entire cast. The action and suspense. The moment when Wu has Americans in his power. The climax. The romantic scenes.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Stage Chinese scene for prologue featuring dancing, etc. Play up Chaney as offering another different characterization. Play up Renee Adoree and Ralph Forbes.

DRAWING POWER: Chaney's name will draw the crowd. For any type of house.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Length, seven reels. Released, May 1927.

Mountains of Manhattan

Pleasant Story of Lad Who Achieved the Heights

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

GOTHAM has a picture here that in many ways arouses enthusiasm. It enjoys a naturalness—a humanness—in the performances of its characters, a well-built and ably-directed story and, except for the latter part of the piece, enough swing and vigor pervade its length to stimulate jaded nerves.

Charles Delaney, Kate Price and Bobby Gordon have several stretches of scenes together and they form a typical family group. To our way of thinking the best part of the film is that in which these three are the chief figures. The kid is weak and ailing and maternal Kate Price, who had taken him in off the streets, provides him with a home and all the kindness of her nature. Delaney, on the other hand, even goes back to the squared circle to win a sum of money that will send the boy to a climate that will restore his health. The radio brings the news of Delaney's successful venture in the ring into his home and to the eager listeners in it; hilarity and good feelings reign for a period and then the light of life goes out of the sick boy and the victorious fighter comes home to the scene of the kid's losing fight.

But shadows are not paramount in the picture, which is a story of the rise of an ironworker; of his capable handling of the job of construction foreman on one of the huge steel buildings that give the piece its title.

The Cast: Charles Delaney, Dorothy Devore, Kate Price, Bobby Gordon, George Chesebro, Clarence H. Wilson, Robert E. Homans. Director, James Hogan.

THEME: Story of ironworker's rise to success.
PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Scene of skyscraper construction. The battle in the ring and the kid's losing fight. The fight atop the skyscraper.
EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Steel girder symbolic of modern industrial age. Prize fighting extremely popular these days. Love story and story of waif can be played up to advantage.
DRAWING POWER: Recommended for the majority of audiences.

Produced by Gotham and distributed by Lumas. Length, 5,358 feet. Released, April, 1927.

Closed Gates

An Interesting Story Well Done

(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

MANFRED B. LEE, who wrote the story for this feature, offers this one in proof of his statement that the independent producer CAN make Broadway pictures. We are inclined to agree with Mr. Lee, for certainly it is on a par with many that have secured Metropolitan first runs. At least two of several dramatic situations reach considerable height, and Johnny Harron, Jane Novak and Sidney De Grey are to be commended for their sincere efforts. Director Phil Rosen has turned out a good piece of work.

Harron is seen in the role of a reckless youth who has enlisted in the War after having been turned out of his home by his wealthy father after a long series of escapades. An auto wreck in which a girl companion is killed is the culmination. His invalid mother, the one source of inspiration for sentiment in the old millionaire, dies from the shock. There is not a whole lot to the war scenes, but enough to show Harron in an engagement where he loses his memory through shell shock. He is reported dead or missing but later returns listed as John Smith, Unknown, and marries a nurse who has helped him back to health. The latter's efforts never cease to help her husband recover his memory. The real moments of the picture occur during the scenes leading up to recognition and eventual reconciliation.

The Cast: Johnny Harron, Jane Novak, Sidney De Grey, Lucy Beaumont, Le Roy Mason, Rosemary Cooper, Ruth Handforth, Bud Jamieson. Directed by Phil Rosen.

THEME: Regeneration of wealthy, reckless youth cast from his home.
PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Good story and direction. The sincere work of the principals and entire cast; particularly in two scenes in latter reels.
EXPLOITATION ANGLES: War theme. This one in particular has had lots of newspaper publicity in connection with an unidentified veteran. Play up this angle.
DRAWING POWER: Looks like a good bet for most any house.

The Claw

Not Up to Standard of Director or Players

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

WHILE several of the individual sequences possess merit, "The Claw," as a whole, is not up to the standard of work done previously by Sidney Olcott or the players, Clair Windsor and Norman Kerry. It is hard to say where the fault lies considering that the story is by a widely-read author, Cynthia Stockley, direction by a man who has turned out some mighty good pictures and performances by players who have proved they can act in productions made previous to and since completion of this Universal film. Several situations are started but never get anywhere, the titles are bad and Kerry works like a "ham," especially in one "dramatic" moment when he hugs the picture of the girl to his breast before going off to the war; even Nelson McDowell, who ordinarily can be depended on for good comedy relief, fails to click.

The story tells of the infatuation of a girl for a married man whom she follows from England to the African veldt and, though informed he is married, continues to acept his attentions, which result in her being ostracized by the social elite of the community; but the hero, who truly loves her, will not give her up. There is little or no sympathy for the characters, either the heroine with her school-girlish actions, the hero who goes about mooning and brooding or the villain who doesn't seem quite villainous.

The Cast: Norman Kerry, Claire Windsor, Arthur Edmund Carewe, Tom Guise, Helene Sullivan, Nelson McDowell, Larry Steers, J. Gordon Russell, Myrta Bonillas, Jacques D'Aurey, Pauline Neff, Bertram Johns, Billie Bennett, Annie Ryan, Dick Sutherland.

THEME: Drama of infatuation of girl for married man, love for her by the hero, and a war which finally straightens out the tangle.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The scenes of the African war dance. The hero's rescue of his rival and its effect on the girl.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up the name of author, director and principal players.

DRAWING POWER: Neighborhood house picture.

Rough House Rosie

Slapstick and Sentiment Season An Average Film

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WITH a quartette of writers working on this picture it seems as if something better could have been made out of it. Carrying a most simple theme it develops a sing-song plot of the girl who, reared in a common place environment, is determined to better her station in life until she becomes disillusioned. Then she is glad to reckon with her own neighborhood. It's a time-worn story with scarcely a spark of originality in it. The heroine lives up to her title—and Clara Bow takes more encores in her vivid performance.

As Rosie from Tenth Avenue she is advised by a Coney Island crystal-gazer that she will marry a rich man. And she straightway goes after him. When he proves to be not so good she is glad to take up with her neighborhood pal, a prize-fighter. And that's all there is to it.

Of course, it is colored with plenty of incident which alternates between slapstick and sentiment. Miss Bow is highly animated throughout the action. Were the players costumed closer to reality it would ring more genuine. But they are bedecked in the manner of ancient days on the Bowery. The film is well titled by George Marion, Jr., and it has some moments which spell entertainment. For the most part it plays an old tune—and doesn't play it very well.

The Cast: Clara Bow, Reed Howes, Arthur Housman, Doris Hill, Douglas Gilmore, John Miljan, Henry Kolker. Director, Frank Strayer.

THEME: Romantic melodrama of a girl who longs to rise above her station in life, becomes disillusioned and is content to be true to her environment.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The incident. The Coney Island atmosphere. The acting by star. The titles.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Title can be teased. Play up Clara Bow, advising patrons that she has colorful role. Use score of "Rosie O'Grady," etc.

DRAWING POWER: Suitable for average houses. Clara Bow should attract them.

Produced and distributed by Paramount.
Length, six reels. Released, May, 1927.

Fighting Love

Interesting Treatment of Desert Romance

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE oft-told tale of the girl who marries for convenience to avoid marital bondage with a lustful roue—and then proceeds to fall in love with an ardent youth—is presented here with all of its dramatic entanglements. It is a story which calls for much emotional display on the part of Jetta Goudal, an actress whose film assignments are picking up since her appearance in "White Gold." She plays the part of an Italian princess who suffers much self-sacrifice and enjoys many passionate scenes before the triangle disappears on a love note.

The ingredients are no different than what have been contained in any desert story, tho' happily it refuses to go "sheik." The Arabs, naturally, are troublesome, though the hot sands don't carry on any extensive rampage. If the roue worries you please be advised that being an important official of Tripoli, it is his job to dispatch the couple to the desert for the purpose of getting rid of the military husband. When the latter's adjutant enters the story the plot thickens and develops romance and action to boot.

The suspense is well sustained after the introducing episodes. If we must continue to have desert romances let us, at least, have them as well told as this picture.

The Cast: Jetta Goudal, Victor Varconi, Henry B. Walthall, Louis Natheaux, Josephine Crowell. Director, Nils Olaf Crisander.

THEME: Romantic drama of triangle of woman who escapes unhappy marriage after experiencing much sacrifice.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The splendid acting by star. The competent acting by Josephine Crowell and others. The scenes in the Italian villa. The Arab uprising. The climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Concentrate on putting star over. She got her start in "White Gold." Ask teaser questions such as "What would you do if you married a man you didn't love to escape another and found yourself in love with a third?"

DRAWING POWER: Suitable for all types of houses.

Produced by Cecil B. DeMille. Distributed by Producers Dist. Corp.
Length, seven reels. Released, May, 1927.

Silver Comes Through

Excellent Program Attraction; Popular Star

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

THERE is no reason why any and everybody should not enjoy this production; it is not a big picture from the angle of big sets, casts, etc., but it is a very human little story of the race track with one of the best horse races staged that it has been our privilege to see. Fred Thomson has a very likable personality, he can fight, and how he rides a horse! Silver King is a magnificent animal, and, in addition, is about as intelligent a horse as may be found anywhere. This production is a happy combination of story, direction and players. Edna Murphy seems more charming with each succeeding release, William Courtwright as the unlucky ranch owner gives a good serio-comic performance, Harry Woods makes a very suave villain and Mathilde Brundage handles her bit very creditably.

The opening scenes provide a thrill when Thomson does battle with a tiger to save a colt. Later the yarn about the almost bankrupt rancher with one good race horse left to save the family fortune is unfolded; Thomson is foreman for the ranch and, when the race horse is crippled, Silver King is brought in and he saves the day. There is a pretty little romance between Thomson and Miss Murphy and a little suspense when the heavy enters the matrimonial stakes.

Though the cameraman for this production is not credited he surely deserves it for the great work he turns in on the race scenes.

The Cast: Fred Thomson, Edna Murphy, William Courtwright, Harry Woods, Mathilde Brundage, and Silver King. Story by Frank M. Clifton, adaptation, continuity and direction by Lloyd Ingraham.

THEME: Comedy-melodrama of race track with hero saving the day for his employer when he wins race with horse not considered a good bet.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The work of the cast and the especially good horse race scene.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Thomson is popular; play up his name.

DRAWING POWER: Good attraction for family.

Length 5,457 feet. Released May 29.

Regional News from Correspondents

Atlanta

MARCUS LOEW'S southern division headquarters in the Grand Building, Atlanta, took on their old time atmosphere Thursday with the arrival of Col. E. A. Shiller, who is making his first visit to Atlanta since his company's division office was re-established.

When Lionel H. Keene arrived late last week to open the offices he found that Manager Thos. H. James of Loew's Grand had secured the identical rooms the Loew's offices had occupied during the several years that Mr. Schiller headed the southern division. It required only the presence of Mr. Schiller to create the atmosphere of a few years back.

Early this week Mr. Keene began his tour of Loew theatres, but cut the trip short to return to Atlanta to meet Mr. Schiller for a two-day conference. They left Friday afternoon for Memphis and are due to return Sunday. It is expected that Mr. Schiller will remain a few days before returning to his New York headquarters.

An attractive special feature on the program at the Ponce de Leon Theatre, Atlanta, Wednesday and Thursday evenings was the dance revue staged by Virginia Semon, daughter of Martin L. Semon, manager of the Forsyth Theatre.

Miss Semon last summer assisted Lewis J. Morton in training the ballet for the summer opera production and no local group of dancers ever received as much recognition as they were accorded.

Emil Bernstecker, until this week assistant manager of the Howard Theatre, in Atlanta, has been promoted by District Manager Montgomery S. Hill of the Southern Publix offices, to the managership of two theatres in Jackson, Tennessee. Mr. Bernstecker has already left for his new assignment. He will have charge of the Lyric and Marlowe theatres in Jackson.

Earle E. Griggs, exploiteer for U. T. Koch, representing the F. A. Leatherman Company, of Atlanta, returned this week from Louisville, Ky.

H. G. Ballance, recently made Southern Division manager of Paramount, with headquarters in Atlanta, left this week for a tour of inspection of his new territory. He was to visit Memphis, Dallas, San Antonio, New Orleans and other points before returning to Atlanta. Until a few weeks ago, Mr. Ballance was district manager for Paramount.

Arthur C. Bromberg, president of Arthur C. Bromberg Attractions, with headquarters in Atlanta, returned early this week from a visit to Birmingham. He made the journey each way by automobile.

Fred W. Young, sales manager of the Arctic Nu-Air Corporation, with headquarters in Atlanta, returned the latter part of this week from a short trip in his territory.

Paul A. Strachan, salesman in the Alabama territory for First National, who has been convalescing at his home in Atlanta following an operation for appendicitis, was able to visit the Atlanta exchange of his company this week.

Ben Y. Cammack, branch manager of Universal in Atlanta, was expected to return to his office today after a trip into the territory this week.

W. W. Anderson, head of Pathe's exchange in Atlanta, left last Wednesday night for Jacksonville, Fla., to meet William Saal relative to bookings of the Pathe product in Publix theatres in Florida.

South East

FILM exchanges report business approaching normalcy in the Memphis territory except some portions of East Arkansas and North Mississippi. Many exhibitors lost not only play dates but actual physical property damage as well. The Memphis-Little Rock Film Exchange has some serious problems to solve in the wake of the flood.

John Moody, former manager of the Lyric theatre in Knoxville, Tenn., has been appointed manager of the Majestic theatre in Memphis, replacing P. H. Wortham. Mr. Moody has had considerable experience both in the picture field and theatre management.

Pantages is showing this week a special film of 1,000 feet of the competitive drill of the Memphis R. O. T. C. by 2,000 cadets from all the local high schools. Ned Courtney, Pantages' press agent, directed the film and tied up the high schools with some direct publicity.

A group of lads who are part of the Memphis contingent who attend Camp Chickasaw at Brevard, N. C., in the summer, were guests of manager C. B. Stiff at Loew's Palace at a special matinee last Tuesday.

With the forthcoming week Loew's Palace (Publix theatre), Memphis, Tenn., will inaugurate the Publix Chex system. Books will be sold in $10, $5, and $2.50 sizes with admittance "check" sold at a 10 per cent discount.

Southern division manager Harry G. Ballance, of Paramount-Famous-Lasky Corporation, with headquarters in Atlanta, visited the Memphis Paramount exchange this week on a tour of inspection, and to confer with his Memphis exchange manager concerning adjustments of contracts where play dates were missed owing to flood conditions. Many exhibitors are calling for cancellations, but exchanges favor moving up dates and providing other releases where exhibitors desire to change programs. The question will be decided by a committee of the Memphis-Little Rock Film Board of Trade.

R. B. Williams, Universal's district manager in the Southeast, came up to Memphis from Atlanta early last week for a visit to the local Universal exchange.

Tommy Haynes, formerly on Universal's Memphis sales force, has gone under the F. B. O. banner. Mr. Haynes is a veteran salesman with a good record in many exchanges.

Film row mourns the death of Miss Lilithe Gallagher, of the Universal Memphis office. She was ill only ten days. Miss Lena Caudle, formerly with Universal, has been appointed her successor.

Arthur Lucas has appointed J. A. Reynolds manager of the Charlotte exchange of Educational. Mr. Reynolds opened the Educational office in Charlotte for Mr. Lucas several years ago, and was manager up until six months ago, when he resigned that position to be general manager of a circuit of theatres in South Carolina for D. M. Eaves.

Geo. Wilby, formerly with Educational, has gone on the road as salesman for the same concern.

U. K. Rice, of the Colonial theatre, Winston-Salem, N. C., visited Charlotte film exchanges during the week.

Bob Masterman, general manager of Carolina Theatres, Inc., Charlotte, is spending a few days in Elizabeth City, N. C., preparing for the opening of the Carolina theatre there.

Otto Hartso, of the North Newton theatre, Newton, N. C., visited the Charlotte film row during the week.

F. P. Bryant, manager, First National, accompanied by his salesmen, Robert Boovey, D. F. House and A. B. Cheatham, left Thursday, May 14th, to attend First National's annual convention at Los Angeles, Calif.

E. D. Turner, Carolina Theatre's, Inc., announces the appointment of C. D. Buckner as manager of the Playhouse theatre, Statesville, N. C. Mr. Buckner was for several years manager of the National theatre, Greensboro, N. C., and was at one time in charge of the Roland Hill Circuit of North and South Carolina.

Mr. Stallings, former manger of the Playhouse in Statesville, has been transferred to the new Caroline theatre in Elizabeth City, N. C., as manager, for the same concern.

N. L. Royster, secretary of the North Carolina M. P. T. O. A., was in Charlotte, last Tuesday.

F. R. Drew, manager, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, together with salesmen, C. W. Cheek and B. Bishop, Jr., left Charlotte Saturday, May 14th, to attend the spring convention at Los Angeles.

E. L. Hearn, owner of the Alameda theatre, Albemarle, N. C., spent Tuesday of last week in Charlotte.

H. F. Kincey, general manager of the Publix-Saenger Ttheatres of North Carolina, announces a change in policy of the Orpheum thaetre, Durham, N. C. The Orpheum has been a tabloid house for several years, but under the new policy becomes a straight picture house.

S. L. Martin, of Ashland, owner of seven theatres in Kentucky, was a visitor to Louisville last week, having come down for the Kentucky Derby.

Announcement comes from Judge Charles Wilson, resident manager of the Fontaine Ferry Park, that Laurence Lambert, general manager of the National Musical and Theatrical Bureau, New York, will manage the ten weeks' season of summer opera, which is to be put on at the park theatre about the middle of June.

Guy Stansbury, of the Crystal theatre, Bardstown, Ky., is having extensive repairs made to his theatre, installing new machines and other equipment. The Crystal will be one of the most attractive houses in that section of the state when the work is completed.

With the Kentucky Derby as an inducement thousands of visitors thronged Louisville last week. Among theatre folk attending the racing classic were: Fred May, of the Richland and Port Williams theatres, Carrollton, Ky.; Mrs. C. B. Brabant, of the Star theatre, Cloverport, Ky.; Keith Hood, of the Florence theatre, Bedford, Ky.; Fred J. Jerris, New Castle theatre, New Castle, Ky.; and Mrs. M. D. Bullock, of the Columbia theatre, Cave City, Ky.

Mrs. M. D. Bullock has recently rented a building in Cave City, Ky., which will be converted into a 300-seat theatre. She bought a new projector for the house during her visit to Louisville last week.

J. H. McIntyre, former branch manager of the Paramount exchange at Albany, N. Y., is now opening an office in Louisville for P. D. C. His quarters will be in the Louisville Film and Supply Building on First Street, near Chestnut.

Fire in the storeroom of the Gas and Electric Shop, Louisville, Ky., last Wednesday night caused damage estimated at between $3,000 and $5,000 to stock of the concern, and forced approximately a thousand patrons of the Strand theatre to seek safety on the streets. Smoke from the blaze poured into the theatre through rear doors left open for ventilation. Patrons walked out in perfect order and returned later when the performance was resumed. Manager George A. Sine of the Strand states that the theatre was not damaged.

Cleveland

CLEVELAND motion picture exchange managers and their fellow workers were notoriously conspicuous last week by their absence. The local Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exchange was at the mercy of Assistant Manager Frank Belles, while Manager A. Ehrlich and Salesman C. C. Deardorff, Bill Lissner, Art Holah, E. M. Booth and Otto Horwitz were on their way to the M-G-M convention in California.

And at the First National exchange, Eddie Catlin, booker, was entirely surrounded by girls. All of the other male members of the organization, with the single exception of Ira Beckstead, accessory manager, were conventioning. Among those missing were Manager G. L. Sears, Assistant Manager L. F. Weinsz and Salesmen H. J. Ochs, Walter Forster, Milton Mooney, A. F. Braeunig and Walter Brandt.

John Pekras, who operates all the houses in Elyria, is busy letting paint contracts for the Grand Theatre. He is remodeling the house, redecorating it, building a new Spanish style front, and generally adding to its comfort and beauty.

The Valentine Theatre, Canton, is closed. Ed Bokius, proprietor and manager, turned the key in the door last Sunday. Whether it's just for the summer or for all time he doesn't know now.

"Is Zat So?"—Fox Films, Roxy Theatre, New York City

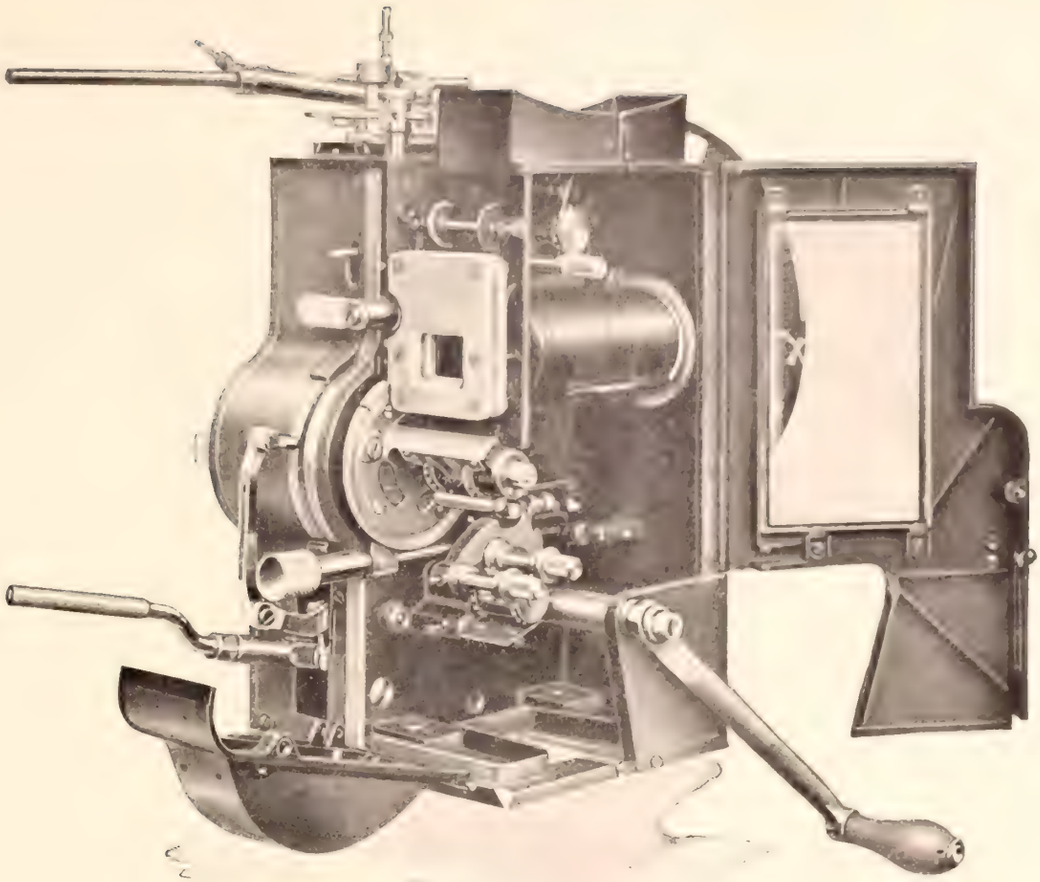
Graphic: "Packed with laughs. . . . Best cinema offering Roxy has booked since he opened. Rollicking comedy and crowd loved it. Since Roxy's opened we have wanted to hear echo of 6,300 people laughing hilariously. They're doing it several times daily as this film unreels. Amusing and entertaining. No dull moments and there's a continuity of comedy furnished by the O'Brien-Lowe combination at its best. The original play has been closely followed." . . .

Evening World: Lowe and O'Brien handle very adequately story of prize fighter and manager who find themselves butler and second man in home of wealthy Fifth Avenue family. . . . Lowe, as hardboiled manager who treats his ward in most contemptuous manner, although having much affection for him, is good, and O'Brien is very dumb but nevertheless effective pug, acts splendidly, especially in some scenes with nursemaid, whose charms hands him final K. O. Young M. Fairbanks, Jr., Kathryn Perry as stenographer, and Dione Ellis as nursemaid, all gain complimentary reactions from audience, and it is our opinion that picture is a good form of movie farce."

Daily News: "Great little movie. And that's so! Without any arguments. . . . Roxy has at last initiated crackerjack comedy into Cathedral of the Movies. Picture packs a punch from first reel to conclusion. When you're not convulsed with mirth over O'Brien's and Lowe's comic antics, you're just "got" by humanity of love scenes, or else your enthused and excited over honest-to-goodness fight episodes. . . . You just can't go wrong on 'Is Zat So?' And we'll say again, that's certainly so."

American: "Filmed to point of rare, hilarious comedy. . . . sent yesterday's audiences into gales of laughter. . . . Comedy situations follow fast on each other's heels. . . . Mr. O'Brien's work evidently appreciated, for he gets louder and longer laughs than does Edmund Lowe, who gives amusing, if exaggerated performances as manager."

Times: "No little laughter was created yesterday afternoon in Roxy by silent antics of players in shadow version of 'Is Zat So?' . . Production shrewdly directed by Alfred E. Green. . . . Sequence devoted to fight in Fifth Avenue home most amusing."



Mirror: "Delicious comedy ripples across silver sheet at Roxy this week. . . . George O'Brien ideally cast as dumbbell, lovable fighter. . . . His footwork is aces, but it is his lapse of headwork that zips humor and pathos into the flicker. . . . Picture is pleasant length. Short enough to make one want more; long enough to mould and brisk sure-fires comedy. . . . should be rated among comedy wows of year."

"Rich But Honest"—Fox Films, Hippodrome Theatre, New York City

Evening Journal: "Good picture. Here's a film that slipped into regular release, with no famous actors, no well known director and none of other usual elaborate trimmings. Delightful entertainment. . . . Story given couple of different twists."

American: "Honest screen entertainment. Contains everything guaranteed to please—theatre life, dancing contest, romance, realistic fight and happy ending."

PRECISION

Simplex products are built by machines of precision, gauged by instruments that are accurate to ten thousandths of an inch. These machines and instruments of marvelous exactitude put into every Simplex Projector a degree of mechanical perfection that immediately places them in a class apart. The attainment of this perfection is a singular achievement and one of priceless value.

When you purchase a Simplex Projector, you obtain all the advantages that years of engineering progress have created.

To maintain those advantages should be the policy of every Simplex owner. And to do that it is necessary to adhere to Simplex standards of engineering when replacing any part of your machine.

SHORT TALKS

ON

SHORT FEATURES

---Count 'em!

When you're showing your patrons a comedy, it's the number of laughs that counts! No matter whether it is a long feature or a short feature, the picture that registers the biggest number of laughs per reel is the one that is making the biggest appeal to your patrons.

And you'll probably get a better idea of the real importance of short comedies in general and Educational's comedies in particular if you actually test a few of them for laughs. Count the laughs! When you run a Lupino Lane Comedy, or a Hamilton Comedy, or a "Big Boy" Juvenile Comedy, or any other Educational Comedy, count the number of times your audience laughs per reel. Then just try to beat it with any other comedy you can get!

I invite you to make this test because I know that when you have finished it you will see more clearly the result of our seven years of concentration on short features. The men who make Educational's comedies know how to pack in the laughs. That's why they are such valuable box-office assets to 13,000 theatres

Improvements That Will Improve Your Business

PERFECTION of the Arctic Nu-Air-O-Switch makes complete theatre ventilation a reality. Now, at less than the cost of many systems made for hot weather cooling only, you can have all the profit making advantages of an all-weather—all-year—air-conditioning system.

The Air-O-Switch enables you to instantly change from blow-in ventilation to exhaust ventilation, or the reverse, by simply moving a lever.

This improvement is but one of the many distinct advances in theatre ventilation that has kept Arctic Nu-Air far in the lead of its imitators. The Dual Deflector, insuring uniform air distribution to every nook and cranny without ducts or draft, has been further improved with beautiful art flanges, like the one shown above. An improved speed governing pulley insures positive regulation of the air delivery, to meet the health and comfort requirements of your patrons.

These are but a few of the reasons why more Arctic Nu-Air Systems are being installed in theatres than any other. Send the coupon—get all the facts about the most complete—the most profitable system you can install.

WARNING!

The phenomenal success of Arctic Nu-Air has caused many irresponsible imitators to spring up over night. A few have adopted similar names. Others have tried to copy Arctic Nu-Air features. Many are making claims that appear ridiculous. Some go so far as to claim comparison with Arctic Nu-Air for cheaply constructed makeshifts.

While "imitation is the sincerest flattery," we feel that the theatre owner should be warned and urged to carefully investigate before installing any system.

Correctness of principle, design, and construction and the responsibility of the maker should be carefully considered.

Cause for future regrets can in this way be avoided.

Motion Picture News

Volume XXXV NEW YORK CITY, JUNE 10, 1927 No. 23

The New Boss

THE AMERICAN MERCURY has discovered "an amusement octopus."

In an article under that title the motion picture people are said to have throttled, deliberately and maliciously, all other forms of public entertainment, from the legitimate stage down to carnivals.

This is considerably at variance with our conception of the situation. The article in this, its leading theme, strikes us as not hitting on all cylinders, if indeed any at all.

* * * *

In one of the few, but always interesting interviews I have had with Adolph Zukor, he said that motion pictures got a wide open opportunity in the entertainment business because the stage business all over the country had gone to pot.

Cheap road shows were put out and the public, objecting to the price and quality of the entertainment offered, was acutely ready for the diversion in both respects held forth by the dramatic motion picture.

It has been my own impression, also, that this decline in the stage business was due largely to the fact that the legitimate theatres were tied up in a booking circuit and therefore had to depend too much upon too little competition in production.

At any rate it is apparent enough that the stage business throttled itself; and some able producers are outspoken in the belief that it throttled itself by throttling production competition at the fountain head.

* * * *

The title of the article gave me hope at first that it might deal with the situation, present and future, within the picture business.

With the rapid chaining up of theatres into a few big groups we seem, on the surface, to be following at present the experience of the stage business. And that leads to some very pertinent speculation over the future of motion picture entertainment.

The recent conventions held all over the country—at an expense I am told of about a thousand dollars a man—would indicate that there is plenty of competition among picture distributors. Certainly this huge effort to pep up sales forces gives a flat denial to those who gravely tell us that, so great are the theatre chains today, the selling of pictures to theatres is done across a desk in New York City.

And I don't see any great decline in production competition. There are fewer independent producers today, but such as these are, they are offering sizable programs and they are able, so far as I can see, to turn out just as good an average picture, if not better, than those big producers who are now so set upon the production of road shows.

There seems little doubt that the big theatre chains today dominate the industry. First the distributor dominated, then the producer gobbled up distribution and ran it to suit himself; now the theatre chains are in the driving seat.

And—it strikes me—theirs is a vast responsibility.

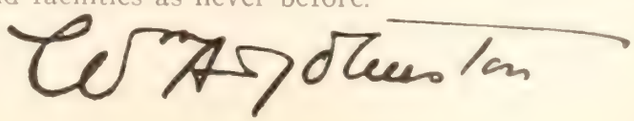
* * * *

The big producer today is out for the ownership of a thousand theatres, more or less, and makes no bones about it. With such an outlet he is guaranteed his negative and distributing cost. But that doesn't end him of his worries by a long shot. In fact, it would seem to increase them—for—

Those theatres have got to pay.

They have got to pay above every other consideration. For the investment in them beats the investment in production and distribution.

The stage theatre circuits were only booking circuits.



The picture producer, through his ownership of theatres, nowadays, goes direct to the public with his wares.

And those wares have got to be acceptable to the public.

So that, apparently, theatre chains or no chains at all, the producer today is under heavier than ever obligations to turn out good pictures.

Unless my brief argument here is full of holes it would seem as if Hollywood today needs the brightest show brains the industry affords, even at the expense of other branches.

And that, since theatre success while primarily a matter of pictures is also one of management and advertising, in both these lines we need man power and facilities as never before.

The Week in Review

Comment on Passing Affairs

DISCUSSING the great problem of production costs in the picture business, The Wall Street Journal said in a recent article:

"In addition to the showman's difficulty of hitting on a great popular success, the other great difficulty before the industry is to keep the cost of a picture within the bounds of preliminary estimates. This is a tangible problem with which the industry has been grappling with considerable success."

Continuing, the Journal declared that "unnecessary delays or attacks of temperament can play havoc with the cost of a film. To give one unusual example, a recent film which was to have cost $100,000 on schedule actually cost $700,000, on account of a series of unfortunate occurrences.

"Conditions which permit this, however, are being changed as rapidly and as completely as possible. All films are now made on a budget basis, with a carefully worked out allotment for each item of expenses . . . . When on account of some unusual circumstances, the budget is upset, it frequently results in the star or director responsible being eliminated. There are many persons of considerable ability who cannot turn out their work on a basis that will permit the film to make a good profit. These individuals are gradually being weeded out of the staffs of the large film producers."

THE Journal's remarks are interesting chiefly because they represent the viewpoint of large financial interests which have, some time since, placed their O. K. on pictures as attractive and safe investments.

It is, of course, true that some steps have been taken to curb production extravagances. But this movement, contrary to the optimistic note sounded by the Wall Street Journal, is decidedly in its infancy.

The amount of money which will be poured into Hollywood for next season's pictures is in the neighborhood of $120,000,000. This by no means indicates that production costs are coming down. On the contrary, it indicates clearly enough that they are rising. And one of the biggest factors in the rise is the matter of salaries.

On this point, the Journal is equally optimistic: "While in one sense producers are trying to do away with the star system they will never be able entirely to eliminate it, since in the motion picture field, more perhaps than any other, great ability or great drawing power can command its own price."

That is unquestionably true. In other words, the public makes the stars, after which, or during which time, the budgets are adjusted accordingly so far as star salaries are concerned.

But to complete the Journal's argument: "What the companies are able to do, however, is to develop younger talent, build up stock companies and cut the salaries of minor figures who can be replaced. Stars will be kept as long as their salary demands do not reach proportions that endanger the margin of profit in a film."

ALL of which sounds very simple, but unfortunately the situation in Hollywood cannot be reduced to any such formula. The elimination of stars is not the sudden process the Journal writer seems to believe it is. The public attends to that—over a period: not the picture producers.

And what would be a minor figure in Hollywood? Has the Journal writer ever been out to Hollywood? Minor, some of them may be in fact, but facts don't govern in Hollywood. As we have pointed out, Hollywood is the world's prize provincial city. And this has a lot to do with extravagant salaries.

Your studio folk—most of them—live in the small world depicted for them by slush-stories in the Los Angeles newspapers. Their ideas of themselves are large—very large. There are exceptions, but the number of high-hats in Hollywood greatly exceeds any other kind of headgear worn out there.

And you may take it as a fact that high-hats cut a big figure in this same, tough problem of production costs.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

"Snookums" Sunny McKeen, of Stern Bros. "Newlyweds and Their Baby" comedies, romps on the White House lawn with President Coolidge. (International Newsreel Photo.)

Cornell Woolrich, whose novel, "Children of the Ritz," won the $10,000 prize in the College Humor-First National Pictures contest, and which will be filmed.

Reading down: E. W. Hammons, Sid Grauman, Dorothy Devore, Muriel Evans, Tay Gallagher, Estelle Bradley, Amma Styers and E. H. Allen, during the Educational convention.

Westward, Ho!

GEORGE REDDY, for the past seven years an important and popular member of the Pathe home office publicity department, has shaken the dust of Broadway from his feet, and by the time this is in print will be on a train bound for Hollywood to assume his new post as director of publicity at the Mack Sennett Studios. The tradepaper fraternity will be sorry to see George go, but glad of the opportunity and the advancement given George.

Starting as a youngster with the Morning Telegraph, George went from there to Robertson-Cole and from that company to Pathe, where he has been continuously since. Where other press agents were satisfied to entrust their copy to messenger boys, George has personally delivered everything to the editorial sanctum of each publication—and, if you don't think that means work, you don't know the publicity "racket." He is a brother of Joe Reddy, Harold Lloyd's publicity representative these many years.

To our friends on the West Coast we commend George as a hard working, likable and square-shooting publicity man—than which a newspaperman can say no more of a press agent.

The Day of Youth

WHILE the exploits of a 25-year-old flier are filling the papers, it is worth noting that the winning author in the First National-College Humor story contest is a 21-year-old youth, Cornell Woolrich. He won the $10,000 award with "Children of the Ritz," which will be his second published novel.

Vilma Banky, Samuel Goldwyn star now playing in "The Magic Flame," presents a rose to Victor M. Shapiro, advertising and publicity director of United Artists, who publicized her during the first year after her arrival in America, when he was publicity director for Samuel Goldwyn.

George J. Reddy, for seven years with the Pathe publicity department, now westward bound as the new director of publicity for the Mack Sennett studios.

Harry Sinclair Drago, author of "Whispering Sage" and other novels, who leaves for Hollywood about June 1 to do screen originals for Fox Films Corporation.

Julius Stern, president of Stern Brothers Comedies, with Sunny McKeen, the Snookums of "The Newlyweds and Their Baby" comedies, during their stop in Chicago.

Jacques Burkhardt, M. H. Hoffman and Emil B. Burkhardt with the new third-dimension picture device invented by the Burkhardt brothers and to be handled in America by Mr. Hoffman.

Snookums Romps With "Cal"

AS a brilliant climax to his tour of exchange centers in the East and Middle West, Snookums, the baby star of Stern Brothers comedies, early last week called on President Coolidge in the White House at Washington, and enjoyed the distinction of a romp on the White House lawn with the nation's chief executive. While a score of cameras, both still and newsreel, clicked, Snookums and President Coolidge shook hands and got acquainted. The young screen star was presented by Senator Smoot, of Utah, who previously had fallen a victim to the baby's sunny smile and cute ways. The President smiled broadly at the youngster's trick costume, as seen on the screen, and at the elf-like spit of hair that is Snookums' badge of individualism.

The President stooped down to take the baby in his arms. Quick as a wink and with surprising agility, Snookums seized the President's hands and walked up the President's legs just as he is accustomed to do with his father, L. D. McKeen, a physical instructor. This surprised the President but it tickled him immensely and it threw the cameramen into feverish activity. Here was a new kind of a Presidential reception.

Safe in the President's arms, the baby smiled and talked to him, waved his chubby hands at the cameramen, and beamed upon his proud mother standing a few feet away. The President, Senator Smoot, Snookums and Mrs. McKeen then were snapped and filmed in various poses.

From Washington the Stern Brothers starlet is due to go to Atlantic City and thence to Bridgeport, Conn. After that he will be taken to New York City for a week or ten days, before returning to the Hollywood studio of the Stern Film Corporation.

Luminous Make-up

IRA MORGAN, a cinematographer at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, is working along interesting lines in the use of colored lighting to replace make-up. It is being tested on "Twelve Miles Out." Colored spotlights and "pin lights" of various colors, and hence varying photographic values, are thrown on various parts of the face. Blue lights may be used to lighten a too ruddy complexion, or red for shading, and so on.

Jones With F. D. D.

CHARLES REED JONES, who has been an advertising man, publicist and editor in New York and California for the past 10 years, has been appointed director of advertising and publicity for First Division Distributors, Inc., the new Jesse J. Goldburg distributing enterprise.

First National executives snapped in Chicago just before they entrained for Hollywood for the annual sales convention.

Tea for Leo Meehan

LEO MEEHAN, star director on the F. B. O. lot, passed through New York long enough to be made guest of honor at a tea given him by the company on Monday afternoon, at the apartment of Joseph P. Kennedy, president of the company, at 200 West 57th Street, attended by representatives of the entire motion picture press in New York.

Mr. Meehan left Hollywood a week ago for Rome City, Indiana, to shoot exteriors for his next film "The Harvester," but decided to come on to New York for one day, say "hello" to the executives in the East, and then return to Rome City, where the entire company awaits him.

Mr. Meehan is now on his way West, and expects to complete exteriors in Rome City in two weeks.

French Beauty to Coast

CHRISTIANE YVES, French beauty who appeared in some of the foreign made sequences of "Ben Hur," left New York last Sunday by automobile en route to the West Coast in response to a call from Fred Niblo. She was in films in France for three years, and was one of the Parisian beauties brought to Rome for the Lew Wallace drama. While in New York she has been a special guest of the French consul.

Members of the cast of Columbia's inter-racial comedy, "Pleasure Before Business," have been selected with unusual care as to type. Here are five members of the cast who appear in important roles; left to right, Rosa Rosanova, Pat O'Malley, Max Davidson, Virginia Browne Faire, and Lester Bernard

Miss Mark to Wed

MISS WINIFRED MARK, a daughter of the late Mitchell H. Mark, will be married to Victor Aubrey Lownes at the home of her mother on June 1. They will make their home in Buffalo, N. Y.

The Asterisk Chart

ONLY one subject was found worthy of receiving the little asterisk this week by the National Board of Review, Pathe Review No. 25.

Meet Gerard McBride

WILLIAM McBRIDE of the Miner Mithograph Company, who is a familiar figure at the Fox Film offices (which are our source of information), is celebrating the arrival of Gerard, a son and his third child, at the New York Nursery and Child's Hospital. Gerard was born early Saturday morning, May 14, just escaping by a few hours the "Friday the 13th" jinx.

FIRST returns from the baseball season of the M. P. league include Pathe's victory over Consolidated by a score of 13 to 10 and Warner Bros. defeat of United Artists, 17-14.

Plans are well under way for the annual film tennis tournament, and racket experts are busy practicing these days when the weather permits, which is not often.

Cameraman Honored

ARTURO GIORDANI, Pathe News cameraman at Rome, has had the Order of the Italian Crown with the rank of Chevalier conferred upon him by the King of Italy, in recognition of his services in bringing Italian news events before the world. He has been with Pathe some fifteen years.

Dolores Costello Coming East

DOLORES COSTELLO, Warner Brothers' star, will arrive in New York shortly for her first visit East since she entered screen work. Accompanied by her mother and her sister, Helene, who is also a Warner player, she will make the trip in time to be present at the first Broadway showing of her new production, "Old San Francisco," which is scheduled to open at the Warner Theatre on June 21.

It is two years since Dolores Costello has been in New York. At that time she was signed by Warner Brothers when she was appearing on the stage in George White's Scandals. Shortly after her arrival in Hollywood she was selected by John Barrymore as his leading lady for "The Sea Beast." This was followed by other pictures, including "When A Man Loves."

"Snookums" Captures Gotham

"SNOOKUMS," the baby starlet of "The Newlyweds and Their Baby" comedies, arrived in New York Wednesday on his tour of the East, and was received with an acclaim that would do credit to a Lindbergh. People crowded the curbs and jammed around the automobile which bore the youngster from the Grand Central Terminal to Broadway and Universal's New York exchange, 1600 Broadway.

A corps of news photographers, movie cameraman and reporters were at the train to meet the baby when he rolled in from Spuyten Duyvil, where he has been resting up for a week at the home of R. V. Anderson, of the International Newsreel Corporation, following his strenuous two weeks between Chicago and his visit with President Coolidge in Washington ten days ago.

After visiting the Big U exchange, the baby was taken to the Roosevelt Hotel, which will be his home for the next two weeks. That afternoon he made a personal appearance in the Wanamaker Auditorum in connection with a Baby Health Week program, built around his visit to New York. His subsequent days were marked with a series of interesting occurrences, such as a meeting with Mildred M. Pinkenfeld, New York City's 100 per cent baby, personal appearances in the Branford Theatre, Newark, and a visit to Bridgeport.

"King of Kings" Shea to Boston

JOSEPH C. SHEA, until recently grinding out belles lettres regarding the merits of "The Big Parade" for the benefit of the reading public of New York City, has transferred his typewritten affections to "The King of Kings." Joe left our midst this week bound for the city of beans, where he will arrange advance notices on the De Mille picture scheduled to open in that city June 13. Joe is doing lots more than telling the Bostonians about "The King" on this trip, as he has been made company manager, which involves counting the house, the cash, control of personnel, musicians, stage hands, etc. The production will be housed in the Tremont Theatre, and it is expected that the performances will run right through until the start of the Fall season. It would be a good idea for the city fathers of Boston to lay in an extra supply of tea and ice cream, for Joe's luncheon menu during the hot weather generally consists of three "balls" of ice cream and some iced tea—and a little hay fever.

Miss Hoffman Engaged

MR. AND MRS. H. HENRI HOFFMAN, of Midwood Manor, Brooklyn, announce the engagement of their daughter, Hermine, to Mr. David Lieberman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Emanuel Lieberman, also of Midwood Manor.

Miss Hoffman is a graduate of the Benjamin School For Girls, and has taken special courses at Columbia University and Cornell. Mr. Hoffman is Vice-President of Tiffany Productions, Inc.

Mr. Lieberman is a lawyer, a graduate of New York University Law School, and is associated with his father, who is one of the leading real estate operators in the Borough of Brooklyn.

Laemmle Entertains Diplomat

CARL LAEMMLE, president of the Universal Pictures Corporation, and his daughter, Rosabelle, entertained the German ambassador, Baron Von Maltzahn, at Beverly Hills last week. The function was a garden party, attended by several hundred guests, including public officials as well as motion picture executives and stars.

Dias Dorados, the magnificent estate of Laemmle, has been the scene of many brilliant entertainments in Los Angeles during the past few months. He will shortly close his home and arrive in New York the middle of June for his annual trip abroad.

Murray Anderson Abroad

JOHN MURRAY ANDERSON, producer of Publix stage shows, which open at the Paramount Theatre and then make a twenty weeks' tour of the country's leading cities, sailed Wednesday for England on the S. S. Aquitania. He will be abroad on a vacation of two months, during which time he will visit France and Italy. Upon his return, the early part of August, Mr. Anderson will resume his production activities for Publix at the Paramount Theatre.

Goodman Convalescing

ABE GOODMAN, assistant to Joe Fine, advertising manager of Fox Films, is rallying splendidly after an operation for appendicities at Dr. Farr's Sanitarium in Hoboken last week. Abe's many friends in the industry are pulling for his quick return to health and hope to welcome him back to his desk shortly.

Raymond S. Peck, Director, Canadian Government M. P. Studios, Dead

Raymond S. Peck

ASSOCIATES in the motion picture, government and business circles of Canada were shocked on May 27, to learn of the death of Raymond S. Peck, director of the Canadian Government Motion Picture Studio, Ottawa, in Ottawa Civic Hospital after an illness of three weeks, death being due to meningitis and complications, including symptoms of sleeping sickness. Mr. Peck was in agony for one week but lapsed into a state of coma nine days before he died.

In his passing, the Canadian Government has lost one of its most capable officials. He had brought the Government's film establishment from a small venture in 1920 to an organization that, in 1927, was known throughout the world. At the brief funeral service in Ottawa Friday evening before the body was shipped to Chatham, Ontario, for burial, there were countless representatives of the Government, Rotary Club, Y. M. C. A., Masonic Order, the moving picture business, the Ottawa Community Orchestra, Canadian newspapers, World's Poultry Congress, Canadian Confederation Committee, Canadian National Railways and other organizations with which he had been prominently identified during his life time of 41 years.

Mr. Peck began his career as a newspaperman and served with papers in London, Windsor and Detroit. He then became travelling representative for the Nash automobile company and the Firestone Tire Company, in the Southern States. Returning to Canada in 1917, he became a department manager with Canadian Universal Films at Toronto, and later manager of exchanges for the old Mutual Films. Prior to joining the Canadian Government in 1920, he was editor of the Canadian Moving Picture Digest of Toronto. During the last Imperial Conference in London, England, much of the discussion there regarding the moving picture situation within the British Empire revolved around data which Mr. Peck had prepared in Ottawa and which had been taken to the conference by Rt. Hon. W. L. M. King, Prime Minister of Canada.

"U" and Stanley Seek Footholds in Ohio

Westward Move of Theatre Company Arouses Interest; Film Firm Operates Through Schine Company

WITH both the Stanley Company of America and Universal seeking theatre footholds in Ohio that state becomes an important factor in the next development of the two circuits. The reports of the Stanley activity evoke considerable interest as this move marks the first advance westward of the circuit which, with West Coast Theatres, controls First National Pictures. Stanley and West Coast now are engaged on what is regarded as a nationalization of theatres. Stanley has an immediate building program of $10,000,000, while West Coast also is spending millions fortifying its position on the Coast.

In Cincinnati Stanley is dickering with Dan Conroy, president of the First National Bank of Portsmouth for acquisition of the three houses, these owned in whole or part by him. These include the La Roy, 1,600-seat house, showing a split week combination program of first run and four acts of Keith vaudeville; the Lyric, straight picture house and the Columbia. The first two are owned outright by Conroy, who has a one-third interest in the Columbia, with Fred Tynes owning one-third and Tynes' silent partner the remaining third.

Stanley, it is stated, wants all three houses or none, for the city now is in the throes of a price war which has every local house except the La Roy playing 15 cent matinees. The La Roy is 50 cents at night and all other houses 25 cents. With the La Roy operating under a "nut" of around $3,500 on the week, some extent of the effect of the slashings may be gained.

Chris Malavasos, who operates the Garden is declared to be dickering for a buyer, and, it is said, would welcome overtures from the Stanley circuit. Meanwhile, Variety Amusement Co., recently formed Cleveland chain, also is declared to be attempting to obtain a foothold here.

In Cleveland, Universal is entering the theatre field, through its subsidiary the Schine Enterprises, which operates around 70 theatres in upstate New York. The company is reported to already have gained footholds at Van Wert, Salina, Lima, Bucyrus, Sidney and Sandusky.

Several Cleveland exhibitors, owning out-of-town houses have been approached regarding sale of their houses to the Schine interests.

Latin Players Arriving For Work in Fox Studios

The S. S. "President Polk" of the Dollar Line which arrived in New York this week brought three new types of Latin beauty and personality for the studios of the Fox Film Corporation. From Naples, Genoa and Marseilles the "President Polk" transported the winners of the search for screen talent inaugurated and carried out by Fox Films in Italy and Spain last winter. The three are Senor Antonio Cumellas of Spain, winner of the contest for Spanish men; Signorina Marcella Battellini of Trieste, winner of the Italian contest for girls, and Signor Alberto Rabagliati, who won the contest for Italian men. With Signorina Battellini is her mother. The group will stay in New York for about a week and will then proceed to Los Angeles by way of the Panama Canal, arriving in Hollywood about June 23.

About 70,000 persons entered the contests in Italy and about 30,000 in Spain.

J. S. Woody Severs His Connection With Goldwyn

Because his plans for the screen production of "The Rise and Fall of Jesse James," compel him to leave Sam Goldwyn, J. S. Woody is returning to the motion picture industry in order to supervise the immediate production of the film depicting the life of the American bandit. Mr. Woody was granted a limited leave of absence by Mr. Goldwyn but this proving inadequate Mr. Woody was forced to terminate the business relationship. Mr. Woody made his first venture into the legitimate theatre recently by launching Frank Keenan in Eugene Walter's play, "Different Women" at the Woods Theatre in Chicago. The production of the life of Jesse James will be based on the life of that character by Robertus Love. Mr. Walker has worked for some time on the screen treatment and continuity.

Warner Bros. Releasing Four Films in June

The Warner Bros.' program of releases for the current month shows that four pictures, "The Black Diamond Express," "Simple Sis," "Dearie" and "What Happened to Father," will, in the order of their enumeration, come to exhibitors on June 4, June 11, June 18 and June 25. Monte Blue, Edna Murphy and Claire McDowell are in the first release, Louise Fazenda and Clyde Cook in the second, Irene Rich, William Collier, Jr., and Edna Murphy in the third, and Warner Oland and Flobelle Fairbanks in the final film scheduled for the month.

John Barrymore to Act in Modern Story

Instead of "Cellini," announced as John Barrymore's next production for United Artists, Barrymore will play his first modern screen role in five years in "The Tempest," an original story adapted by Fred de Gresac, described as a "realistic love drama." Frank Lloyd, director of "The Sea Hawk," will direct the new Barrymore number, the star's second independent production through United Artists. The story has three male characters.

Concerning a Certain Young Man Sought by Picture Producers

An Authentic Statement of Capt. Charles Lindbergh's Attitude Toward Motion Picture Offers, and a Prediction as to His Plans

By William A. Johnston

IF Capt. Charles Lindbergh, dauntless trail blazer of the air, accepts one of the many motion picture offers now before him, it will not be to appear in any lurid melodrama or cheap sentimentality. It will have to be a picture which promotes the general good of aviation in America—it will have to involve real money—and that money will go to advance the cause of aviation in some manner.

For strange as it may seem to an industry accustomed to celebrities who want to "cash in" even in advance of their achievements, Capt. Lindbergh is not interested in money—and that statement cannot be made too emphatic.

We make the statement arbitrarily, because we have it on the authority of Frank Tichenor, film man and publisher of The Aero Digest, who was with Lindbergh constantly until his departure, and one of our own staff men, L. C. Moen, who was in personal touch with Lindbergh on this subject during the week prior to the flight. And, we may add, some of those who unsuccessfully made offers to him at that time will concur with us in the statement.

Capt. Lindbergh's life since boyhood has been devoted to aircraft—he eats, breathes and sleeps aviation. The fact that he refers to his historic feat as accomplished by "we," himself and the plane, shows how near flying craft are to his heart. Money, to him, represents simply something with which to advance aviation.

If, therefore, some plan is evolved by which he may use the money received from a motion picture company to encourage or develop flying in America, he may accept—and if he does accept it will be to make a picture very different from the "mine run" of flying stunt films. If these conditions are not met, we make bold to predict that Capt. Lindbergh will reject any and all picture offers and go right on flying. One banking house has already extended the offer of unlimited financing for any plan he may choose, so he does not need picture money.

Frankly, it seems to us that any fictional melodrama from the typewriter of even the best of scenarists would pale into such dull lifelessness beside the stark, simple drama of his one flight, that it would be ridiculous and unfortunate to put him in "just a picture."

If a picture is to be made, what could be more appropriate and more forceful than the actual story of the New York to Paris flight? Why not do what the Russian picture makers have been trying of late in the re-creation of actual historic events? Show Capt. Lindbergh's boyhood, his first interest in aviaton, his exploits as a parachute jumper, his experiences as a student flier, in the mail service, his determination to enter the Paris "race," the building of the plane under his watchful eye, the one-stop flight across the continent, the anxious days of waiting for favorable weather, then the actual take-off and the breathless day and a half that followed until he again came into contact with his fellow men and the flash was received in a tensely watching America—"Lindbergh in Paris."

There is color enough, romance enough, drama enough, here for any picture. Stage it with an eye to reproducing the actual events authentically, incorporate newsreel shots where they are available, filling in the gaps where they are not. Such a picture, rightly made, could have all the realistic thrill of a "Chang" or a "Nanook," and is the only thing, it seems to us, which would be fitting and adequate. If the sloppy "love interest," a "menace," and the usual paraphernalia of the scenario writer's craft are to be introduced, we are heartily opposed to such exploitation of a stirring and dignified feat of valor. Such things are all right in their place, we do not deprecate them—but this is not their place.

No doubt capitalizing upon prominence in various lines has a certain legitimate place in the motion picture scheme of things, but Capt. Lindbergh's achievement and motives are so far above the usual ideas of dollar-coining that a mere commercial exploitation of them would be very little to the credit of this industry—and we are glad that Capt. Lindbergh is the type of youth with the sanity and ideals to refuse to be a party to it. We hope, and firmly believe that he will continue so.

Newsreels in Scramble for Lindbergh "Beat"

By L. C. MOEN

WHEN the liner "Majestic" arrived in New York on Tuesday morning carrying the negative of Captain Charles Lindbergh in Paris, a mad race to be first on Broadway and elsewhere followed. The customs authorities refused to permit any of the film to be taken from the liner at quarantine by the newsreel firms, and the negative for Pathe, Fox, Kinograms and International was all delivered at the battery on a cutter. From here the race began.

An independent check-up by MOTION PICTURE NEWS at the Broadway houses showed that Pathe News was received first, with Kinograms, International and Fox News following in about that order, with some individual variation.

Fox News devoted its entire mid-week reel to Lindbergh; Pathe News used 700 feet; Kinograms about the same; while International put out its regular Wednesday reel and another reel of about 700 feet of Lindbergh in addition, furnished to regular subscribers and also available to non-subscribers as a special.

Grainger Signs New 5-Year Contract With Fox

Agreement Said to Call For Highest Salary Ever Paid to Sales Executive in Film Industry

James R. Grainger

THAT J. R. Grainger will continue his association with Fox Film Corporation in the capacity of General Sales Manager is assured by the statement which has just been issued from the offices of William Fox, president of that company.

Mr. Fox confirms the signing of a contract by Grainger which extends his services with Fox Film Corporation for a period of five years from March 30, 1928. It was about two years ago that J. R., or Jimmy—as he is known to a host of friends in the motion picture industry—was appointed General Sales Manager of Fox.

Mr. Fox expressed himself as greatly pleased with the contract which had been executed between his company and Mr. Grainger. He said, "In the two years of close daily association which I have had with Mr. Grainger I have learned to admire and respect his keen judgment, dynamic driving power and thorough knowledge of motion pictures. I regard him as the outstanding personality in the field of motion picture sales executives."

Winfield Sheehan, vice-president and general manager, and who has for the past two years been in California in charge of production for Fox Film Corporation, likewise expressed his satisfaction. "Everyone connected with Fox is delighted with the extension of Jimmy Grainger's association. His knowledge of the requirements of motion picture theatres and his intimate touch with studio production make him a leader in his line. During the next five years, under Grainger's progressive leadership, big movements will occur in the distribution of Fox pictures."

The contract signed is said to call for the highest remuneration ever paid a sales executive in the motion picture business.

Mr. Grainger voiced his own satisfaction in the arrangement when seen at his office at Fox headquarters. "I have never been so happy in my work or in my business associations," he said, "as in the two years that I have spent as General Sales Manager for Fox Film Corporation. I have been in close, intimate, daily contact with Mr. William Fox and periodically with Mr. Winfield R. Sheehan during this period. I esteem it a privilege to be associated in business with men of their calibre and standing."

Seven New M. P. Firms Incorporate in New York

Last week witnessed about the usual number of motion picture companies incorporating at Albany in New York state. Records at the office of the Secretary of State in Albany, show that the following received charters: Charley Powers Pictures, Inc., capitalization not specified, Daniel G. Griffin, Julius Walerstein and F. E. Camus, New York City; Metex Film Laboratories, Inc., $50,000, Louis A. Benn, Albert T. Tamblyn, Andrew J. Harte, New Rochelle; Riviera Film Corporation, $100,000, Ercole Q. Montagna, Bruno DeSisti, Marie Pescatori, New York City; Wally Productions, Inc., $100,000, Walter J. Gluck, Richard J. Reynolds, Samuel A. Gluck, New York City; William Berinstein Theatre Service, Inc., $5,000, Julius, Harry L. and Benjamin M. Berinstein, Elmira; Irish Photo Plays, Inc., $10,000, Thomas L. Browders, George Crommery, Lillian M. Hayne, New York City; Komp Film Laboratories, Inc., $20,000, Herman J. Rieckers, LeRoy Danziger, Albert P. Wellheim, New York City.

German Raw Film Merger is Announced

Our Berlin correspondent, H. Fraenkel, reports that Agfa, the big German raw film concern, is going to tie up in the course of this year with the newly founded "Glanzstoff" raw film company. The Glanzstoff Company has been organized by the "J. G. Farben Anilin" concern, which is well known to be one of the world's mightiest industrial organizations, backed by many hundred millions of dollars. This tie-up which, according to our correspondent's report, is due within the next few months already, shall entail highly important consequences on the world's raw film market, as naturally the joined forces of those two concerns mean a very considerable power indeed.

Lubitsch is Welcomed By German Friends

Ernst Lubitsch, arriving at his home after five years' stay in America, was accorded a tremendous reception by the German trade. Many of his friends and numerous press representatives went to Hamburg to meet the famous director on his arrival. Our Berlin correspondent understands that Lubitsch is going to stay at least three months.

Broadway was largely due to unusually careful advance preparation. Detailed descriptions of all scenes were cabled to New York by the Paris cameraman, and the continuity of the reel was carefully planned, with titles in readiness, so that all that remained to be done after the film was received was to identify the scenes and insert them between titles.

The "Majestic" arrived Tuesday morning, at at 10:07 the first print was delivered by the Pathe laboratories and was in a Broadway house before the ship docked. Three master negatives arrived from France, and prints were rushed to every account in the country. In addition to extensive use of the U. S. Air Mail service, special airplanes were dispatched to Boston, New Haven, Atlanta, Cleveland, Washington and Baltimore. All told, the mileage covered by planes in delivering a portion of the 500 Pathe News prints made was more than three times that recorded by Lindbergh on his non-stop Paris flight.

Kinograms, in addition to devoting three-fourths of its regular news release to Lindbergh in Paris, compiled a one-reel Educational special, "The Race to Paris," including the Fonck-Sikorsky wreck, Byrd, Chamberlain, Davis and Wooster, the Bellanca endurance test, Lindbergh's plane under construction, the Byrd accident, the Bellanca mishap, the Davis-Wooster disaster, Nungesser and Coli, Lindbergh's trip across the continent, preparations for the flight, and the take-uff for Paris. The arrival in Paris was to be added as soon as received.

International Newsreel delivered its Lindbergh reel to Broadway houses at just 15 minutes past noon on Tuesday, and had it on the screen in Chicago, Milwaukee, Washington, Baltimore, New Haven, Boston, Providence and other cities the same evening. It was shown Wednesday night on the Pacific coast. Airplanes were used, both for delivery of prints to exchange centres and to make connections with air mail planes.

Fox News had four men covering Lindbergh's activities in Paris, and made equally elaborate efforts to obtain nation-wide distribution as quickly as possible, with aircraft playing an important role.

After seeing all four newsreels, it is difficult to choose among them. There is little exclusive material, since the cameramen for the various newsreel firms were working side by side during Lindbergh's stay in Paris. Personally, we liked the Fox News presentation, though the advisability of devoting an entire issue to any news event, with no variety, might be open to argument. The Pathe News reel made a favorable impression through its excellent titling and smooth continuity, while Kinograms and International also had interesting shots.

Regular subscribers to any one of the four newsreel services were all well taken care of, however, and the effort involved in getting out this subject is probably almost unprecedented in news weekly annals.

M.P.T.O. Convention Details Set

Election, Talking Films and Chain Theatres Leading Issues; Record Attendance Expected June Seventh

ALL details of the eighth annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America have been settled and final arrangements are being completed at Convention headquarters, Neil House, Columbus, Ohio, where the sessions will be held June 7, 8, and 9, with a golf tournament scheduled for June 6th, the day before the meetings are officially called to order. Reports from Columbus indicate a large representation from all quarters as the central geographical location of the convention makes it very convenient for exhibitors. It is predicted that 2,000 theatremen will answer the roll-call.

Election of officers and the debates on talking film will be among the highlights of the meeting; chain theatres will be one of the most important topics discussed and, with a constructive policy outlined for the delegates, indications are the circuits will be considered in the light of an inevitable revolution in the industry.

Speakers line up thus far include Governor "Vic" Donahey, C. C. Pettijohn, Nathan Burkan, S. L. (Roxy) Rothafel, Harry Reichenbach, H. M. Warner, Judge Moses Grossman of the Arbitration Society of America, and Edward A. Guest, the poet. It is possible that Nicholas Longworth, speaker of the House, will be among those to address the convention; Mayor James J. Walker of New York has not as yet definitely decided whether he will attend, due to pressure of official business.

P. J. Wood, business manager of the Ohio M.P.T.O., who is acting as secretary of the convention committee, reports all space at the motion picture exposition taken. The exposition, which will be on the same floor of the hotel where the convention meetings and banquet are held, will comprise close to fifty exhibits.

Mayor James J. Walker congratulating President R. F. Woodhull, of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, on his assumption of the duties of that office and wishing the organization and theatre owners the fullest measure of success at the coming Columbus Convention.

J. J. Harwood, chairman of the general convention committee, issues a final appeal to exhibitors to take advantage of the fare-and-a-half rate offered by the railroads. In order to secure this rate exhibitor must first secure a certificate from his local railroad station and, arriving at Columbus, must present it at convention headquarters where it will be authenticated. Upon presentation of the authenticated certificate the exhibitor (and his party) gets benefit of the half-rate on the return trip.

Secretary Wood announced this week that a complimentary ticket will be issued all delegates which admit themselves and party to all Columbus theatres, summer parks and American Association baseball games. Ohio exhibitors got together at a last moment rally and pledged support of their resources for the convention. It was also stated that Station WAIU, broadcasting station of the American Insurance Union, will co-operate with convention officials by broadcasting the banquet speeches for which Harry Reichenbach will act as toastmaster. There is considerable speculation as to the next president of the M.P.T.O.A. for the Middle West, long powerful in organization circles, is declared to be grooming several for the presidency. R. R. Biechele, William M. James, Frank J. Rembusch and W. A. Steffes are among Middle West leaders whose names are being mentioned. Steffes, it is stated, will come to the convention determined to bring the 1928 convention to St. Paul, where business men are making a strong bid for the event.

Eastman Wins in Supreme Court

Rules Federal Trade Commission Without Authority to Order Disposition of Developing Laboratories

ACCORDING to a decision handed down this week by the United States Supreme Court the Federal Trade Commission "had no authority to require that Eastman Kodak divest itself of the ownership of the laboratories which it had acquired prior to the action of the Commission." This opinion, delivered by Justice Sanford, arose from an appeal of the Federal Trade Commission which sought to order Eastman Kodak to dispose of its positive print developing laboratories and cancel an agreement of Eastman Kodak made with independent laboratories in and around New York whereby the independents agreed to use American-made raw film exclusively if Eastman Kodak would not compete with them in manufacturing prints. The Commission issued its order which Eastman took to the Appelate Court. The Court decided against the Commission on the first point and upheld it in the latter.

The order of the Commission was issued following an investigation of complaints against the company; it found that the company acquired three laboratories used in making and developing positive prints whose combined capacity exceeded that of all other laboratories east of Chicago. The Commission's investigation disclosed that Eastman Kodak announced its intention of entering upon the manufacture of such prints, which announcement resulted in the independent laboratories entering an agreement that they would use American-made film of which Eastman Kodak produced 94 per cent of the total, only, to the exclusion of foreign made films, so long as Eastman Kodak did not compete with them in manufacturing prints.

The Commission directed Eastman Kodak and the independents to cancel this agreement and also ordered Eastman to dispose of the three plants. The company carried the case to the Appellate Court which held that the agreement in question "was an unfair method of competition which the Commission had authority to prevent; but that it was not unlawful for Eastman to equip itself to enter upon the business of manufacturing prints and the Commission had no authority to order the company to divest itself of the laboratories."

The Commission thereupon appealed to the United States Supreme Court which, in its opinion, pointed out that in previous decisions, it had been held that the Clayton act has no application to ownership of a competitor's property and business obtained prior to any action by the Commission. The purpose of the act was to prevent the continued holding of stock. "If purchase of property has produced an unlawful status a remedy is provided through the courts," it was further pointed out.

"So here," the decision concluded, "the Commission had no authority to require that the company divest itself of the ownership of the laboratories which it had acquired prior to any action of the Commission. If the ownership or maintenance of these laboratories has produced any unlawful status, the remedy must be administered by the Courts in appropriate proceedings therein instituted."

A dissenting opinion was filed by Supreme Court Justice Stone, in which Justice Brandeis joined.

Expansion of Stanley Theatre Chain Will Cost $10,000,000 to Execute

AN expenditure of $10,000,000 is involved in the contemplated expansion of the Stanley Company of Philadelphia, directors of the corporation, were informed this week by John J. McGuirk, president of the corporation, when they met to increase the rate of dividends from $3 to $4.

Mr. McGuirk declared that the expansion program will be continued with all possible speed and with sound business judgment. An increase in payments to stockholders is justified, according to Mr. McGuirk, because of the prosperity enjoyed by the Stanley Company in every way. The 14 weeks ending April 2 realized a profit of $1,620,000, according to the Stanley president, who concluded his remarks by saying that the development of Stanley activities had been extremely rapid during the past few months.

Brandt Cites Cooperation

Columbia Can Secure Players of Bigger Companies Because of Production Ability, States President

ADDRESSING the Exhibitors League of Baltimore at a luncheon of the League held May 26 at the Southern Hotel, Baltimore, Joe Brandt, president of the Columbia Pictures, stressed the co-operation that exists between his company and the bigger producing organizations in the matter of Columbia's being able to secure players for its productions from those organizations.

One of the members of the League brought up the question of an independent company being able to get worth-while box-office casts because the favorites were under contract to the big companies; Mr. Brandt explained his company is able to secure players because of the fact that the big companies realize Columbia studios have the ability to produce pictures of a high calibre. In this connection Mr. Brandt pointed out that Columbia will have as a member of the cast for its production "The Blood Ship," Richard Arlen, loaned by Paramount, Hobart Bosworth and Jacqueline Logan.

Mr. Brandt was introduced to the League by O. D. Weems, Columbia representative in the Baltimore territory. During the course of his remarks he emphasized his company's enlarged studio facilities and ample finances, and gave a brief outline of Columbia's program for the coming season, touched on the advertising plans arranged and, in closing, stated that Columbia will leave no stone unturned to make the very best pictures brains, money and enthusiasm could make.

About forty-five theatres were represented at the luncheon including Mr. Lake, Hippodrome Theatre; Mr. Mornstein, Queen Theatre; Mr. Levine, Irvington Theatre; Mr. J. Levine, Realart Theatre; Mr. L. Henderson, Fulton Theatre; Mr. C. Nolte, Linwood & Baltimore Theatres; Mr. S. Saltz, New Howard Theatres; Mr. Moore, New Theatre; Mr. W. Stump, Garden Theatre; Mr. Snyder, Bridge & Edmondson Theatres; Mr. Saltz, Majestic Theatre; Mr. Miller, Republic Theatre, Annapolis, Md.; Mr. F. Hornig, Horn & Royal Theatres; Mr. C. H. M. Warner Talks to London Meet from N. Y.

A SIX-MINUTE address by H. M. Warner, president of Warner Bros., who sat at his desk in New York, opened the convention of Warner Bros. sales organization in London, England, on Tuesday, May 30. The wireless telephone was the medium used by Mr. Warner in making his talk. Delegates and representatives of the English press and trade papers heard his voice, beginning at 9:30, New York time. Amplifiers brought the executives' words to everyone in the hall where the convention took place. His company's plans for the coming months was the gist of Mr. Warner's talk.

Herman Starr presided over the London convention.

N. Y. Graphic Establishes New Rate on M. P. Ads.

Announcement has just been made that the New York Graphic an evening paper having the third largest circulation of the newspapers publishing in the metropolitan area, has established the run-of-paper rate on motion picture advertising.

The Graphic is the third New York daily to give motion picture interests the benefit of the commercial rate. Following the campaign waged by Hanff-Metzger, which handles the theatre and national advertising for Paramount, The Telegram and Staats-Zeitung announced a reduction from the usually high rate charged on amusement advertising.

The Jefferson Amusement Company, which is headed by Sol E. Gordon and the Clemmons brothers, will be the managing company. Robert H. Clemmons, supervisor of the Jefferson Amusement Company, will be the managing director of the East Texas theatres. He will be succeeded at Port Arthur by M. C. Clemmons, who has been in charge of the Jefferson Amusement Company's interests at Orange.

Universal Casts Keane for "Viennese Lovers"

A featured role in "Viennese Lovers," scheduled by Universal to be one of its important productions for the new season, has been assigned Raymond Keane, juvenile actor, who will play the young lover of Mary Philbin in the picture which F. Harmon Weight will direct. Jean Hersholt, one of the co-stars of the production, will play Miss Philbin's father. According to present plans, filming will be started within a few days under the supervision of Paul Kohner. Supporting players are now being cast.

Paramount News Staff Holding Convention

THE American members of the staff of Paramount News assembled this week, beginning Tuesday, for a four day convention at the Roosevelt Hotel in New York. This meet, according to Emanuel Cohen, editor of Paramount News, will be the first national convention of cameramen in the history of the newsreel. Wednesday, the first day of the convention, was devoted to an inspection tour of the Paramount offices and theatre, the Long Island laboratory and the new laboratory being erected in 43d Street. Thursday saw the news men assembled at the Roosevelt, where Mr. Cohen delivered the opening address. Other speakers and their topics were: A. J. Richards, "Feature Stories"; S. H. MacKean, "Covering News Stories"; W. C. Park, "Reel Makeup," and Stephen T. Early, "Contacts and the Associated Press."

Talks scheduled for Friday are: L. S. Diamond, "Organization"; Stanley B. Waite, "Distribution of Paramount News"; Miles F. Gibbons, "Local and Foreign Editions"; David Sussman, "The Laboratory"; Fred Waller, "Lenses and Filters," and Eugene La Roche, "Cameras."

The visiting cameramen will be tendered a banquet by home office executives on Friday evening at the Roosevelt. Individual problems will be discussed on Saturday.

Pathe-P.D.C. Announce Program

Ten De Mille Specials, Four Roadshows and 26 Releases from P. D. C.; Pathe Lists Features and Short Reels

ANNOUNCEMENT was made this week by the merged Producers' Distributing Corporation and Pathe Exchange, Inc., of the attractions comprising the complete screen programs for the season 1927-28. P. D. C. announces a feature schedule headed by ten De Mille Studio Specials, four roadshows, and 26 releases and Pathe lists a line-up of 40 or more features in addition to a number of all varieties of short length productions, embracing news films, magazine reels, serials and novelties.

The ten De Mille specials include the following:

"The Fighting Eagle," starring Rod LaRocque—a story of France in the days of the Napoleonic wars, based on Sir A. Conan Doyle's "Brigadier Gerard." Directed by Donald Crisp. Adapted by Douglas Z. Doty, supervised by C. Gardner Sullivan.

"The Blue Danube," starring Leatrice Joy, with Victor Varconi—a drama written about the haunting Strauss melody.

"The Westpointer," starring William Boyd, story of West Point produced with the cooperation of the United States Military authorities. Directed by Donald Crisp, continuity by Douglas Z. Doty, supervised by C. Gardner Sullivan.

"The Forbidden Woman," starring Jetta Goudal, with Joseph Schildkraut and Victor Varconi—a story of love and intrigue with a background of war in Morocco.

"Chicago," an all-star special with Phyllis Haver, Victor Varconi, Robert Edeson, Julia Faye, Louis Natheaux and May Robson—a screen version of the stage play of the same name by Maurine Watkins.

"Hold 'Em Yale!" starring Rod LaRocque—a college picture based on a story by Owen Davis.

"Power," starring William Boyd, a story of the mastery of man over the forces of nature, with a beautiful love story and a conflict between love and duty. By William C. De Mille.

"The Wreck of the Hesperus," a grim melodrama of the sea; based on Longfellow's famous poem. Directed by Elmer Clifton.

"Rip Van Winkle," with Rudolph Schildkraut, a screen version of Washington Irving's century old classic.

"Craig's Wife," with Victor Varconi, a domestic drama without the usual triangle, written by George Kelly.

Following is the list of the twenty-six DeMille releases, with stars and featured players. Detailed announcement of the directors is not available at this time.

"The New Yorker," starring Rod LaRocque, a story of smart modern society. "The Angel of Broadway," starring Leatrice Joy, a dramatic story of a clean living night club entertainer who dons the uniform of a Salvation Army girl for an act and who actually becomes the real thing. Story by Leonore Coffey. "The Rush Hour," starring Marie Prevost, a comedy based on the story, "The Azure Shore," written by Frederick and Fanny Hatton. Directed by E. Mason Hopper, continuity by Zelda Sears and Fred Stanley. Supervised by F. McGrew Willis.

"The Skyscraper," starring William Boyd, a romance of the modern skyscraper. Story by Dudley Murphy, supervised by Walter Woods. "Beautiful But Dumb," starring Vera Reynolds, a comedy drama based on Richard Harding Davis' story, "The Bar Sinister," by Clara Beranger. "He's My Man," with Phyllis Haver, written by Peter B. Kyne. "The Leopard's Lady," starring Jetta Goudal, a picture of circus life and of a girl who as a lion tamer is the central figure. Written by Clara Beranger.

"Such Is Fame," with Rudolph Schildkraut, a screen romance, written by Richard Connell. "Stand And Deliver," starring Rod LaRocque, a war story with Greece as its locale. "Self Defense," starring Leatrice Joy, a story of a young married couple who live beyond their means and who get into difficulties. From Wallace Irwin's "All Front and No Back."

"The Girl In The Pullman," starring Marie Prevost, a farce, made from Wilson Collison's farce, "The Girl in Upper C." "Walking Back," starring Vera Reynolds, a story of a flapper and her boy friend who are mixed up with a band of crooks. From George Kibbe Turner's story, "A Ride in the Country." "The Wise Wife," with Phyllis Haver, a comedy based on Arthur Somers Roche's Cosmopolitan serial.

"Midnight Madness," starring Jetta Goudal, a love story involving a girl and two men in the jungles of Africa. "My Country," with Joseph and Rudolph Schildkraut. Story by Julien Josephson. "What Holds Men," starring Leatrice Joy. Story by Margaretta Tuttle. "In Bad With Sinbad," with Franklin Pangborn, The story of an Englishman's adventures with hijackers, waterfront bullies, taxi bandits; story by P. G. Wodehouse.

"Let 'Er Go, Gallagher," with Junior Coghlan, a screen version of Richard Harding Davis' story of newspaper life. "Free And Easy," starring Marie Prevost, story [illegible] "The Heavy Appendix," by Frederick and Fannie Hatton. "The Heart Of Katie O'Doone," starring Vera Reynolds, story by Leroy Scott.

"Woman Of The Night," starring Jetta Goudal, a mystery drama by Max Marcin. "On To Reno," starring Marie Prevost, story written by Joe Jackson. "The Main Event," starring Vera Reynolds, love drama of the prize ring.

"My Friend From India," with Franklin Pangborn, a screen version of the stage farce. "A Blonde For The Night," starring Marie Prevost, a comedy by Wilson Collison.

The supporting casts in each of the pictures alluded to in the foregoing, will be selected not only from Mr. DeMille's stock company, but also from the best available talent wherever found. It is planned to release the foregoing pictures as follows: Five in September, four in October, four in November, and three in December, 1927, and four in January, four in March, four in April, three in May and two in June, 1928.

The four DeMille road shows include Cecil B. DeMille's "The King of Kings," "The Pioneer Woman," "The Army Mule" and another Cecil B. DeMille personally directed picture with a cast including Joseph Schildkraut, Jacqueline Logan, Robert Edeson, Julia Faye and Louis Natheaux, the title of which is not announced.

The Pathe feature program offers a wide diversity of multiple-reel entertainment. Harold Lloyd will be presented in a reissue of his feature-comedy, "Grandma's Boy," in which he was supported by Mildred Davis. Charles Chaplin will be offered in a reissue of his "Sunnyside," and, in addition to the subjects mentioned above, there will be a series of three Monty Banks feature comedies and five series of outdoor westerns totalling 40 pictures.

Monty Banks' first release of the new season will be "A Perfect Gentleman," in which Ruth Dwyer appears opposite. Leo Maloney, is aided by his trained horse, Monte Cristo, and his dog, Bullet. "Border Blackbirds" will be one of his first releases for this season and "The Devil's Twin" will probably follow.

Lester Scott, Jr., will offer his trio of Western stars in twenty-four out-door features. Buffalo Bill, Jr., will appear in "Pals In Peril," "The Interferin' Gent" and others, making up the eight of the series.

Buddy Roosevelt has just finished "Code Of The Cow Country" and is now making "The Phantom Buster," which are typical of the eight in his series.

Wally Wales has just completed "Skedaddle Gold" as the first of his eight pictures. George Walsh will appear in a series of melodramas being produced by Pathe. They will probably number six, the initial vehicle featuring Walsh, supported by Claire Adams and Gladys Hulette.

Eight other features embracing comedy and melodrama will be placed on the schedule.

New Faces Join Roster of Christie Players

JANE MANNERS and Doris Lawson, two new feminine screen personalities, have just been signed to appear in Paramount-Christie Comedies. The two girls will appear with Bobby Vernon, Billy Dooley, Jimmie Adams, and other Christie comedians.

The first two Paramount-Christie comedies to be released this fall by Paramount will be "Short Socks," starring Bobby Vernon, and "Row, Sailor, Row!" starring Billy Dooley. These pictures are now in production at the Christie studio, the facilities of which have been enlarged to handle the production schedule for the new season.

Skouras on Roadshowing

Declares Showing in Legitimate Theatres Poor Management on Part of Distributors

IN the opinion of Spyros Skouras, president of Skouras Bothers' Circuit in St. Louis, roadshowing of pictures in legitimate theatres is poor management on the part of distributors, and he believes this view is shared by a majority of theatre owners.

Mr. Skouras states that, "In playing their super pictures in the antiquated type of legitimate theatres they are giving their product the worst possible atmosphere and surroundings. In every important city there is a modern well ventilated motion picture theatre where these super films could be presented.

"Certainly an exhibitor doing business week in and week out with a film company is entitled to consideration. If this exhibitor is so situated that he can furnish a first class modern theatre why should the film company ignore him and play its picture in a theatre which handicaps his presentation in every way?

"With the possible exception of New York and Chicago roadshow pictures often are presented early in the fall or late in the spring. The legitimate theatre is not equipped with a cooling system and therefore the picture suffers. I happen to know of two roadshow presentations in St. Louis which were killed because of adverse weather conditions in the spring. If these pictures had been played in a motion picture theatre this would not have occurred.

"The producer also must not lose sight of the fact that the motion picture is the life of his business. Why then is it constructive to throw his greatest strength into the legitimate theatre? To an exhibitor this appears to be lack of vision on the producer's part and it should not require argument or red tape to convince him that he is not exercising sound judgment."

Educational Actors Active

Lupino Lane and Lloyd Hamilton Engaged on First Comedies of New Series; Other Funsters Busy

ACTUAL camera work on new comedies has been started at the Educational studio where Lupino Lane, Lloyd Hamilton, Dorothy Devore and others are now busy on the production of their respective vehicles. Announcements of initial comedies in several series has been made by Educational Film Exchanges, Inc. Lupino Lane will star in a "fire" picture. "Toy" Gallagher, who was featured in Cameo comedies last year, is Lane's leading lady in this production. An entire company of fire apparatus, besides the fire-fighting equipment at the Educational studio, will be employed in the picture. For the fire highlight Educational has constructed a three-story studio building.

Charles Lamount, who until recently directed "Big Boy" in juvenile comedies, is directing the Lupino Lane comedy.

The role of a new army recruit will be Lloyd Hamilton's first for the new season. Estelle Bradley, who appeared opposite Hamilton in "Goose Flesh," an Educational June release, will again act as Hamilton's leading lady.

Stephen Roberts is directing Clem Beauchamp and Phil Dunham in the first Mermaid comedy to be placed into production. Sixteen comedies will make up the Mermaid series with Beauchamp, Dunham, George Davis and others slated to enact leading roles. Dunham has the principal role in "Night Owls," a new comedy of the Cameo brand.

"Giddy Gobblers," Neal Burn's latest Christie comedy, will have Edna Marion as the chief feminine player.

Columbia Buys New Los Angeles Studio

AS AN outward indication of its policy of expansion for the season of 1927-28, Columbia Pictures Corporation announces through its vice-president, Harry Cohn, who is also in charge of production, the purchase of the Horsley studio located at 1439 Beachwood Drive, Los Angeles. Involved in the deal are extensive studio grounds, a two-story cement and frame structure housing eight offices, a large stage downstairs and dressing rooms and other quarters above. Various producing equipment is also included in the transaction. The Horsley studio adjoins the property of the company on Gower Street. The new property doubles the stage capacity and givs Columbia one of the largest studios in the Hollywood section. Both of the plants will be combined and run under the name of Columbia studios.

Sam E. Rork and Daughter Arrive From West Coast

Accompanied by his daughter Anne, Sam E. Rork, producer for First National, arrived in New York this week intending to stay for a week or two. While in the city Mr. Rork will confer with Richard A. Rowland regarding "A Texas Steer," a special production starring Will Rogers which will be his next picture.

Miss Rork will have an impoprtant part in "A Texas Steer," which Mr. Rork expects to place in work around the middle of July with Richard Wallace directing. Paul Schofield is doing the adaptation of "The Texas Steer" from Charlie Hoyt's old farce.

Pathe-P. D. C. Program is Announced

Mack Sennett will offer three series of twelve comedies each: Mack Sennett Comedies, a series of twelve two-reelers, enacted by such comedians as Billy Bevan, Madeline Hurlock, Eddie Quillan, Andy Clyde, Barney Hellum, Mary Mabery and Alma Bennett; Mack Sennett Girl Comedies, a series of twelve two-reelers, offering the bathing girls in sprightly fun; and Sennett-Smith comedies, a series of twelve two-reel comedies featuring Mary Ann Jackson, Ruth Hiatt and Raymond McKee, supported by the Sennett stock company of comedians. Sennett will also offer two new Harry Langdon Comedies — "Soldier-man" and "Fiddlesticks," also two two-reelers starring Ben Turpin—"Love's Languid Lure" and one to be announced.

Gaiety Comedies—a series of two-reel domestic comedies enacted by Taylor Holmes and Leah Baird. Lawrence Windom is directing this series under the supervision of Leander De Cordova at Studios on the West Coast. Roy McCardell prepared the scenarios for the first three pictures.

Hal Roach will offer a number of brands of comedies, including, Will Rogers in a series of twelve one-reel featurettes, entitled "Will Rogers our Unofficial Ambassador Abroad." Grantland Rice Spotlights, a series of twenty-six one-reel films revealing the best in sport. J. L. Hawkinson, the producer of this series, is now in Europe gathering new material.

Patheserials—five ten-chapter serials—will be released during the coming season including: "The Crimson Flash," a mystery melodrama by George Arthur Gray, directed by Arch Heath, with a cast including Cullen Landis, Eugenia Gilbert, and Thomas Holding: "The Hawk of the Hills," also by George Arthur Gray, directed by Spencer Bennet, and enacted by Allene Ray, Walter Miller and Frank Lackteen: "The Masked Menace," adapted by Paul Fairfax Fuller from Clarence Budington Kelland's Saturday Evening Post story "Still Face," directed by Arch Heath and enacted by Larry Kent, Jean Arthur and Thomas Holding. Other serials will include "The Man Without a Face," by A. M. and C. N. Williamson, and Edgar Wallace's "The Terrible People" and "The Fellowship of the Frog."

"Rarebits," a series of twelve one-reel novelty films to be edited by Beth Brown. "The Weaker Sex" will be the first release.

Pathe News—104 issues of the news film edited by Ray Hall and filmed by cameramen in every part of the world. Pathe Review—52 issues of the screen magazine released at the rate of one reel a week.

Aesop's Film Fables—52 releases of the cartoon reel supervised by Paul Terry and produced by the studio staff of Fables Pictures, Inc., of which Amedee J. Van Beuren is President. Topics of the Day—52 releases of wit and humor culled from the press of the world, by the editorial staff of Timely Films, Inc., of which Amedee J. Van Beuren is President, and Charles McDonald is Editor in Chief. Other short subject series will be announced later.

Brenon Finishes Casting "Sorrell and Son"

Herbert Brenon, who is to make a screen version of the successful novel, "Sorrell and Son," as his first independent production for release through United Artists, this week announced from Hollywood his selection of players to portray the characters of the book. They are as follows: Stephen Sorrell, father, H. B. Warner; Christopher Sorrell, son, as man, Nils Aster; Christopher Sorrell, as boy, Mickey McBann; Fanny Garland, Alice Joyce; Molly Roland, Mary McLean; Thomas Roland, Norman Trevor; Florence Ralfrey, Carmel Myers; Dora Sorrell, Anna Q. Nilsson; Sergeant-Major Buck, Louis Wolheim and Dr. Semon Oragge, Paul McAllister. Nils Aster is a 25-year-old Swedish-born actor, who makes his American debut in "Topsy and Eva." Louis Wolheim and Paul McAllister have both appeared in United Artists' pictures, the former in "Two Arabian Knights" and the latter in "The Winning of Barbara Worth."

Brenon has signed James Wong Howe, formerly with him at Paramount, as chief photographer for this production. No actor has as yet been chosen for the role of Kit, although Brenon is seeking players indicated as the public's preference for the parts.

Chicago's Woodlawn Theatre Sold to Lubliner-Trinz

Andrew Karzas' Woodlawn Theatre, Chicago, about which there have been rumors for many months, has been sold to B. F. Lindheimer, who represents Lubliner & Trinz interests in their various real estate transactions. The consideration for the property, part fee and part leasehold estate is reported to be $1,063,000 cash.

It is reported on good authority that Mr. Lindheimer is head of a syndicate, which will erect a $1,500,000 structure on the Woodlawn Theatre site, which will include a three-story, two thousand seat theatre, a ten story hotel and a six story office building. It is further said that the proposed theatre has been leased to Balaban & Katz who are vitally interested in this neighborhood through their Tivoli Theatre.

The sale discloses, however, the retirement, whether permanent or not, of Mr. Karzas from the motion picture field, for in addition to the Woodlawn Theatre sale, the lease on the North enter Theatre, at Lincoln and Robey, and also on the State Theatre at Hammond, was assigned by the Karzas Theatre Corporation, to the Lindheimer interests, Lubliner & Trinz having taken over the operation of these theatres a few days ago.

Abe Fabian Dies After Long Illness

Abraham M. Fabian, son of Jacob Fabian, of the Stanley-Fabian Corp., died Wednesday after a long illness following a nervous breakdown. Funeral services were held at Paterson, N. J., Thursday.

He withdrew from active participation in business last year.

James Cruze With Pathe-P. D. C. De Mille Announces at Convention

James Cruze

JAMES CRUZE has joined Pathe-P. D. C. as one of its producers and will direct two road-show attractions and supervise three regular releases for the company, was an announcement of Cecil B. De Mille at the joint convention of the Pathe-P. D. C. mid-western sales forces at the Hotel Stevens, Chicago, last week. The announcement of Cruze' affiliation with the company was one of the highlights of Mr. De Mille's talk in which he outlined the program for the coming season.

Mr. Cruze will establish himself at the Metropolitan studios, in Hollywood, and will make "The Pioneer Woman" and "The Army Mule," which will be produced on an elaborate scale; he will also supervise production of "My Friend From India," a picturization of a stage farce, "The Skyscraper," starring William Boyd, a romance of a modern skyscraper by Dudley Murphy, and "The Night Flyer," a drama of the railroad from the story by Frank Speerman, "Held for Orders."

Another statement of Mr. De Mille was to the effect that Walter Woods, who has been associated with Cruze on many of his productions, has been signed as a production supervisor.

B'klyn Building Program Totals $25,000,000

Paramount, Fox and Universal Theatre Projects Included in List of Twenty-One

OF all sections in the New York and New Jersey zone, Brooklyn and Queens have probably shown a more marked increase in theatre projects and actual construction than any others, according to reports which include one issued by the Brooklyn Real Estate Board to the effect that a minimum expenditure of $25,000,000 will go for theatre development in the Brooklyn Borough during 1927.

Twenty-one projects are listed, from the two big de luxe theatres planned by Fox and Paramount in the downtown Brooklyn section, to the several neighborhood houses. The cost of the Fox project is estimated at $8,000,000, while Paramount's investment in a proposed theatre and office building is said to run around the $5,000,000 mark.

Paramount is also reported to have plans under way for the erection of two de luxe neighborhood theatres; one at Flatbush and Tilden avenues, and one in the Jamaica territory. Both of these will directly compete with smaller suburban theatre circuits, and will probably seat about 3,500 each.

Universal's new neighborhood house, in the Boro Park section, designed by John Eberson, famous Chicago architect and said to be the first atmospheric theatre to be erected in Metropolitan territory, is fast nearing completion. The first part of September will undoubtedly witness its opening. Universal also has two others under way at Kingston and New York avenues on Empire Boulevard, and at Pineapple and Fulton streets in the Brooklyn Heights section.

In Brooklyn and on Long Island, the A. H. Schwartz theatre chain has several new theatres under way.

American Legion Honors S. L. Rothafel

BEARING the signature of Howard P. Savage, national commander of the American Legion, a bronze placque and an honorary certificate setting forth a resolution of the National Executive Committee of the American Legion, in session at Indianapolis, Indiana, was presented on Memorial Day to S. L. Rothafel in recognition of his humane work with wounded war veterans in various hospitals.

The resolution contained an expression of the sincere thanks and appre- wounded men are receiving entertainciation of the Legion for the origination by Roxy of the plan whereby the wounded men are receiving entertainment via the radio.

Dorothy Devore Starts Working for Educational

Dorothy Devore recently signed to a contract whereby she will make six comedies for Educational, started working on the first of the series on June 1 under the direction of Norman Taurog, who has just finished directing Lloyd Hamilton. During the past year or more Miss Devore played the star role or feminine lead in a number of feature productions of different companies.

Ten Paramount Players Renew Their Contracts

During the past week or so ten players, including six junior stars, re-signed with Paramount. The graduates who renewed their contracts were: Ivy Harris, Thelma Todd, Charles Rogers, Jack Luden, Walter Goss and Josephine Dunn. Paramount views their re-signing as proving beyond doubt the success of Paramount school, that it proved valuable both to the corporation sponsoring it and the students who attended it.

Norman Kerry With Greta Garbo in M-G-M's "Love"

The male lead in "Love," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's forthcoming production and Greta Garbo's initial starring vehicle, will be Norman Kerry and the rest of the cast will consist of Lionel Barrymore, Zazu Pitts, Helene Chadwick, Mario Carillo, Andre Beranger, Dorothy Sebastian and Maude Turner Gordon. It had been originally intended to give the romantic lead in "Love" to Ricardo Cortez, but the selection of Kerry was made necessary because of the casting of Cortez for the romantic lead in "Terror." "Love" is now in work and is being produced on an elaborate scale at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio.

M-G-M to Star Chaney in "The Wandering Jew"

"The Wandering Jew," a novel which has also been adapted to the stage, will serve as a forthcoming vehicle for Lon Chaney. Eugene Sue's story has been in the hands of the staff of scenarists at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio for some time. According to present plans Chaney will be starred in at least three new pictures for the present season. These are "The Hypnotist," "Hate," based on Frank Packard's "The Four Stragglers," and an adaptation of "Seven Seas," the prize story by Gaston Leroux.

No'west T. O. Contract for Columbia Product

A contract signed this week by W. A. Steffes, president of the M. P. T. O. of the Northwest, and Joe Brandt, president of Columbia Pictures, consummates negotiations for the distribution of Columbia's group of thirty pictures in Minnesota, North and South Dakota and the Upper Peninsular of Michigan. The Northwest M. P. T. O., which is a branch of the national organization, becomes, with the acquisition of the Columbia product, the largest independent exchange in the territory, although it is only two years old.

Dorothy Farnum Signs Contract With M-G-M

Dorothy Farnum, scenarist, has signed a contract for one year with the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer company. She will write original stories, adaptations and continuities.

Fox Films Signs Lois Moran to Contract

A CONTRACT by means of which she will become an exclusive Fox star has been entered into by Lois Moran with Winfield R. Sheehan, vice-president of Fox Films. The young actress will begin working on her first picture of the new season at the Fox Films studio on the West Coast about July 15, according to an announcement from Mr. Sheehan. She will work under the direction of Dr. Ludwig Berger, director of "The Waltz Dream," in a picture to be called "I Don't Want to Marry," an adaptation of "Ich Heirate Nicht," a Hungarian stage success by Bela Szenas. Mr. Sheehan's announcement says that Miss Moran's screen personality will, in the Fox pictures, be transformed from a sweet ingenue to the modern, vivacious girl, appearing for the first time in the picture with bobbed locks.

More Gotham Distributors Announced by Lumas

Five additional Gotham franchise holders, who will distribute the Gotham brand of productions during the coming season, are announced by Budd Rogers, vice-president of Lumas Film Corporation, who returned last week from a visit to the exchanges in the Central States. Signing up for another year of Gotham features are Security Pictures Co. of Ohio, which will serve exhibitors in Ohio and Kentucky; Favorite Film Corp., which will serve Michigan from Detroit; Messrs. Montague and McConville of Boston, who have held the Gotham franchise for the past three y ears, and who will continue to serve New England through Consolidated Films, Inc.; Jack Lannon of the Columbia Exchanges, Inc., of Seattle, Washington, who will cover Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming and Alaska.

Postpone Opening of "First Auto" Until June 27

Changing its plans for the first presentation of "The First Auto" to allow an extra week to the engagement at the New York Colony of "The Missing Link," Warner Bros. has postponed the opening of the racing story, an extended run production, from June 22 to June 27. In "The First Auto," which will replace the Syd Chaplin comedy at the Colony, are Barney Oldfield, veteran racer of autos, Patsy Ruth Miller, Russell Simpson, Frank Campeau, William Demarest, Paul Kruger, Gibson Gowland, E. H. Calvert and Douglas Gerrard. Roy Del Ruth is the director.

Columbia Signs Players for Three Pictures

Johnnie Walker, John Bowers and Ann Christie were signed by Harry Cohn, vice-president of Columbia Pictures in charge of production, this week for roles in Columbia films. The title role in "The Kid Sister" was filled this week by Miss Christie. John Bowers will have the leading male role in "For Ladies Only" while Johnny Walker will play the juvenile lead in "The Clown."

Ministers Make Religious Number on Vita

THE week of June 10, the occasion of the centennary of Jamestown, New York, when the celebration of the city's birthday will be the sole aim of Jamestown, will feature the first number on the Vitaphone for religious purposes—the voices and gestures of two ministers of the First Baptist Church of Jamestown, the Reverend W. H. Hickman and the Reverend W. J. Ford, representing the ministry of the community.

Vitaphone is producing this number gratis and for the purpose of helping the exposition and show the possibilities of the sound and screen device in spreading religious teachings. The number will not be sold, but will be loaned wherever the demand is great enough and at the discretion of the leaders of this enterprise. It will be shown at the Winter Garden theatre.

Albany Office of M.P.T.O. of N. Y. Closed Down

The headquarters of the Albany Zone of the New York State M. P. T. O., which have occupied a portion of the third floor in the Mark Strand building, are to be permanently closed at once, by orders of William Dillon, of Ithaca, president of the New York State M. P. T. O. A letter ordering the closing of the headquarters and the sale of all office furniture was received late last week by Louis Buettner, district zone manager.

The comparatively few exhibitors now paying dues into the Albany Zone will be notified to pay their dues hereafter to the Buffalo Zone. According to President Dillon's letter, the closing of the Albany headquarters is necessary on account of lack of finances and one which he regrets. It is claimed that the exhibitors of northern and central New York have shown but little interest in maintaining the headquarters.

Sparks Assuming Management of Florida Theatres

Management of the Imperial, Republic and Rialto theaters of the Public operations in Jacksonville, Fla., the Palace and Strand at Lakeland, and the Pheil and Rex at St. Petersburg will be assumed by E. J. Spark's Enterprises begining May 29, under the pooling deal which negotiated in New York recently.

The Republic will be closed immediately for renovation, new policy will be instituted at the Imperial, and the Rialto will operate as usual until the Republic is again ready for business. Probability is that the Rialto will then be closed permanently.

The Palace and Strand at Lakeland will be operated under general supervision of Mr. Sparks, with B. B. Garner and M. C. Talley in charge. The Cameo will be closed for the summer.

"Manpower" Title of New Richard Dix Film

"Manpower" has been definitely selected as the title of Richard Dix's next Paramount picture.

Missouri Exhibitors Meet

Wehrenberg Re-Elected President M.P.T.O. of Bullion State and Southern Illinois; Mc Cawley Speaks

FRED WEHRENBERG, of St. Louis, Mo., was unanimously re-elected president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois at the annual convention of the organization held at the Elks' Club, St. Louis, Mo., on Tuesday, May 24.

Wehrenberg, who owns and operates the Melba, Cherokee, Michigan and Red Wing theatres in St. Louis, is the first exhibitor to be honored by re-election as president. Heretofore the head officer has held office but one year, and the renaming of Wehrenberg is a tribute to him personally and in recognition of his work the past year.

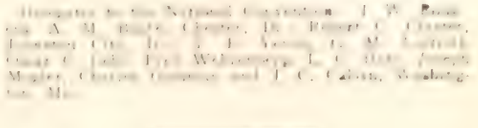
The principal speaker at the convention was State Senator A. L. McCawley of Carthage, Mo., who led the successful fight against Governor Baker's measure, the ten per cent tax on amusements and tobacco sales for public educational institutions. Others who addressed the gathering were Circuit Attorney Howard Sidener, State Senator Joseph Mogler, and State Representatives John Rees of Wellsville, Mo., and L. C. Hehl.

At the convention's afternoon session it was reported that to date the theatres of the territory have reported $4,156.64 in flood relief benefit show receipts. This figure does not include the big St. Louis first-runs such as the Missouri, Loew's State, Ambassador, the Orpheum Circuit House nor the twenty-four theatres operated by the St. Louis Amusement Company. With final reports from all theatres in the territory it is believed the grand total will approximate $15,000.

The meeting was adjourned until August 16, when reports will be received by the organization from the Committee on Ways and Means. The question of holding quarterly meetings instead of annual gathering will be considered by the Ways and Means and Executive Committee and some action may be taken at the August 16 meeting.

At the banquet held on the Elks' Club Rathskeller at noon covers were laid for 134 persons.

The other officers elected by the organization were:



Vice-presidents, I. W. Rodgers, Cairo, Ill., and Poplar Bluff, Mo.; W. W. Watts, Springfield, Ill.; Jon F. Rees, Wellsville, Mo.; T. E. Yemm, Duquoin, Ill., and J. C. Hewitt, Robinson, Ill.; secretary, L. C. Hehl, St. Louis, Mo.; treasurer, Oscar Lehr, St. Louis, and sergeant-at-arms Green M. Luttrell, Jacksonville, Ill.

Executive Committee: Joseph Mogler, St. Louis; J. C. Hewitt, Robinson, Ill.; W. W. Watts, Springfield, Ill.; Charles Goldman, St. Louis; Maury Stahl, St. Louis; W. O. Reeves, St. Louis; T. E. Yemm, Duquoin, Ill.; L. A. Dernstein, Springfield, Ill.; I. W. Rodgers, Cairo, Ill., and Poplar Bluff, Mo.; T. M. James, St. Louis, Mo.; Miss Mable R. Miller, Madison, Ill., and Mrs. A. Hall, Dupo, Ill. The president, treasurer and secretary are also members of the executive committee.

The Board of Arbitration to work with representatives of the St. Louis Film Board of Trade in deciding disputes between exhibitors and distributors are Oscar C. Lehr, W. O. Reeves and Clarence Kaiman, all of St. Louis. The alternates are Wehrenberg and Mogler.

The Committee on Ways and Means: I. W. Rodgers, J. C. Hewitt, W. O. Reeves and T. E. Yemm. This committee was empowered to retain a paid organizer to thoroughly organize the territory in Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois.

The Resolution Committee: Oscar C. Lehr, Chester Kaiman, St. Louis; Charles Goldman, T. M. James and John F. Rees.

Canadian Music Society Canvassing Theatres

The Canadian Performing Rights Society, Limited, Toronto, is canvassing theatres, hotels, dance halls and fall fairs in Canada to take out licenses with the organization to cover copyright on British musical compositions. The cost of licenses to theatres is rated at 15 cents per seat per annum.

As a counter move the Musical Amusement Association is reorganizing as the Musical Protective Association with headquarters at Toronto, the new association to be incorporated. N. L. Nathanson, managing director of Famous Players Canadian Corp., and Sir Henry Thornton, president of the Canadian National Railways, are sponsoring the new organization. The original association was formed by Col. J. A. Cooper, president of the Motion Picture Distributors and Exhibitors of Canada; J. C. Brady, president of the Ontario M. P. T. O.; Jerry Shea of Shea's Hippodrome, and Jack Arthur of the Uptown and Regent Theatres, Toronto.

T. O. Protest Presence of Carnivals at Ottawa

A VIGOROUS protest against the presence of carnivals on the civic playgrounds of Ottawa, Ontario, was entered before the Ottwa Board of Control by a deputation representing the Theatre Owners' Branch of the Retail Merchants Association of Ottawa, when a resolution was presented asking for a complete ban against the carnivals or the establishment of a license fee of $200 per day.

The exhibitors, who were headed by P. J. Nolan, proprietor of the Rex and Wellington Theatres, told the Board of Control that the carnivals were conducting their activities in the name of charity, but that they were really disguised commercial enterprises, drawing an undesirable element and retaining practically all receipts. They paid no taxes to the city, and yet they provided unfair competition for the local theatres which had hundreds of thousands of dollars invested and paid heavy taxes and municipal fees.

The deputation included Mr. Nolan, J. M. Franklin, manager of B. F. Keith's Theatre; Ray Tubman, manager of the Regent and Imperial Theatres; J. T. Moxley, Francais Theatre; Solomon Coplan, Princess Theatre; Ambrose Nolan and J. K. Paisley, manager of the Ottawa Fair.

Two Educational Films Finished for June Release

The new Educational-Christie comedy featuring Neal Burns has been titled "Giddy Gobblers." It has been completed for release early in June. Al St. John will be featured in an Educational-Mermaid Comedy which has been titled "No Cheating," to be released in June. An unusually large and well-balanced supporting cast appears with the star in this comedy. Lucille Hutton is leading lady, while Clem Beauchamp, Phil Dunham, Jack Lloyd and Blanche Payson are included among the supporting players. Stephen Roberts directed.

Paramount Signs Lane Chandler for Westerns

Lane Chandler, a young Westerner only six months in Hollywood, has been signed to a long-time contract by Paramount and will play the leading role in "Nevada," the Zane Grey story in which Gary Cooper was to have been starred. Cooper instead will play a leading role in "Beau Sabreur."

Chandler, a year ago, was a passenger agent in Yellewstone National Park. A director of a two-reel Western being made there gave him a bit that turned out so well that Chandler came to Hollywood for a screen career.

First National Transposes Releases for June

Release dates on three of its five pictures to be released during June have been switched by First National. "Dance Magic" is now announced for release on June 12th instead of on June 26th. "Framed" will be released on June 19th instead of the 12th and "Naughty But Nice" on the 26th instead of the 19th.

"Land Beyond the Law" and "The Sunset Derby" will be released as scheduled on June 5th.

Beulah Livingston U. A.'s Coast Publicity Director

Beulah Livingston has been appointed by Joseph M. Schenck the West-coast Publicity Director for Feature Productions and units under the Schenck jurisdiction.

In her present post she will have a large organization working under her and will keep in close touch with Victor Shapiro, advertising and publicity director of New York for the United Artists.

Chase to Take Charge of Excellent's Sales-Service

Excellent Pictures Corporation announced this week the election to a vice-presidency in its organization of Maurice A. Chase, who will act as general sales manager, taking full charge of all sales and service problems in connection with the distribution of the 18 Excellent Pictures for 1927-28.

Samuel Zierler, president of Excellent, intends to give his personal attention to production. He leaves shortly for the Pacific Coast. Quite a number of Excellent's scheduled eighteen are already completed, including the Pauline Frederick picture, "The Nest," also "Back to Liberty," "The Stronger Will," "Your Wife and Mine," "Life's Crossroads." The others, according to present plans, including those in the making and others to follow, will be done at Hollywood.

Three Tiffany Pictures Ready for Release

"Backstage," "The Beauty Shoppers" and "Snowbound," three Tiffany productions, have been completed and are ready for release. The cast in "Backstage" includes William Collier, Jr., Barbara Bedford, Alberta Vaughn, Eileen Percy. In "The Beauty Shoppers" are Mae Busch, Doris Hill, Ward Crane, Dale Fuller, Thomas Haines and James A. Marcus. Betty Blythe, Bobby Agnew, George Fawcett, Lillian Rich, Guinn Williams and Harold Goodwin are in the leading roles of "Snowbound."

Charlie Murray to Portray Steve Brodie for F. N.

Steve Brodie, the man who became famous years ago by leaping from the Brooklyn Bridge into the East River, will be portrayed on the screen by Charlie Murray, according to an announcement from John McCormick, West Coast production chief for First National, who states that E. M. Asher will produce for his company a vehicle for Charlie Murray and George Sidney which will be titled "Steve Brodie Took a Chance."

Marceline Day Opposite Novarro in "Romance"

Miss Day played her first feminine lead Ramon Novarro in his next starring vehicle, "Romance."

Miss Day played her first feminine lead with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in "The Barrier." She had the feminine leads in "The Boy Friend" and "Rookies."

"Romance" will be directed by John S. Robertson.

Cantor Rosenblatt Signed for "The Jazz Singer"

Joseph Rosenblatt, cantor, is to appear in "The Jazz Singer," which will soon go into production at Warner Bros.' Hollywood studio. Cantor Rosenblatt was signed this week by H. M. Warner and is to appear as a singer—not as an actor.

Maugham Story Bought by Swanson

AFTER long negotiations the screen rights to Somerset Maugham's magazine story, "Sadie Thompson," have been acquired by Gloria Swanson as her next production for United Artists release. The announcement came from Miss Swanson in Los Angeles that "The Woman and the Puppet," the Pierre Louis story, which was to have been Miss Swanson's second independent production, is now postponed to follow the Maugham story. Through the courtesy of Winfield R. Sheehan, of Fox Films, the star has signed Raoul Walsh to direct "Sadie Thompson." The film will be made in the actual locales of the story, including San Francisco and the South Sea Islands. Production will be begun in June in California and the film will be released in November by United Artists.

New Dog Star in "The Harvester"

A setter dog, discovered by F. B. O. in Alameda County, California, and which has been under training for several months by Professor Hermany, German animal trainer, who formerly appeared in vaudeville throughout the United States with a troupe of performing dogs, will enact the part of Belshazzar, the canine in the Gene Stratton-Porter story, which is about to be produced in the exact locale described in the book. Hermany, who has studied the action mentioned in the story, has re-named the dog so that it now answers readily to the name of Belshazzar. Everything has been done to make the dog feel at home in his studio environment.

Joan Crawford in "Spring Fever," Haines Vehicle

On completing her role opposite John Gilbert in "Twelve Miles Out," Joan Crawford will be given the feminine lead in William Haines' initial M-G-M starring film, "Spring Fever."

Another addition made last week to the cast of "Spring Fever," was George K. Arthur.

Janet Gaynor Cast for "Two Girls Wanted"

Janet Gaynor, Fox Films feature player, is making active preparations for her appearance in "2 Girls Wanted," an Alfred E. Green production which will be launched at the West Coast Studios in the immediate future.

This play, by Gladys Unger, is now enjoying its ninth month in New York.

Walter Lang Signed to Direct for Columbia

Harry Cohn, vice president in charge of production for Columbia Pictures, this week signed Walter Lang to a contract to direct six of the company's 1927-28 productions. Lang's latest production before joining Columbia was "The Satin Woman" with Mrs. Wallace Reid.

Sennett and Roach Farces on Pathe Shorts Program

Mack Sennett's "Carol in the Ivy" and Hal Roach's "Love 'Em and Weep" are the two principal comedy releases on Pathe's group of shorts for the week of June 12. Madeline Hurlock and Billy Bevan are featured in the Sennett film and were directed by Earl Rodney under the supervision of J. A. Waldron from a story by Carl Harbaugh and Jefferson Moffitt. In the Roach offering are Mae Busch, starred, Stan Laurel, Jimmy Finlayson, Oliver Hardy, Charlotte Mineau and Vivien Oakland. They were directed by Fred L. Guiol under the supervision of F. Richard Jones.

Also on the schedule for June 12 are "Flying Feet," a Grantland Rice Sportlight; "Hard Cider," an Æsop's Film Fable, the concluding chapter of "Melting Millions," Topics of the Day, Number 24, Pathe Review, Number 24, and Numbers 50 and 51 of the Pathe News. The Pathe Review issue offers "Bits of Nature," "Before the Footlights Flash" and "Enchantment."

First National Buys "The Noose," Unpublished Play

Richard A. Rowland, general and production manager for First National, has just closed a contract for the screening rights to "The Noose," an unpublished stage play by Willard Mack and M. M. Van Loan, which had an all-season run on Broadway and which is now playing in Chicago.

Whitman Bennett Begins Work on Executive History

Whitman Bennett, active for many years in the film industry, but now retired, though not permanently, announces that he has finally begun working on The Executive History of the American Film Industry.

The book will cover the business side of the industry.

Two Universal Exch. Heads Win Trip

W. J. HEINEMAN of the Salt Lake City exchange and Morris Joseph of the New Haven office are the winners in the Western and Eastern divisions, respectively, of the sales contest between various exchanges during the fifteen week period ending May 7. As the result of their fine showings they will be awarded a free trip to Europe with Carl Laemmle, sailing from New York about June 29.

Competition proved so keen among contestants of the Southern division that a single winner did not emerge victorious from the spirited race. For fifteen weeks the Charlotte and Oklahoma branches ran point for point, ending in a dead heat. Because of this, E. F. Dardine and W. P. Moran, respective managers of the Charlotte and Oklahoma offices, will split the cash value of the trip to Europe.

In and Out of Town

J. I. SCHNITZER, senior vice-president of F. B. O., has returned to the home office in New York following the close of the tri-city F. B. O. convention in Los Angeles. Mr. Schnitzer visited St. Louis, Louisville, Indianapolis and Chicago on his return trip. Lee Marcus, general sales manager, is expected in New York about the end of the week.

MRS. PAUL [illegible] wife of the Universal director sailed for Europe several days ago on the S. S. Albert Ballin for Germany where she will spend some weeks with her mother before returning to America. Leni's work on a Universal film prevents his leaving accompanying his wife to Europe.

Italian Premier Approves Intern'l New S-M-G-M Plan

In an audience granted by Premier Benito Mussolini to E. B. Hatrick, in charge of all of William Randolph Hearst's motion picture interests, Edward Getlin, European manager of International News reel, and C. F. Curione, representing the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer interests, the arrangement between the Luce Film Company, the official Italian Government organization, and the Hearst interests, was personally approved by the Premier, a report from John P. Burke, Universal Service staff correspondent at Rome, states.

The agreement provides for the publication of photographs taken by the Luce and the exhibition of films produced by the Italian National Institute and for the exchange and diffusion of films educational in character as well as news events that occur in Italy.

Pathe Presents Wales and Hutchinson Films June 12

Two feature attractions will be offered by Pathe on June 12 in "The Meddlin' Stranger," starring Wally Wales, and "The Trunk Mystery," a mystery story in which Charles Hutchinson and Alice Calhoun have the leading roles. In the Wales vehicle, made by Lester F. Scott, Jr., are Nola Luxford, feminine lead, Charles K. French, Bob Fleming, Mabel Van Buren, James Marcus and Doris Karloff. "The Trunk Mystery" was produced by Productions, Incorporated, and it has Ford Sterling in a comedy role. Others in the cast are Otto Lederer, Lila Leslie and Ben Walker. Frank M. Crane directed and Frederic Chapin prepared the scenario from a story by Forest Sheldon.

Vita's Abraham Lincoln Number at Roxy Theatre

During the present week, Memorial week, fifty odd theatres around the country are using the Lincoln Caswell impersonation of Abraham Lincoln on the Vitaphone during which Caswell delivers the Gettysburg Address. The Roxy Theatre in New York is one of the houses offering the Caswell number.

Key City Reports

New York City

THE Memorial Day week-end saw record business at Broadway houses, with the thousands who left town apparently replaced by an even larger number of out-of-towners, judging from the milling throngs along Broadway on Monday. The Roxy claims total receipts of $70,540 for Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

Last week, with almost continuous rainy weather, business business was fairly good but not remarkable. The Paramount, with "Rough House Rosie," was the only house to show a substantial increase over the previous week, though the gross was still nothing to boast of. "The King of Kings" at the Gaiety also showed some increase.

Two houses, the Capitol and the Strand, had pictures in their second week. The Capitol did well enough with "Mr. Wu" to warrant satisfaction, and the Strand found "Resurrection" worthy of a third week, which does not happen often at this house.

"Chang" continues to draw strongly at the Rivoli, and "Beau Geste" on a grind basis at the Rialto brought in a nice gross. "The Missing Link" and Vitaphone stays around the $14,000 mark, with "The Big Parade," "Camille" and "The King of Kings," and "When a Man Loves" with Vitaphone at Warners goes along steadily at a figure a couple of thousand below this.

"Seventh Heaven" is off to a good start at the Harris, following "Glory," and the next week or two will show to what extent this can be counted on for a run. Chances look good.

Salt Lake City

THE fore part of last week the weather in Salt Lake was extremely cold, but picture business has averaged fairly good for this time of the year, both in first run downtown houses and the second run and neighborhood theatres.

"Afraid to Love" proved to be quite a big hit at the Paramount Empress with a special stage attraction. "Wedding Bills" did an average business at the Victory. "Madame Wants No Children" topped the double feature bill at the American; the other picture was Universal's "Held by the Law," and a fairly large crowd was drawn.

Belle Bennett in "Mother" was very favorably received at the Gem with capacity business having been enjoyed. "A Little Journey" went over fairly well at the Kimena as a second run production. "Spangles" topped the vaudeville program at the Orpheum, where an unusually good week has been enjoyed. An added attraction at the Orpheum was the LeChrist Dance Revue. Marion Davis in "Tillie the Toiler" is reported to have gone over very well at the Pantages in connection with their regular vaudeville entertainment.

Ottawa

WOW! A week with two holidays! that is what the exhibitors of Ottawa, Ontario, had during the week of May 23. One was Empire Day, May 24, and the other was Ascension Day, May 26. Civil servants, banks, schools and some stores observed the religious fete while the whole city was closed up for Empire Day—all except the theatres and they cashed in appreciably.

The Regent, under Manager Ray Tubman, had one of its best weeks with Lon Chaney in "Mr. Wu," with the Navy League Band of Victoria, B. C., as an added attraction. Chaney attracted big crowds both afternoon and night and the women patrons admitted that they liked him. Manager J. M. Franklin of B. F. Keith's was busy counting the money all week and the reason was that "Cabaret" made a real hit among all classes. Odali Careno, grand opera singer, also helped to swell the throng.

The Imperial Theatre, now under the Famous Players banner, also came up some more in its business standing, excellent crowds witnessing Kyne's "The Understanding Heart." At the Centre, Manager Don Stapleton also cashed in well with "Fashions for Women," matinee crowds being probably better than those of any other local house.

Outside of city league baseball, there were practically no counter-attractions for theatres during the week—not even a carnival.

Central Pennsylvania

LESS than average box office receipts were recorded by the Harrisburg picture theatres during the week, attributed in part to variable weather, with sharp changes in the temperature, and the fact that exhibitors generally looked upon it as a "between the seasons" period. There also is considerable unemployment in the city and environs just now.

Nevertheless Constance Talmadge brought satisfactory business to the Colonial in "Venus of Venice," which was accepted as clever light entertainment. At Loew's Regent "Lovers," starring Ramon Novarro and Alice Terry, drew average good crowds.

The Victoria feature was the Richard Dix fight picture, "Knockout Reilly,"—a distinctly man's picture—which, however, for some unaccountable reason failed to pull very hard. This was notwithstanding that those who saw it expressed themselves as well satisfied. Manager Charley Jones provided some extra exploitation.

"Mike," with Sally O'Neill and William Haines, returned and showed with a fair degree of success at the Grand. The film attraction at the State the last half of the week was "Wandering Girls," with Mildred Harris.

Tampa

THE opening this week brought back reminders of "boom times." Most every house in the city had lines of waiters Sunday afternoon and night. A great star, perfect exploitation and a famous title, "Don Juan," pulled an opening Sunday at the Tampa that crept up pretty close to the record, with the following three days big.

"Whirlwind of Youth" was the feature attraction playing the last half of the week to very good business, giving the Tampa an excellent week.

"See You in Jail," opened the week for the Strand to very good business. "Blind Alleys," with Thomas Meighan, a Tampa favorite, did excellent for three days, with "The Telephone Girl" closing the week to good business.

"Hills of Peril," "The Heart Thief" and "Lightning Lariats" gave the Franklin three thrillers of the kind that find favor with their patrons, and all pulled good business. Every theatre in Tampa reported an increase in their business this last week.

Detroit

ANOTHER drop in business and industrial activities offered some reason for mediocre ticket selling in the downtown theatre district. Poor weather conditions during the early part of the week also lowered estimates at the box offices.

The Michigan theatre celebrated with an anniversary stage show and Lois Moran in "Whirlwind of Youth." Money came in fast after the first three days. In the meantime, fair attendance was the rule. Both attractions received excellent comment in the dailies.

Dolores Costello graced the Capitol screen in "A Million Bid," and Herbert Rawlinson appeared in person as master of ceremonies on the stage. Nice receipts were the result, and statistics indicate that Rawlinson, who has been receiving heavy publicity, will remain a few more weeks.

"Lost at the Front," featuring Charlie Murray and George Sidney, went along gayly to the tune of clicking coins and will be presented until the demand ceases. It was backed by Vitaphone programs.

In view of the first week business, Karl Dane's comedy feature, "Rookies," flopped badly at the Adams. Matinees, however, made up the losses to some extent.

The State bill included Laura La Plant in "Beware of Widows" and an elaborate presentation. These productions drew fairly well, but patrons were not entirely pleased with the screen play's scenario.

Seattle

EARLY spring weather—a combination of sun and showers—had little effect upon theatre business in this territory last week. As is the case a great part of the time, the houses that had the pictures did the business—others dragged along.

By far the outstanding success of the week was "Rookies" at the Coliseum Theatre. This picture met with the approval of every theatregoer; Manager Al Raleigh put over a sterling campaign; Jan Sofer provided an elaborate musical setting; and the result was very big business—the best that the house has had in many weeks. So popular was the picture that the week's engagement was indefinitely extended.

Second in appeal at the box office was "Sorrows of Satan" at the United Artists Theatre. This picture played ten days to very good business, although the last three days of the run were noticeably off.

At the Columbia Theatre, a reissue of "The Count of Monte Cristo" played to very good houses for the week. The stars were extensively exploited, and resulted in a decidedly pleasing box office report each day.

"The Better 'Ole," and Vitaphone in its fourth week at John Hamrick's Blue Mouse Theatre fell off during matinees, but continued to line patrons out in front of the theatre at every evening performance. It would be considered a very good fourth week. The fifth week will end the run.

At the Fifth Avenue, "Lovers?" and Fanchon and Marco's "Vanities" stage revue did very slight business. Both the picture and the stage show were below par, according to audience comment. This condition has existed for the last three consecutive weeks.

"Fighting Love," at Pantages, "Moulders of Men," at the Winter Garden, and "Madame Wants No Children," at the Embassy, were average attractions. "The Red Kimona," at the Strand Theatre, played to good business at 25c and 50c.

Neighborhood business showed a slight decline in general.

Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE'S downtown theatres enjoyed a very satisfactory week. The usual summer-time slump in theatre activity which has been threatening for some time, has been delayed still another week by extremely cold weather.

One of the main attractions in the downtown houses this week was "Monte Cristo" at the Alhambra, where newsreel pictures of Lindbergh's start for Paris also proved a popular feature. "The Tender Hour" at the Wisconsin was very well attended. The revival of the "Miracle Man" met with surprising success at the Garden. "Special Delivery" at the Strand, and "The Understanding Heart" at the Merrill, were apparently well liked by Milwaukee audiences for they played to good houses during the entire week.

Neighborhood theatres also profited by the cold weather, which drove folks indoors and to the theatres. "IT" playing at the Milwaukee, Savoy, Colonial, and Mirth found appreciative audiences. The Tower and Modjeska played "Mr. Wu" to gratifying returns.

Portland, Ore.

"ROOKIES," at the Broadway, rocked the house with laughter, and attracted good business throughout the week. "The Better 'Ole" is still doing satisfactory business in its third week at the Blue Mouse.

"The Prince of Tempters" got business for the Columbia, but was not liked. The local censors sheared it generously, and all of the "kick" was eliminated.

"Ritzy," at the Rivoli, did better than usual and pleased. "See You in Jail" drew average crowds and was rated as a good program attraction.

"Flesh and the Devil" second run at the Peoples drew well, though not quite as much as was expected.

"Men of Purpose" played at the Music Box for nine days following the close of the Will King Musical Stock at that theatre, and got by nicely. They had the cooperation of the local War Veterans, and benefited by this assistance.

Cleveland

THE average of all theatre reports for the past week was fair. A few local houses did average business, some did poor business, but most of them had a fair week. The weather was rainy and cold.

"The Better 'Ole," in the second week at the Stillman, did satisfactory business, but is not being held any longer. "Tillie the Toiler" pulled better than the present average at the Allen, together with preliminary pictures of Capt. Lindbergh's flight and an effective stage and musical presentation of the flight. "The Monkey Talks" was accorded favorable criticism and consequently did well at the Palace for this time of the year. It was supported by a consistently good vaudeville program. "Frisco Sally Levy" coupled with Charles Chaplin's "Shoulder Arms" did well enough at the Cameo to warrant being held over another week. "Women Love Diamonds" was just fair from the State theatre box office angle. "Matinee Ladies," the attraction at the Park, was another "fair" business getter. "Upstream" catalogued as "unusually good entertainment" succeeded in drawing pretty well at Reade's Hippodrome the first half of the week, but closed its week's engagement at Keith's East 105th St. with just a fair average. "Tarzan and the Golden Lion," the attraction at the Hippodrome the last half of the week, was about a June average. "Husband Hunters," good light entertainment, coupled with Vitaphone. specialty numbers, pulled through the week with fair honors. Neighborhood houses report business below the standard for this time last year. Depressed business conditions generally, unemployment and a feeling of business unrest are given as causes for this state.

New Orleans

TWO big pictures were given their New Orleans premiere during the past week and both lived up to expectations as box office successes. At the $2,500,000 Saenger theatre, "Mr. Wu," starring Lon Chaney and Renee Adoree, coupled with an elaborate New York Publix Stage Show, "Chinese Jade," did a remarkable business. At Loew's State "The Demi-Bride" also did a splendid business. On the stage were five acts of vaudeville, but this picture, according to Manager Rodney D. Toups, was enough to pack them in.

As a matter of fact, the New Orleans theatres are enjoying one of the best weeks in months. The flood scare has disappeared and New Orleans' population is not sticking close to home any longer.

"Easy Pickings," with Anna Q. Nilsson, Kenneth Harlan and Billy Bevan, played to good houses all week at the Strand.

"Women Love Diamonds," did not come up to expectations with playgoers. Although a picture featuring gorgeous gowns, it did not even make a hit with the women folk and as a result the Liberty's business was not up to standard.

The Globe did a fine business with "Ladies at Play," with Doris Kenyon and Lloyd Hughes. "The Magic Garden," with Margaret Morris, was the Trianon attraction and the management reported satisfactory business.

Although featured in conjunction with a musical comedy show featuring two score pretty girls, Rin-Tin-Tin in "The Hills of Kentucky" did a fine business at Saenger's Crescent theatre.

At the Orpheum Marie Prevost in "The Night Bride," did a splendid week's run. The stage bill was not up to the standard and the picture and patrons were highly pleased.

The Lyceum featured "The Kid Brother," with Harold Lloyd. Although the pictures had its premiere sometime ago at the Saenger theatre, crowds flocked to see the bespectacled comedian in this rib tickler. The Tudor played "London," with Dorothy Gish, to full houses.

The neighborhood theatre managers report that their business has increased greatly during the past week. These included the managers of the Granada, Capitol, Pantania, Lafayette, Tivoli, Mecca, Valentino, Gaiety, Casino, Fine Arts, Famous, Carrollton, Dreamland, Fern and Rivoli.

Kansas City

A WEEK of average attendance was experienced by practically all first-run houses of Kansas City this week, despite good weather and a fairly strong lineup of pictures.

At the Royal, "Resurrection," which was held over from last week, did a fair business, but not quite up to expectations. At the Newman, Gloria Swanson in "The Love of Sunya" did perhaps the best business of any picture for the week, but attendance was below other pictures of the same type.

"Heaven on Earth" at the Libery remained within the bounds of an "average" week, which also can be said of "The Little Adventuress" at the Globe. "The Bachelor's Baby" at the Pantages was slightly better than normal in attendance, the afternoon business coming to the rescue, due to feminine appeal.

Albany and Troy

ALMOST constant rainfall coupled with chilly weather brought unusually heavy business to the motion picture theatres of Albany and Troy during the past week. After one or two days of rainfall, people apparently began to seek amusement outside of their own homes, and made their way to the theatres.

At the Leland, "The Scarlet Letter," midwinter business was reported with matinees also running big. At the Clinton Square theatre, where "Laddies" was holding forth, there was some slump due to the fact that the street on which the theatre is located, is in a torn up condition and will be for some time to come. The theatres in Albany all featured news reels showing Lindbergh's take-off and were wise enough to heavily advertise the feature in the newspapers. Applause invariably greeted the picture on every occasion.

At the Mark Ritz, "The Notorious Lady" proved good entertainment and ran to satisfactory business throughout the week. The Mark Strand used "The Telephone Girl" together with Vitaphone presentations and while the seven o'clock show was not exceptionally big, the attendance results for the week were satisfactory.

In Troy, "Evening Clothes" ran well for the first four days at the Troy theatre and with the last three days given over the "The Demi-Bride." A heavy rainstorm on Sunday night seriously crippled the best day of the week for the theatre.

At the Lincoln, in Troy, the "Flaming Forest" did fairly well for the first four days with "Tracked by the Police" doing about the same for the last three days.

Chicago

POOR box office statements were reported by a great majority of Chicago theatres last week, although there were a few houses where business was more favorable.

McVickers where "The Night Of Love" opened for an indefinite run, did better than average business, probably due to the controversy with the censorboard over a permit for this picture, which received wide publicity. At the Chicago, "Rough House Rosie," Spitalny's orchestral production, "Martha," and stage production "The Sampler," drew only fair business. "Three Hours," the feature and Paul Ash's "Night Club Nifties," accounted for average business at the Oriental. "Convoy" got away to only a fair start at the Roosevelt.

"Rough Riders" went into its second week at the Auditorium with a fair attendance.

At the Uptown, "Evening Clothes" on the screen and Bennie Kreuger on the stage, played to average business, while the Granada with "Cradle Snatchers" a Vitaphone program and Charles Kaley in a clever stage production, brought an encouraging box office report. The same was true at the Sheridan which had as its screen offering, "Wedding Bills" and Verne Buck and his orchestra, who are rapidly growing in popularity. The Harding, with "Children of Divorce" and the Senate with "The Scarlet Letter," did fair business.

The Capitol with "The Love of Sunya" as its screen feature and Del and his merrymakers, did an average business, while at the Tivoli, "The Scarlet Letter," and usual elaborate stage show, accounted for fair box office.

Oklahoma City

"MR. WU" kept business good all week at the Criterion Theatre. The sign boards on this were attractive, but there was no extra advertising apparently. "Babe Comes Home" didn't break any records at the Empress, in fact, it was changed in mid-week to "Three Hours." This later picture played to only fair business. "Almost a Lady" was well received by audiences at the Liberty the first part of the week. The usual change in program was made in mid-week, and "The Overland Stage" drew good sized crowds for three days. "The Brute" was well attended at the Capitol the first of the week, and "Wedding Bells" drew well at the last of the week.

The weather remained fair with a couple of days of real heat—this tends to lessen the theatre crowds here.

St. Louis

ONCE more the Weather Man played the part of villain in the cast and business as the result was far from what it should be, and it was impossible to judge the pulling power of the feature films that were on the screens of the leading first runs of the city.

In the neighborhood houses business was again decidedly off. This appears to be a general condition throughout this territory.

At the Grand Central the screen attraction was "The Love Thrill" in which Laura La Plante was starred. It enjoyed a fair week.

The Missouri Theatre offered on its screen "The Whirlwind of Youth with Lois Moran and Donald Keith as the headliners.

The Ambassador's feature was "A Million Bid." Dolores Costello was the starette.

Over at Loew's State Theatre "The Demi Bride" with Norma Shearer as the chief attraction. She has quite a following in St. Louis and despite the adverse weather on many days many of her admirers turned out.

The St. Louis Theatre's film attraction was "The Night Bride" with Marie Prevost in the leading role. Five acts of Orpheum Circuit Vaudeville helped to keep business up to standard everything considered.

Ottawa

UNCERTAIN weather played havoc with outdoor plans all during the week of May 16 in Ottawa, Ontario, and the result was that the people forsook garden plots, painting jobs and auto outings to attend the local theatres.

"Getting Gertie's Garter" drew well at B. F. Keith's Theatre and Manager J. M. Franklin found that patronage increased from day to day. The Centre Theatre had a good all-round week with "The Notorious Lady," both matinee and night business being well up to the mark. Patrons at the Regent Theatre did not think much of "Lovers" insofar as the story was concerned but they liked the stars Ramon Novarro and Alice Terry as of yore. These film artists undoubtedly saved the picture. Box office returns were excellent at the Regent.

The Imperial Theatre, with Ray Tubman as new manager, had the best week in several months with "Love's Blindness" by Elinor Glyn. The picture was liked and the name of the authoress also helped to draw. Matinee patronage was much improved. The Francais Theatre split the week with "The Better 'Ole" and "The Beautiful Cheat." The former again proved highly popular and the latter better than average.

At the Laurier Theatre in Hull, Quebec, "Tell It to the Marines" brought out heavy patronage and both old and young liked it. At the Eden Theatre, Hull, there was not much excitement over "The Transcontinental Limited."

Philadelphia

BUSINESS in the downtown section at most of the theatres is moving along at just a fair tempo.

Gloria Swanson in "The Love of Sunya" at the Stanley did a fairly good business. The show was bolstered up by Allen K. Foster's Cob-Web Revue, the Balabanow Five, accordionists, and Edward Albano, baritone.

"Cabaret" with Gilda Gray, continues to do fairly well at the Stanton, while "The Better 'Ole," with Vitaphone Unit is doing better than satisfactory business at the Aldine.

A repeat of Lon Chaney in "Mr. Wu" at the Arcadia after playing the Stanton proved a wise decision as the picture is holding up very well there.

The Karlton, with "Women Love Diamonds" reported fair business for the week.

Marion Davies in "The Red Mill" with Charlie Chaplin in "Shoulder Arms" at the Victoria aided by a lobby ballyhoo, did well.

"The Show" with John Gilbert and Renee Adoree had a good week at the Palace while the Globe offering "Prisoners of the Storm" and the Capitol with "Heroes of the Night" had a mediocre week.

The Fox drew well with Corinne Griffith in "Three Hours." The cinema feature was supplemented by the Keller Sisters and Frank Lynch, radio and recording stars, Julia Kelety, Parisian singer, and Eddie Conrad and Marion Eddy in separate numbers, helped to make an attractive bill.

Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES theatres over the past few weeks have all stepped along to good business and this week was no exception. Every theatre is featuring a good bill and the box offices have registered accordingly.

The Forum Theatre last week presented a foreign picture; a production from Germany—"The Aftermath" and from all indications it pleased the audience. The sponsors are looking for a release but up to the present time no affiliations have been made.

The Carthy Circle is building steadily with "7th Heaven" and according to reports the picture is getting over nicely. "The Love of Sunya" at the Criterion is hitting along in its second week to good receipts.

Grauman's Chinese Theatre report heavy advance sales on "King of Kings" and good business every day. "Lost At the Front" featured at Loew's State is doing average and Clara Bow in "Rough House Rosie" sent the box office barometer up a few notches at the Metropolitan. Better than normal is reported for "Rough House Rosie." "Rookies" is clicking at the Million Dollar. "Is Your Daughter Safe?" a sex exposure picture dealing with white slave conditions has held the California Theatre for over nine weeks.

San Francisco

THE past week was an especially good one at both down town first run houses of San Francisco and at the residential houses also. The reasons for the especially good business was that the pictures shown, practically all over were of the superior type. The weather also was favorable.

"Don Juan" at the St. Francis drew a large crowd and all were more than pleased with the acting and the manner it was put on. "Senorita" also drew a large crowd and Partington's revue on the stage, called "Paramount Revue," was considered marvelous. "Wedding Bills" at the California was a good show, but the house did not draw as well as expected for this picture. "Lovers" as shown at the Loew's Warfield Theatre was fair and the stage offering "Spring Idea" proved attractive. "Abie's Irish Rose," drew a big crowd to the Capitol, even though the prices were advanced a great deal.

"No Man's Gold" at the Pantages was considered well put on, which together with the acts drew well. The screen comedy, "Man Bait," proved popular at the Golden Gate Theatre, as did their acts of vaudeville and Pathe Review. The Union Square did well with "Flaming Fury" and "When the Wife's Away," together with the vaudeville acts. The Cameo Theatre drew a crowd by playing to women only the picture, "The Naked Truth."

Newspaper Opinions

"Rookies" — Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Adams Theatre, Detroit, Michigan

News: "Another fine military comedy. . . . Comedy echoes of 'The Big Parade.' . . . During last year funniest pictures released have been those with background of war or khaki, and now we have 'Rookies.' If you are in condition to do lot of laughing see it. . . . Dane at his very best. . . . Practical jokes come thick and fast and mighty thrill is saved for climax. . . . George K. Arthur gives remarkable performance, and Marceline Day does part nicely."

Free Press: "An instance of picture which producers made without raving over its super-excellence in advance, and which happened to prove riot with public from its first showing. . . . One long gale of laughter. . . Has number of corking shots. Genuine fun and comedy crowded into picture and thrills galore. . . . Cast is excellent."

Detroit Times: "One of those high-geared comedies. . . . Carries on brighter side of military life. . . Sam Wood keeps proceeding traveling at express speed. Comedy angles pile up on each other in rapid succession. . . . Leaves spectator limp from laughing. . . . Climax gala affair."

A group of newspaper displays, representative of the style of advertising used by first runs to exploit showings of "Rookies" (M-G-M) is illustrated above. The humorous exploits of two recruits are indicated in the treatment accorded this comedy in these advertisements which were used by the following theatres: Cameo, Cleveland; Capitol, Cincinnati; Loew's Columbia, Washington, D. C.; Loew's Aldine, Pittsburgh, and Loew's theatre, Buffalo.

:: "The Check-Up" ::

"The Check-Up" is a presentation in the briefest and most convenient form of reports received from exhibitors in every part of the country on current features, which makes it possible for the exhibitor to see what the picture has done for other theatre managers.

The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who consider it "Fair"; the third, the number who consider it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who consider it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage figure giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage ratings of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

No picture is included in the list which has not received at least ten reports.

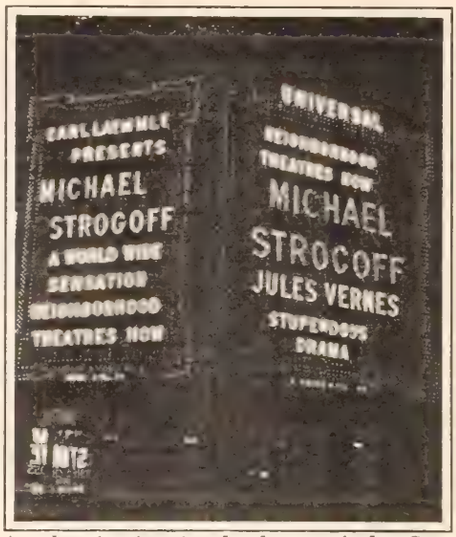
"New Idea Orchestra" Now Howard Theatre Feature

Starting Monday, May 9th, Wheeler Wadsworth and his New Idea Orchestra will be presented each week at the Howard Theatre, Atlanta.

Wadsworth is a widely known radio entertainer, a saxophonist, a phonograph record artist, and a composer of popular songs.

No innovation ever entered Atlanta on the wave of a more effective advance campaign than that which introduced the "new idea." The town has literally been plastered with snipes, banners and billboards, and there's not an open-eyed individual in Atlanta who hasn't been asking "what is this 'new idea' the Howard is talking about?"

Style Shows on Stage and Screen Popular Hit



Manager G. R. Stewart offered two fashion shows to his patrons—one on the stage and the other on the screen, when "Fashions for Women" played at the Publix Sterling Theatre, Greeley, Colo.

The store putting on the fashion review also helped in exploiting the double attraction. The store devoted one of its best windows to the display of stills, gowns, and cards announcing the fashion review, title of picture, name of theatre, and play dates.

Seed Dealer Ties Up With "Magic Garden" Showing

A co-operative stunt involving the free distribution of flower and vegetable seeds resulted in a harvest of profitable publicity for the showing of "The Magic Garden" at the Tivoli theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn.

The copy on the little packages read, "Mayo's Annual Garden Flowers—These seeds will produce a Magic Garden which we hope will rival the beauty of Gene Stratton Porter's latest and best story The Magic Garden which will be shown at the Tivoli, April 21, 22, 23."

An electric sign in the heart of the Great White Way advertises neighborhood showings. Universal's giant sign with billing for "Michael Strogoff" at the Community house is shown above.

Telephone Girls Compete for Beauty Prize

The Broadway Theatre, Portland, Oregon, made several effective tie-ups for "Orchids and Ermine," among them being one with the local telephone company.

The contest was conducted by one of the leading newspapers of the city to find the most beautiful telephone operator, the winner appearing in person at the Broadway Theatre during the last night's engagement of the picture, at which time she was presented with a large silver cup from Colleen Moore.

The telephone company also placed an automatic switchboard in the corner of the theatre, and put small disks advertising "Orchids and Ermine" on the mouthpieces of many downtown business phones. Four extra girls were instructed to go through the telephone directory, and call the subscribers to announce.

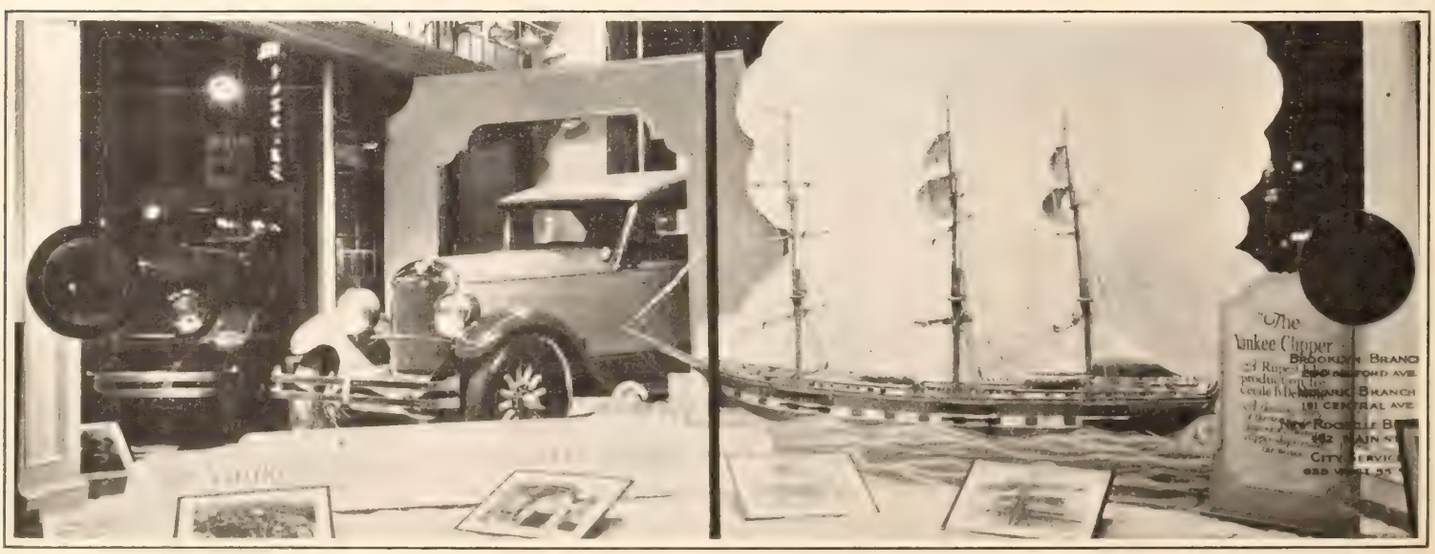
Ballyhoo on Broadway for "Convoy" at Strand

A ballyhoo stunt which attracted great attention from Broadway crowds leaving theatres exploited the Strand theatre's presentation of "Convoy" during the week in advance of its engagement at that house. The unique character of the stunt stirred up considerable interest. From 10 o'clock until midnight, six men, in evening clothes went through the crowds in the theatre section from Times Square to 53rd Street, handing out illustrated newspapers advertising "Convoy."

The high-hat gentlemen had a ballyhoo of their own. This consisted of a cabby, guiding his rig close to the curb, who acted as leader of the expedition. As he walked along he kept up a barking act, crying "It's Convoy—the Big Parade of the Navy—Read about it—talk about it—laugh about it—cry about it—but see it."

Novel Stage Setting With "Night of Love" Trailer

Manager Charles H. Amos worked a stage novelty with the showing of the trailer on "The Night of Love" prior to that film's showing at the Publix Florida Theatre, St. Petersburg, Fla.



The figures of Colman and Banky were cut out of compoboard and placed in a Spanish doorway on stage.

While the trailer was being shown these figures of Colman and Banky were illuminated with blue light and faded into an amber.

Incense Burner As Lobby Atmosphere for "Mr. Wu"

The aroma from incense burnt in the theatre lobby was so strong that people could detect the odor outside on the street—when Lon Chaney in "Mr. Wu" played at the Rex Theatre, Spartanburg, S. C.

The lobby and foyer was fitted up with all sorts of Chinese curios, bamboo, and dogwood.

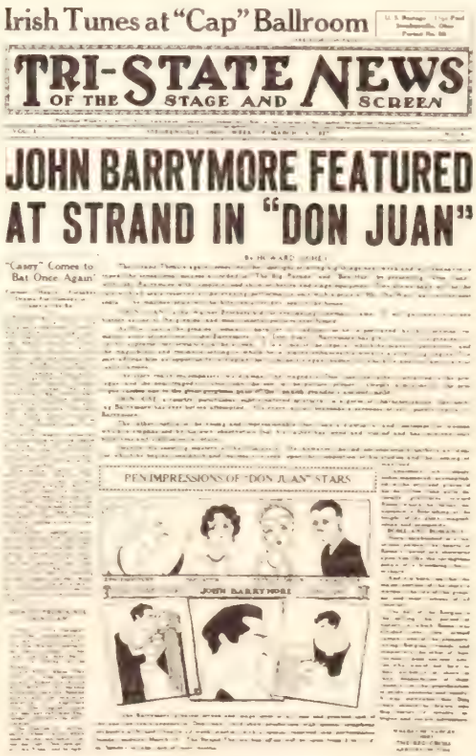
PAVING the way for the opening of the Vitaphone at the Mark Strand in Albany, N. Y., Tony Veiller, a former newspaper man, and whose father was the author of "Within the Law" and "The Thirteenth Chair," has been doing some educational work through a series of newspaper advertisements explaining to residents of Albany just what the Vitaphone is.

The advertisements attracted a great deal of attention and followed slides that were used on the screens of all of the Stanley theatres in Albany. Mr. Veiller's advertisements were original, and conceived only after considerable study.

House Organ Solves Publicity Problem for Tri-State Co.



A WEEKLY house organ, made up in the style of a news tabloid, which the Tri-State Amusement Co., of Steubenville, Ohio, introduced last March, has already established itself as one of the important publications of that section and, according to officials of the company, which operates theatres in Steubenville and East Liverpool, has proved an invaluable builder of friendship between the theatres and the public.

The "Tri-State News" is edited by Howard Lichey, director of public relations. It is an eight-page paper made up in orthodox newsy style, with a liberal use of illustrations and containing a large budget of information relating to the forthcoming attractions at the Capital, Strand and Olympic theatres, the houses operated in Steubenville, by the Tri-State company.

Mr. Lichey informs this department that the publication was started because the local papers had failed to give the amount of publicity to pictures which his company felt the people of the section really desired. "We find it a great medium for publicity," he declares. "Our local paper was never liberal in giving us advance publicity, until this publication was started, but since it made its appearance, the local editor is crying for motion picture copy. We print over 10,000 copies weekly and they are sent out over a mailing list that has grown by leaps and bounds through the demand for the paper. If the mail man is one day late, our telephone is kept constantly busy with inquiries."

Here, then, is just another illustration of the fact that newspapers that cut picture publicity down to the bone are neglecting a news feature of widespread interest to their readers. And it is not the first instance where an enterprising theatre publicity department, by starting a newsy house organ, has awakened local editors to the fact that movie news is news of real appeal to the public.

The "Tri-State News" is now carrying general advertising that amounts to considerable revenue to the publishers. Steubenville merchants are using it with profit. In a recent issue we find the ads of a wide variety of business organizations; department stores, fruit stores, druggists, storage companies, beatuy shops, specialty stores, furniture companies, garages and automobile service and accessory dealers, florists, butchers, hardware stores, taxi companies, and all the rest which make up the business activities of a city.

Noon Organ Recitals Are Featured at Capitol

The organ recitals recently instituted at the Capitol Theatre in New York are meeting with popular approval from Broadway picture patrons and will be continued as a featured attraction preceding the regular daily performances.

The recitals were introduced with a view to stimulating interest in the musical literature for this instrument and are played by Dr. Melchiorre Mauro-Cottone. The programs include compositions with which the public are more or less familiar. From time to time, however, classic organ works are introduced for the purpose of bringing out the musical qualities of the instrument.

The program for week of May 7 included the "Triumphal March" from the "Queen of Sheba," by Gounod; "Humoresque," by Dvorak; two Victor Herbert compositions, "Yesterthoughts" and "Badinage;" and Sullivan's "The Lost Chord."

Laundry Checks as Heralds for "Mr. Wu"

Two thousand laundry checks distributed in Newburgh, N. Y., exploited the showing at the Broadway theatre in that city of "Mr. Wu." The checks contained some Chinese inscription on one side of the card and on the other side there was copy advertising the Lon Chaney screen vehicle. "This isn't a laundry creek," the advertising inscription read, "but it's a sign of real entertainment—Lon Chaney in Mr. Wu, with Renee Adoree, at the Broadway, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday."

Studio Briefs

Under the direction of Orville Dull, Buck Jones is in production on his latest picture for Fox Films, "Blackjack," one of the stories for the 1927-28 program. Exteriors were shot at Lone Pine, in the heart of the High Sierras, where the atmosphere is picturesque and primitive. The pioneer days is the theme of the story by Johnston McCulley. Barbara Bennett is Jones' leading lady and the rest of the cast includes Theodore Lorch, George Berrell, Harry Cording, William Caress, Buck Moulton and Murdock MacQuarrie. Harold Shumate scenarized the McCulley story.

By signing Garret Fort to a long term contract, the Warner Brothers have augmented their staff of scenarists. Fort's most recent affiliation has been with Cecil B. De Mille, for whom he wrote original stories and adaptations, among them "White Gold" and "The Yankee Clipper."

Gertrude Astor will have a part to her liking in "Shanghaied," the F. B. O. picture which Ralph Ince is making at the F. B. O. studio from the story by Edward J. Montagne, entitled "Limehouse Polly." Miss Astor will interpret the role of "Blonde Bessie." Some of her associate players will be Patsy Ruth Miller (starred), Tom Santachi, Walt Robbins, H. L. Jacobson, and Alan Brooks. Exterior scenes of the seas for "Shanghaied" were taken at Catalina Island.

The screen treatment of "Baby Face," scheduled by First National as one of Colleen Moore's earliest pictures for the new season, will be prepared by Marna Tully, magazine fiction writer and wife of Jim Tully, author of "Beggars of Life" and other novels. "Baby Face" is the title under which "Synthetic Sin," the stage play by Frederick and Fannie Hatton, will be produced.

In production at the Hal Roach studio are a Charley Chase comedy, a Max Davidson comedy and a fun reel featuring Stan Laurel, Oliver Hardy and Jimmy Finlayson. James Parrott is directing the Chase unit in which are Edna Marian, Eugene Pallette, Anita Garvin and Oliver Hardy. Supporting Max Davidson in his Jewish comedy are Martha Sleeper, Eddie Clayton, Lillian Leighton and Tiny Sanford. No title has been selected for this production which the Leo McCarey unit is producing. The Roach ranch at Moapa, Nevada, will probably be used for the comedy starring Laurel, Hardy and Finlayson. Fay Lanphier, Miss America of 1925, has signed a Roach contract for a prominent role. Viola Richard will have the principal feminine part. Work is to get under way immediately.

Prosper Merrimee's "Carmen" has just been finished by Director Raoul Walsh for Fox Films. Dolores Del Rio has the title role, Victor McLaglen the role of the bull fighter and Don Alvarado the part of Don Jose. Mathilde Comont plays the part of Michaela and Fred Kohler the part of the gypsy chief. Carmen Costello and Jack Bastian have the other featured roles. Fox officials announce that "Carmen" will be issued as one of the 12 specials to come from their company.

One of the first things that Sam Sax, Gotham and Lumas president, did after his arrival in California was to engage Mae Busch for the stella roles in Gerald Beaumont's story, "The Rose of Kildare" and Norman Kellogg's "The Girl From Rio." The first production to go into work will be "The Girl From Rio" which Tom Terris will direct. It will mark the first appearance of Miss Busch under the Gotham trademark and will be ready for release in the early fall.

Following her American debut in "Drums of the Desert," Marietta Millner, Paramount's Viennese importation, has been assigned the role of leading woman opposite Thomas Meighan in his first West Coast picture, "We're All Gamblers," to be directed by James Cruze. Miss Millner responded to direction in "Drums of the Desert" through an interpreter.

Bringing the cast of players in "The Trail of '98" up to an even forty, Grace Borden, young actress who had a part in "A Million Bid," is the latest addition to Clarence Brown's body of actors and actresses who are appearing in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer special.

A contract was recently consummated between Sam Sax, independent producer, and Tom Terris, director and producer, whereby Mr. Sax has secured the directorial services of the latter for "The Girl From Rio." Mr. Terris has produced pictures having to do with Spanish atmosphere before and made "The Bandolero" for Metro several years ago. Casting will begin on "The Girl From Rio" upon the arrival of the director in California.

A former associate with Julian Johnston at the Paramount Long Island studio, Randolph Bartlett, has been appointed film and title editor at the F. B. O. studio in Hollywood by William Le Baron, vice-president in charge of production. Mr. Bartlett, who has been in the motion picture business for a number of years, left New York last Saturday to assume his new duties at the F. B. O. plant. Two and a half years ago he was business manager of the Lasky studio scenario department.

"Buttons," a romance of the seas which will serve as Jackie Coogan's next Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring vehicle, is scheduled for early production with George Hill at the directorial helm. It is based on an original story by Hill and Hayden Talbot and was scenarized by Marion Constance Blackton.

A Wampas baby star for 1927, Natalie Kingston, has just been signed by F. B. O. for the leading feminine role in "The Harvester," the Gene Stratton-Porter novel which is about to be filmed by Director J. Leo Meehan at the Stratton-Porter farm near Rome City, Indiana, where "Limberlost" is located. Miss Kingston has just finished playing the leading role opposite Milton Sills in "Framed."

The feminine lead in Harry Langdon's next comedy vehicle, now being filmed at the West Coast studio of First National at Burbank, California, will be played by Gladys McConnell, who was selected this year as one of the Wampas baby stars. Langdon immediately decided that she was the girl for his picture when he saw her in a Buck Jones production. Consummation of the contract was announced this week by William H. Jenner, general manager of the Langdon Corporation. Arthur Ripley is directing the comedian.

Reports from the Mack Sennett studio indicate that the comedy producer is active in producing releases for the Pathe schedule. Director Harry Edwards has just completed a new comedy, "The Golf Bug," featuring Billy Bevan, Eddie Quillan and Alma Bennett. The Smith Family is in the midst of another of their domestic difficulties under the direction of Alf Goulding. With Johnny Burke portraying the male lead, Harry Edwards is guiding Billy Bevan, Andy Clyde, Alma Bennett, Sunshine Hart and Matty Kemp through a laugh-offering based on the Weepah gold rush in Nevada.

The producing unit having returned from location near King City, California, the complete cast of players who will support Gary Cooper in his second Western for Paramount has been announced. Betty Jewel is his leading woman and Jack Luden, who will soon be seen as a star of his own right in Paramount Westerns, will appear as Miss Jewel's brother. Herbert Priar, character actor, and Jim Corey are in the cast also. Flash, the Wonder Horse, will again be Cooper's mount. "The Last Outlaw" is the title of the Cooper vehicle.

Plans for another production that the Warner Brothers plan for Irene Rich for the coming season are shaping up. "The Outpost," a story by Mark Canfield, will supply the material for the Rich picture. Anthony Coldeway is now doing the scenario. Michael Curtiz, who has been chosen to direct the picture, has cast William Russell as Miss Rich's leading man.

Norway is now represented at the Mack Sennett studio in the person of Byarbe Hellum, a comedian out of Christiania and a newcomer to this country who has signed a contract with the comedy producer. Mr. Helleum's first name has been changed to Barney. He recently impersonated Chester Conklin in a new Keystone Kop comedy called "Love in a Police Station" and was also seen in "Catalina, Here I Come."

Myrna Loy has been added to the cast of "The Heart of Maryland," the Warner Bros.' production starring Dolores Costello. Miss Loy will take the part of a mulatto girl.

When "American Beauty," by Wallace Irwin, is placed into production by Carey Wilson as a First National picture, the leading feminine roles will be taken by Billie Dove and Virginia Lee Corbin. Lloyd Hughes will have the chief masculine role, a part which he has just finished in Miss Dove's "The Stolen Bride," her initial stellar vehicle for First National.

Universal's option on the directorial talents of William J. Craft, the director who recently completed the Universal-Jewel production, "Hot Heels," has been exercised, with the result that the director will make a new feature for the Laemmle organization. A suitable vehicle for Craft is now being selected. He directed a serial for Universal a year ago and has since been with several producers of independent pictures. In "Hot Heels" are Patsy Ruth Miller and Glenn Tyron.

The new comedy team of George Bancroft and Chester Conklin will make its comedy debut in "Tell It to Sweeney," a railroad story for which Paramount has also cast Jack Luden and Mary Brian. The story is an original by Kerry Clarke, Percy Heath and Eugene de Rue, and it will be directed by Frank Strayer.

The male lead in "Buck Privates," the comedy drama which Melville Brown will produce for Universal, will be played by Malcolm MacGregor. Lya de Putti is the star of the production and some of the featured players are Zasu Pitts, Eddie Gribbon and James Marcus. Actual work on the picture is scheduled to start next week under the supervision of Robert Wyler.

In "A Hot Potato," his final Van Bibber release for the season, Earle Fox has Nancy Nash as his chief feminine support. This comedy, which has just been finished, is number 24 of the Van Bibber brand through which the sophisticated Van Bibber has clowned his way. His work in portraying the Richard Harding Davis character won for him his long-term contract with Fox Films to play featured roles. Jess Robbins directed the latest Van Bibber from a scenario by Sam White and Murray Rothe. Sid Brown was assistant director and George Meehan cameraman. Among the support are Howard Truesdale, Katherine Bates, Sidney Bracey, Arthur Wesy and C. L. Sherwood.

Corinne Griffith has signed a sextet of players for "The Garden of Eden," her first United Artists production which will be directed by Hobart Henley. The six players do not include the leading man and are as follows: Louise Dresser, Andre Berenger, Edwin Martindel, David Torrence, Rose Dione, Emily Fitzroy. Production on the film began at the United Artists' studio in Los Angeles during the week. June Mathis wrote the scenario for "The Garden of Eden," based on the play in German by Rudolph Bernauer and Rudolph Oesterreicher.

Russell Simpson is the latest addition to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's cast of 41 principals for "The Trail of '98," a tale of the frozen north, which Clarence Brown is directing. More than 7,000 extras are said to have appeared in the [illegible] already filmed by Brown, and it is estimated by M. G. M. [illegible] will be needed to film those yet to be taken.

Now that his "Dance Magic" is in the cutting room, Robert Kane has his production unit concentrating on "Hell's Kitchen" for First National release. The story is that of a foundling who is brought up by three foster fathers, an Irishman, a Jew and a German, played by Hugh Cameron, George Sidney and Ford Sterling. Frank Capra and Joseph C. Boyle are directing. Ben Lyon is the juvenile lead.

The final scenes of "Arizona Nights," Fred Thomson's last picture for F. B. O., were filmed this week at the F. B. O. studio under the direction of Lloyd Ingraham. "Arizona Nights" is adapted from the story by Stewart Edward White and is said to be the star's best for F. B. O. Silver King, Thomson's horse, has an important part in the picture, and others in the cast include J. P. McGowan, William Courtright, Lottie Williams, William McCormick and Dan Peterson.

Ruth Taylor, featured actress, has been signed by Universal for a role in "Out All Night," Reginald Denny's new starring vehicle for Universal which was formerly known as "I'll Be There."

The titling of "Judgment of the Hills," the F. B. O. drama which Leo Meehan directed, will be done by Dorothy Yost, who has been recently signed by William Le Baron for that job. Miss Yost has just finished adaptating "The Harvester" for the screen, which Leo Meehan will also direct.

An F. B. O. producing unit of about 40 people left Los Angeles recently for Rome City, Indiana, where exteriors for "The Harvester," Gene Stratton-Porter's story, will be filmed in the exact locale described in the book. Natalie Kingston and Orville Caldwell are to portray the leading roles. Will R. Walling will be the heavy and Belshazzar, an English setter, has been trained especially for this production. After a number of weeks spent in Indiana the company will return to Hollywood, where interior scenes will be shot.

The Ghetto, New York's famous East Side section, moved to the Fox studio on Tenth Avenue and 55th Street this week where Director Allan Dwan is filming "East Side, West Side," the novel by Felix Riesenberg. George O'Brien, Virginia Valli and J. Farrell McDonald have the principal parts. Charles Kirk, in charge of construction, has built a set representing a section of the East Side that takes up nearly the entire studio. Also in the cast are Frank Allsworth, John Kearney, Dore Davidson and Sonia Nodalsky.

Ralph Ince and his "Shanghaied" company have sailed for Catalina Island to do the final sequences for the sea picture which he is making for F. B. O. Accompanying the director on his trip to the Isthmus were Patsy Ruth Miller, Wally Fox, assistant director, and Joe Walker, cameraman. The company will return to the studio within a few days.

Right on the heels of the announcement that Bob Steele would be starred by F. B. O. in a series of Western pictures came word from F. B. O. that Lillian Gilmore has [illegible] play opposite him. Preparations are now in progress for the first pictures in which [illegible] and it is expected that actual [illegible] inaugurated in the near future and that the title of the first vehicle will be "The Mojave Kid."

Production on "My Best Girl," Mary Pickford's new picture, was begun last Wednesday, May 25, at the United Artists' studio with Sam Taylor directing and Charles Rogers as leading man. The opening scene takes place in a [illegible] store.

The comedy role of the British recruiting sergeant in "Quality Street," will be played by Lionel Belmore, British stage and character actor. Marion Davies is starred in "Quality Street." Conrad Nagel is her leading man.

"The Secret Studio," featuring Olive Borden, has been finished by Victor Schertzinger for Fox Films. In supporting roles are Walter McGrail, Margaret Livingston, Clifford Holland, Joseph Cawthorn and Ben Bard. New York's Greenwich Village is the locale of the story, which centers around artists and models. Miss Borden made some of the village sequences while she was in New York a few months ago playing the title lead in "The Joy Girl."

The direction of "Beau Sabreur," Paramount's companion story to "Beau Geste," was this week assigned to John Waters, a young director who handled the megaphone on several of the Zane Grey Westerns. Originally William Wellman, director of "Wings," had been slated to direct the Wren sequel, but his health dictated otherwise; he will go to Catalina Island for two months to recuperate. The change in directors for "Beau Sabreur" has resulted in the return of Gary Cooper to the cast of "Nevada," which Waters will direct before making "Beau Sabreur." As soon as suitable stories are chosen for him, Lane Chandler, who had been announced for "Nevada," will appear in a series of Westerns.

Richard Wallace, former director of one-reel comedies for Hal Roach and director of "The Poor Nut" for First National, has been given the assignment by First National official to direct "The American Beauty," Billie Dove's second starring production for First National. It is scheduled to go into work this week with Lloyd Hughes in the male lead and Virginia Lee Corbin and Paul Vincenti in the cast.

In "Hell's Kitchen," a forthcoming First National picture, a duplication of the Yale-Harvard race at New London, plays an important part. Two crews are being recruited from the various race courses and arrangements have been made to film the actual race on June 24 then to take the screen crews over the course the next day for closeups. Cameras will probably also record the American Henley in case the New London race is not suitable for filming because of inclement weather.

"Wine, Women and Sauerkraut"
(Fox Imperial Comedy—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

IF your patrons like a fast-stepping comedy with a mixture of slapstick, plenty of bare-legged chorines, rough and tumble action and some good gags which are pulled on a railroad hand truck, they'll like this one. It's all about a stranded show troupe who are in difficulties at a hotel over their bill. However, their guardian manager is resourceful and in the end gets them out of trouble. The Sauerkraut part of the title has to do with a bankrupt delicatessen store which our hero puts on its feet, incidentally winning the proprietor's daughter. Yes, the chorus girls are all pretty and do some real, fancy stepping. Claire Cannon, Nick Stuart, Fred Walton, George Gray and Jacques Rollens are the featured players. It ought to produce enough laughs to satisfy any comedy crowd.

"My Mistake"
(Universal-Stern Excusemaker—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

THIS Stern Brothers' two-reeler opens with Charley King in considerable trouble. An all-night party in his house is in its last stages, floors are littered and the anti-prohibitionists are being brought to by a few of the more valiant. Then right on top of all this comes a telegram from his absent wife that she's on the way home. Charley rushes to the station and while waiting a woman asks him to hold a baby. She never returns and later proves to be a kidnapper. In the meantime, he still has the kid and his wife arrives. The rightful mother finally turns up and irons out Charley's assertion that he is not leading a double life. It's a good comedy.

"Gun Justice"
(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

HERE we have Fred Gilman again in the role of a Ranger who has come to the aid of a lady ranch owner involved in a range dispute with a bold, bad boss of a neighboring outfit. The latter has had the nerve to violate all range tradition by putting up a barbed wire fence and even his nephew thinks it's a dirty trick to play on a nice little girl, even though she doesn't appear to run true to defenseless form. As a matter of fact that lady actually threatens the bad man with a six-gun, and thereby almost gets herself in heaps of trouble when the uncle kills the nephew and plants her gun by the apparently dead man's side. But the nephew fools them all by coming to, and the bad man gets his in the end. There is the usual amount of fighting and riding and this one will fill the bill with the house that uses this kind.

"Hot Tires"
(Bray Productions—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

LEWIS SARGENT, hero of the Fistical Culture comedy series which Bray is releasing, is a racer in "Hot Tires" which groups a fair amount of plausible and laughable situations. Picking up a car from a junk heap, Lew manages somehow or other to put the auto in good shape and enter into competition with his dinshonest rival for the double honor of winning the auto race and the hand of a certain brunette. The villains do their best to disable him or hide him away, but try as they may all their plans go awry. You know that Lew will win the race, and he does, but it is a bit of a surprise to discover that the mysterious stranger who had trailed Lew since the first flicker is none other than the bearer of the glad tidings that one million dollars had been left Lew by a relation.

"Mystic India"
(Curiosities-Educational—One Reel)

ANOTHER issue of the Walter Futter "Curiosities" made doubly entertaining through the editing and titling of Beth Brown. This number gives a pictorial description of some of the customs and fads of a country "a fifth of the world's population, yet it is five thousand years behind the times." Scenes show the marketing of pigs, the sacred oxen, the manner of bathing and the methods utilized by the natives to beautify themselves.

More shots show the antique prodecure in mining and the business-like funeral cortege. Quite interesting and incorporates some humorous scenes.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"Circus Capers"
(Mermaid-Educational—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

SLAPSTICK in large doses is dispensed in this comedy starring "Poodles" Hanneford, of the well-known vaudevillians. Audiences seem to like this type of comedy and, as this number is good of its class, it should score. "Poodles" is seen as sort of general utility man on the circus lot; one of the bare-back riders is incapacitated through the machinations of the villain and "Poodles" substitutes, his antics trying to mount and ride the horse furnishing most of the fun.

The supporting cast includes Robert Graves, George Davis, Lucille Hutton. James Jones directed under the supervision of Jack White.

"No Sparking"
(Educational—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

QUITE a number of laughs are unreeled in the latest Jimmie Adams vehicle, with most of them caused by the star's actions and the business devised for the piece. Under penalty of losing his girl-friend Jimmie sets out to retrieve her party-dress from the heavy, a burly, brawny blacksmith, which he does only after experiencing many painful encounters with the aforementioned brawny person who desires the dress for his wife.

Ann Christy, Bill Blaisdell, and Bill Irving comprise the supporting cast. Harold Beaudine directed.

Howe's Hodge Podge No. 57
(Educational—One Reel)

AN interesting combination of humorous cartoons, beautiful scenic shots and ingenuity of a high order in assembling and presenting the various scenes making up a pictorial version of a Cook's Vacation Tour guide-book. Considerable time and care must have been expended in the production of this number. The only fault to be found is in the repetition; that is, Yellowstone Park has, by this time, been filmed from every conceivable angle. Let's see some never-before-filmed spots.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"The Big Pie Raid"
(Bray Productions—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THOUGH the adjective big is one of the quartet of words making up the title of this latest of the adventures of the McDougall Alley Kids, it does not enter into a summary of the earnest attempts of the gang to impart humor to their antics. The appeal that children have—their naturalness at all times unaffected—will bear no small part in producing laughs—that ultimate purpose for which comedies are made. From our point of view, the gang patterns itself too much after another gang of kids. The gags handed the McDougall Alley bunch are not new or original, and slide into the groove created by the already mentioned collection of kids which perform under a different banner than that of Bray.

"Jungle Belles"
(Bray Cartoon—One Reel)

AGAIN Walter Lantz gives evidence of the ingenuity that is his in his latest portrayal of what happened to Pete, his hot dog creation. "Jungle Belles," which played for one week at the Paramount in New York, pictures the artist and his canine friend in the woods, where one desires to paint and the other to renew a closer acquaintance with nature. While Lantz is absorbed in his canvas, elfish Pete prowls around the rocks and trees and after dodging a reptile meets a bird who feeds him worms as she does her young. It all culminates in Pete being swallowed by a turtle and escaping the fate of becoming part of the turtle's flesh and blood through digestion by again coming into the world inside a turtle's egg. It is amusing.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Monarchs of the Soil"
(Fox Variety—One Reel)

THIS number of Variety opens with farm scenes of Damascus, where plowmen slowly till the soil with the aid of crude plows and oxen. As contrast, the next shots show the modern field machinery of the wheat farms in America. Then, back to France and Poland with scenes of the little farm-steads, and on to Algeria, where a thousand-year-old irrigation method is still efficiently working. The reel ends with scenes of how honey is produced in Holland, and a Long Island duck farm. It's an excellent little short for any house.—E. G. JOHNSTON.

Educational Will Enlarge Hollywood Studio

EXTENSIVE enlargements of the Educational Studios, Hollywood, will occur in the near future as plans for that purpose have already been drawn and approved, according to E. H. Allen, general manager of the studio. A new stage building, 200 by 110 feet, will be constructed as soon as the ground now occupied by executive offices can be cleared. The offices will be moved forward to the newly acquired frontage on Santa Monica Boulevard. Excavation for a swimming pool, 60 by 80 by 8 feet, has also been started. It will be used for all water shots, flood pictures and underwater views, as well as displaying the natural element of the Mermaid bathing girls. It will be surrounded by trees and plants and will be constructed of concrete and white tile.

The Meddlin' Stranger

Western Hasn't Any Too Much Fire

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

LOOKING back in retrospect on the action unfolded in "The Meddlin' Stranger" it appears that an overwhelming degree of that attribute cannot be said to be had in the piece in which Wally Wales is the gentleman who feels compelled to interfere in the affairs of others. Action is such an all essential thing and especially so in Westerns where, as is generally the case, they beg for and receive support and proper ornamentation from the devil-may-care fireworks of the valiant heroes. None of this over emphasized dare-deviltry can be charged up to this Wales vehicle, however; it should be said that its story being logical and natural contains only gunfighting and wild riding as are essential to the proper development and dovetailing of incidents. All final analyses lead to the conclusion that the picture is only an ordinary Western, good in spots, but too similar to the countless number of its predecessors to inveigle complimentary comment.

Wales is anxious to get even with the town's financial power for what happened to his father in the past. While executing his first steps in the campaign of revenge he saves a girl in a runaway buck board, falling in love with her, and acts as savior also to the girl's father, whom the above mentioned financial giant is about to crush. Things don't work out that way for the lure of money leads the villain to shoot his chief henchman and to be killed by him in turn. The acting is competent throughout, the two evil ones and the parents of the girl standing out in bold relief.

The Cast: Wally Wales, Nola Luxford, Charles K. French, Mabel Van Buren, James Marcus, Boris Karloff. Director, Richard Thorpe from Christopher B. Booth's story.

THEME: Lone hero saves girl from death and her father from financial ruin.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Card game and fight in gambling hall. Ambush of girl's father. Gunplay between the villains.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Arrange tie-ups along regular Western lines.

DRAWING POWER: Fair. Will need support from surrounding bill.

Produced by Action Pictures, Inc. Distributed by Pathe. Length, 4,575 feet. Released June 12, 1927.

7th Heaven

Fine Picture, Directed and Played With Feeling

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

EVERYONE who sees "7th Heaven" (no one should miss it) will appreciate how a picture can ring with romance. As a play it was fairly saturated with this quality. The transcription affords another feather in Frank Borzage's cap. Like his well-remembered "Humoresque," the new film contains a deep spiritual tug inspired by the effort of two lovers to find expression, dwelling in a squalid corner of Paris. As a play it was declared quite perfect. As a picture it faithfully carries out its highlights since it is treated with imagination and feeling.

The tender, quaintly humorous story of the sewer man who would rise in the world to become a street washer, and the abused waif who colors his dreams as well her own is told with naturalness and charm. It builds too slowly and drags at times (the only faults discernible), but in its development one becomes acquainted with the souls of the characters.

This romance is the dominant feature, though it is tempered with some excellent shots of the taxicabs rushing to the front to save Paris—and other episodes incidental to the war. There are plentiful moments when it pauses to relieve the tension with its by-play of humor. For the most part it is handled with restraint. The onlookers will respond appreciatively to its song of romance, its marvelous bit of the climb to Chico's seventh heaven, and the episode of the taxicabs. The acting is especially notable. Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell rise to superb heights as the lovers.

The Cast: Janet Gaynor, Charles Farrell, Ben Bard, David Butler, Marie Mosquini, Albert Gran, Gladys Brockwell, Emile Chautard, George Stone. Director, Frank Borzage.

THEME: Romantic drama of regeneration of lovers who rise from the slums to find happiness in their love.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The ascent to Chico's quarters. The romantic scenes. The parade of the taxicabs.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play it up big. Bring out its romantic appeal. Stress the fine acting by principals. Play up director.

DRAWING POWER: For every type of house.

Produced and distributed by Fox Length, nine reels. Released . .

Cradle Snatchers

Comedy Succeeds In Clicking With Laughs

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WHEN it comes to the task of adapting a stage comedy to the screen it calls for considerable ingenuity to make up for the dialogue and the necessary "business." Those in charge of "Cradle Snatchers" have done very well by it. The piece is every bit as amusing as when it captured the giggles in its original design. No departures of any consequence have entered into the production scheme of things—that is, nothing of its substance is lost.

The plot of the three wives who are determined to teach their philandering husbands a trick or three in marital deportment lends itself particularly well to celluloid treatment. It necessitates the use of much byplay to squeeze out the fun. And, because it is prankish in its playfulness, it never becomes dull. The husbands are brought back to a sense of their obligations after registering extreme jealousy.

The picture is captioned with an eye upon the wise cracks, though none of them are overdone. It is moreover competently staged and as competently acted by a company which includes Louise Fazenda and Ethel Wales.

The cast: Joseph Stryker, Nick Stuart, Arthur Lake, Louise Fazenda, Ethel Wales, Dione Ellis, J. Farrell MacDonald, Dorothy Phillips, William Davidson, Franklyn Pangborn. Director, Howard Hawks.

THEME: Farce-comedy of domestic complications with three wives teaching their philandering husbands a lesson in kind.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The development of the farcial triangle. The effort to charm the collegians. The impersonations of the wives. The captions. The acting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Bill as amusing adaptation of play. Play up teaser campaign, using catch lines such as "Would you play the same game as your husband if you discovered he strayed from home?"

DRAWING POWER: Should draw well in all neighborhoods. Make a play for the young married couples, etc. O. K. for any type of house.

Produced and distributed by Fox.
Length, six reels. Released, May, 1927.

Irish Hearts

Overdone From Every Angle; Doubtful Appeal

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

A GOOD story gone wrong because of overstressed sentimentality and slapstick comedy unworthy of the star and principal characters. Imagine such deep-eyed villainy as practised by the heavy—taking the savings of the girl who loves him, telling her to make arrangements for their marriage the next day and then, while she is in the church, weds another girl. Or from the comedy angle—May McAvoy bowling over six-footers and handing the villain a vegetable barrage through pretty near a whole reel. The title will probably draw people of Irish extraction but not many, because word-of-mouth advertising won't help the picture. It is all very silly. The attempted bid for sympathy and then laughs only results in boredom because the Irish are not Irish and their actions are not Irish—it is rather the hybrid type of thing presented in a fifteen minute vaudeville skit.

The cast deserves both credit and sympathy—credit for the manner in which they carried out orders, sympathy because they had to. May McAvoy makes a very appealing colleen, Warner Richmond's performance is fair, though slightly overdone, Kathleen Key is pretty but becoming quite a buxom lass and Jason Robards, while he hasn't much to do, does it acceptably. Pity the poor scenarist who is asked to evolve something from nothing.

The Cast: May McAvoy, Jason Robards, Warner Richmond,, Kathleen Key, Walter Perry, Walter Rodgers, Les Bates. Story by Melville Crosman, script by Graham Baker and direction by Byron Haskins.

THEME: Comedy-melodrama of colleen in love with wastrel who jilts her; she finds happiness with man more worthy of her love.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Miss McAvoy's performance and the roughhouse action in the story if they like that sort of thing.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Make a play for the Irish and exploit the comedy angles.

DRAWING POWER: May do well in the small houses.

Produced and distributed by Warner Bros.
Length, 5,597 feet. Released May 21, 1927.

Slaves of Beauty

Light Entertainment

(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

A LIGHT story generally makes light entertainment and with this in mind Messrs. Conselman and Blystone have done as well as anyone could do with this picturization of a Nina Wilcox Putnam yarn. It is frothy but not through effervescence; but at the same time the Putnam name is good selling material, and there are some good tie-up possibilities that will tend to make this good summer fare. Women who have never seen the intricate machinery of a modern beauty parlor will certainly be interested, and it is also quite possible that mere man will also have his eyes opened—and wide! Earle Foxe well succeeds in a despicable role; Margaret Livingston is good; Sue Carol cute; Olive Tell convincing, and so's her old man, "Len," whose part is taken by Holmes Herbert.

An obscure beauty parlor with a doddering old inventor trying to work out a substitute for rubber is not conducive to trade; hence the whole family are not on good terms. But, while working on the rubber formula, Len accidentally discovers a corking good beauty clay and as a result the little shop thrives until it reach a Fifth Avenue address. Here, menace in the form of a sleek assistant manager enters. Even with prosperity, Len hasn't changed his habits and, with a combination of this and flattery by the assistant divorce. Len leaves and daughter arrives in time clay, entertains divorce. Len leaves and daughter arrives in time to open her mother's eyes to the danger.

The Cast: Holmes Herbert, Olive Tell, Earle Foxe, Margaret Livingston, Richard Walling, Sue Carol, Mary Foy. Directed by J. G. Blystone.

THEME: Husband's sacrifices for a woman who seeks to retain youth.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Scenes in beauty shop, direction and work of cast.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Author's name and beauty shop and contest tie-ups.

DRAWING POWER: Neighborhood and second run downtown.

Produced and distributed by Fox Films.
Length, 5,412 feet. Released, June 5, 1927.

Paying the Price

A Semi-Tragic Story Realistic and Serious

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

SUDDENLY avoiding the pitfalls which lurk in the byways to trip up a director who has a simple story to tell, David Selman, with material furnished by Dorothy Howell, Gilbert Pratt scenarist, has turned out a drama that is at once powerful and moving, visual and real. It shows signs of cooperation on the part of the producers, who resolutely preferred a realistic portrayal of a near tragedy to the saccharine hunk which would have no doubt effervesced the melancholy theme but which would have nevertheless detracted from its spirit and tenor. There are no false notes in Miss Howell's story; it portrays human weakness and human beastliness with sympathy and understanding and is something that could happen where the corrupt and unscrupulous prey upon the innocent and weak.

The tale is unfolded backwards and resolves itself down to the betrayal of two sisters, who are helpless in the hands of a couple of evil rascals, and of the murder of the major villain by the revengeful father. Circumstantial evidence points to another man as the murderer and the jury would condemn him to death but for the refusal of one of its members. The latter is the father in the case and his recountal stirs the jury to keep the real account of the murder a secret among themselves.

If the story be too sad, doleful, it makes up for that quality in the convincing manner in which it is screened and directed.

The Cast: Marjorie Bonner, Priscilla Bonner, William Welsh, Mary Carr, William Eugene, George Hackathorne, John Miljan and Eddie Phillips. Directed by David Selman.

THEME: Catastrophe which overtakes two girls leads to a murder and abolition of town with evil reputation.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The murder. The scenes in the jury room, and the story recounted there. The competent acting of all hands.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Title suggests tie-ups with various merchants. Parents of "Over the Hill" and Bonner Sisters should attract them.

DRAWING POWER: Good.

Three Miles Up

Entertaining Little Program Picture

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

SUGGESTION number one is that Universal advance the release date of this production as anything and everything having to do with airplanes should prove a good draw following the Lindbergh feat which occupies, and probably will continue to fill, the news columns of the daily papers for some time to come. Suggestion number two is that you play up the star of the production as he is well-known as a stunt flyer. It is a neat little picture with a story written to fit the particular talents of the featured player who performs some thrilling stunts, passing from one plane to another, tail spins and upside down flying. He proves agile as a panther on the ground when, fleeing the police, he climbs buildings and then handles an automobile like a Barney Oldfield.

Ethlyne Clair, known to the fans through her work in the "Snookums" series of two-reel comedies, appears opposite Wilson, making a very pretty heroine, and the rest of the supporting cast do what is asked of them in a manner which will elicit no complaint from the audiences. The story tells of an aviator who before the war was a crook but is trying to run the straight and narrow path despite interference by former confederates. It's hokum but who cares as long as the flying stunts are in evidence?

The Cast: Al Wilson, William Malan, Ethlyne Clair, William Clifford, Frank Rice, Billy "Red" Jones, Joe Bennett, Archie Ricks, Art Goebel. Author, Bruce Mitchell, who also directed.

THEME: Melodrama. Aviator, former crook, tries to go straight and succeeds though former associates make it difficult through forcing him to do one more "job."

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The aerial capers cut up by Wilson; the work of the supporting cast and the pretty heroine.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Airplane news in the daily papers of which advantage should be taken.

DRAWING POWER: Family picture for small houses.

Produced and distributed by Universal. Length, 4,041 feet. Released, September, 1927.

Lovers?

Romantic Tale Told With Restraint

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

ADAPTED from the stage play, "The World and His Wife," by Freederic Nirdlinger, beautifully photographed and deftly directed with Fitzmauricean grace by John Stahl, Ramon Novarro and Alice Terry again are seen in a tale of a triangle and the manner in which scandal mongers misinterpret a situation in which none of the three characters is guilty of a misdemeanor. That viewing of a thing from a distance, getting the wrong perspective entirely so that it seems quite different from what it really is, is pictured with skill by Stahl. We see wagging tongues, knowing eyes and winks of a group of "gentlemen" taking their ease and listen to their conversation; then that on which their attention is focussed is probed into by the camera and the contrast of good and good made to look bad is sharply shown.

The gossips took for granted something which was only apparent to their eyes. In a Spanish home lived an elderly and prospective ambassador, his young wife and his youthful ward and friend. The fact that their relations are noised about deters the forthcoming appointment of the husband as an ambassador of the Spanish king

However, the objection may be raised that the tale is too dull, spiritless, that it is overbalanced with its romance. True, but it is like a finely-told novel, which though lacking fireworks, tells its story with consummate finish of prose.

The Cast: Ramon Novarro, Alice Terry, Edward Connelly, Roy D'Arcy, Edward Martindel, George K. Arthur, John Miljan, Holmes Herbert. Director, John M. Stahl.

THEME: Two young lives rising triumphant over the besmirching influence of gossip.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The acting, love scenes, the duel, a play of light and shadows.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Novarro and Terry a well liked team. The class of the production. Emphasize the romantic angle.

DRAWING POWER: For high-class clientele, though average fans should like it too.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Released, April. Length, 5,291 feet.

Regional News from Correspondents

Kansas City

ONE of the largest attendances in the history of the M.P.T.O. Kansas-Missouri is expected at the eighth annual convention of that organization, June 1 and 2, in the Hotel Kansan, Topeka, Kas. Trade practices of the various film exchanges, arbitration and free show menaces will be discussed. A movement also is to be launched in the form of an appeal which is expected to greatly augment the ranks of the association. More members, more support, financial and moral, will be urged. R. R. Biechele probably will be a candidate for re-election as president.

The Rockhill theatre, Forty-sixth street and Troost avenue, opened its doors Sunday night, more than 3,000 patrons witnessing the first two nightly performances. Free parking space and a refrigerated cooling system are features of the new theare, which is a suburban house.

The Auditorium theatre, one of the oldest and most historic theatres in Kansas City, was opened Saturday night by Samuel Carver, present manager of the Liberty theatre, United Artists house, as a motion picture theatre.

No hot weather menace will confront scores of Kansas and Missouri theatres this summer. Many of the smaller town houses already have installed cooling and ventilating systems, as well as other improvements. Cooling systems have been installed in these theatres:

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market this week were: George Montray, St. Joseph, Mo.; L. Bruenninger, Orpheum, Topeka, Kas.; Ed Peskay, Penn theatre, St. Joseph Mo.; Frank Weary, Farris theatre, Richmond, Mo.; Hugh Gardner, Neosho, Mo.; Frank Wittam, Bonner Springs, Kas.; W. H. Weber, Great Bend, Kas.

Lyric theatre, Glasco, Kas.; Palace, Spring Hill, Kas.; Coxy, Minneapolis, Kas.; Olympic, Ness, Kas.; Prescott theatre, Prescott, Kas.; Goldman Belt, Ellsworth, Kas.; Banny theatre, Mansfield, Mo.; Kelly, Iola, Kas.; Republic theatre, Republic, Mo.; Strand, Greenfield, Mo.

These improvements have been made at the following theatres: Empress, Fort Scott, Kas., new seats; Star, Warrensburg, Mo., redecorating and lobby improvements; Gem, Baldwin, Kas., new seats, redecorating and lobby improvements; Triplett Opera House, Triplett, Mo., redecorating.

Mel Wilson, formerly Fox exchange manager in Denver, has been added to the sales force of the Kansas City Fox exchange.

F. B. Fish, Fox branch manager, [illegible] his company at Atlantic City.

C. A. "Red" Jones, Educational branch manager, has been displaying photographs of himself, taken with various comedy stars, since returning from the Educational convention.

Edward Alperson and Edward Safier, divisionel manager and special representative, respectively, for Warner Bros., were Kansas City visitors, departing later for St. Louis.

Harry Strickland, Warner Bros., branch manager, was hustling in the territory this week, as was C. A. Schultz, manager of Midwest Distributors, Inc., and Roy Pearson, Pathe branch manager.

The Paramount branch force has been in unusually high spirits since returning from the recent Paramount convention in San Francisco. W. A. Burke of the first National exchange has been added to the K. O. Club, the honor club which admits the high salesmen during each quarter of the year.

Seattle

ROBERT W. BENDER, associated with the Universal Film Company in the Pacific Northwest territory for the last five years, last week was appointed managing director of the eleven Universal chain houses in Seattle, Washington, operated as the Northwest Theatrical Enterprises Circuit. The appointment was made by Jack Schlaifer, himself a former Northwest exchange manager, and now head of the Universal chain houses.

Mr. Bender's association with Universal began several years ago, when he was exploitation and publicity director of the Seattle branch office.

A. J. Xydias, president of Sunset Productions of Hollywood, was a visitor in this city last week, conferring with Jack Lannon, of the Columbia Exchanges, and D. C. Millward, of the Western Film Company, relative to the distribution of Mr. Xydias' independent product in the Northwestern states. The present trip was preliminary to the scheduling of forthcoming productions, according to Mr. Xydias' statements during his local stay.

Harold Horne, head of the Harold Horne Enterprises, who recently sold his interest in the Society Theatre to P. J. DeClerque, left last week for Los Angeles, where he will again become associated with one of the large producing companies. Mr. Horne was well known here as a publicity and exploitation specialist.

Marice Segal, salesman for Manager George P. Endert's local Famous Players exchange, is at present recovering from a severe case of septic poisoning contracted a short time ago in Spokane. He has been confined to a Spokane hospital for a number of days.

Charles Grieme, former owner and manager of the Ivan L. Theatre at Blaine, Washington, last week announced that he has disposed of his interests in the border city to Mr. King, former theatre operator of Tacoma. Mr. Grieme's plans for the future are as yet undecided.

The Liberty Theatre in Everett, Washington, opened recently by Ray E. Connell, last week was taken over by the Star Amusement Company, operating several other houses in that city. The Liberty has recently been involved in labor difficulties, Mr. Connell at the present time pressing a damage suit of $2,500 against the Everett theatre unions for alleged picketing and restraint of trade.

Church services at midnight for theatrical folk, similar to the custom in vogue in other large cities, were instituted in Seattle last week by Dr. Mook of the Trinity Episcopal Church, and will be a monthly custom in this city hereafter.

A. J. Goldman, formerly connected with various film distributing enterprises in Minnesota, last week was appointed special sales representative of the local Film Booking Offices exchange by Manager Art H. Huot. Mr. Goldman will cover the Eastern Washington territory for F.B.O.

Clem Pope, formerly associated with the T. & D. Theatres in Oakland for the last four years, arrived in Spokane last week to take over the management of Universal's Clemmer Theatre in that city. He succeeds Manager Frieday, who leaves for Utica, N. Y., to assume the management of the Avon Theatre.

The Green Lake Theatre, in this city, formerly owned and operated by A. Richey, last week was taken over by O. W. Newton. Mr. Newton, recently an exhibitor in Hillyard, Washington, plans the erection of a second suburban house in the Green Lake district within the near future, according to present reports.

Ray Felker, former assistant manager of Universal's Columbia Theatre in Portland, arrived in town last week to take over the management of the Winter Garden Theatre. He succeeds Frank Edwards, who resigned recently after selling the house to the Universal circuit.

Other visitors included M. C. DeLeo, of the Rose Theatre, Port Townsend; Waldo Ives and O. O. Ruth, of Mount Vernon and Anacortes, and C. P. Scates, manager of the American Theatre in Butte, who was here to confer with Harry C. Arthur, Jr., relative to affairs in the Montana district.

Effective this week, the United Artists Theatre has announced a new policy of weekly changes in program, to supplant the present policy of two- and three-week engagements of the bigger pictures. The new plan will be maintained during the summer season, with admission prices remaining the same.

Fred Walton, operator of the American Theatre in Bellingham, announced last week that his house will soon undergo an entire renovating.

Early spring weather—a combination of sun and showers—had little effect upon theatre business in this territory last week. As is the case a great part of the time, the houses that had the pictures did the business—others dragged along. Neighborhood business showed a slight decline in general.

Des Moines

J. L. BROOKER has sold the Paramount Theatre at Winterset, Iowa to H. B. Canning.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Curtis who have been operating a theatre at Ardale, Iowa, have bought the Grand Theatre at Cedar Rapids. W. J. Miller, theatre broker, reports that the transaction was closed on May 25 and that the theatre will be under the new ownership on June 1. Mr. and Mrs. Curtis have had considerable experience in the theatre field. Mr. Adams is retiring from the theatre business here in order to travel for a reproducing piano company.

Toledo, Iowa, is trying out the Sunday closing question in a unique manner. The controversy over the Sunday show has come to be too hot to be comfortable and Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Regan have closed their house until the matter is brought to an agreement. The question will come up before the city council very soon.

Salesmen of the Pathe exchange who are attending the sales convention in Chicago are E. L. Myers, R. W. McEwan, O. H. Garland, H. R. Frankel. The convention dates were May 27, May 28 and May 29.

Leo Wedertz of the First National office is in charge of the baseball team this year with which the film companies in the film exchange buildings are expecting to trim the team made up from film companies outside the building. Although the Outside Team won the contest last year that only spurs the Inside Team to give them a real beating this year. Practice is on the daily schedule but no date has been set for a game. It is probable that the contest will come off the latter part of June. And the golfers are getting in line again for the golf tournament of the Des Moines Film Board of Trade, which Jimmy Wynn of Educational so ably managed last year. But bowling seems to have been shown the alley for none can be interested in this sport which has developed such experts among the Omaha film staffs.

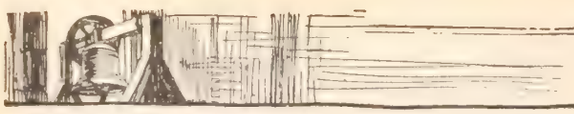
Canada

THE B. and F. Circuit of Toronto, Ontario, comprising Sam Bloom and Sam Fine, two veteran local exhibitors, will shortly have two more handsome suburban houses in Toronto, these theatres being under construction. They are the Grover Theatre, Danforth Avenue and Dawes Road, seating 900 persons and having office suites, and the Gerrard Theatre, on Gerrard Street East, seating 900 and having one store in the property. The two houses have stage facilities for special presentations.

Incidentally, the B. and F. Circuit is affiliated with the Famous Players Canadian Corp., and already operates eight Toronto theatres, namely, the Christie, York, La Plaza, Classic, Danforth, Beaver, Mavety and Teck. Double feature bills are presented at these houses with a 40 cent admission, with the exception of the Beaver Theatre, where the programmes include a single feature-length picture, the admission price here being 32 cents.

Lawrence Bros., Dinsmore, Sask., owners of the local moving picture theatre, have purchased a new site, 30 by 80 feet, for the construction of a new theatre there.

Ald. Ernie Marks, proprietor of the New Martin Theatre, Oshawa, Ontario, has installed a ventilation [illegible] in the house. Ald. Marks is said to be the oldest exhibitor in Canada in point of years but he has young ideas.



The new Columbia Theatre has been started at Vancouver, B. C. The theatre will cost about $150,000.

T. S. Dopfer, proprietor of the Bijou Theatre, Palmerton, Ontario, is producing short subjects locally for presentation in this house exclusively. The pictures have aroused unusual attention.

W. A. Wilkinson has remodeled the Rex Theatre, Merrit, B. C., and has booked a number of important pictures.

The British and Canadian Pictures Company has been organized at Oakville, Ontario, with Ward McAllister as manager and James Gordon Youndeer as director. Charles de Soria is in charge of cameras. It is announced that the company is not selling stock.

The "Met" has shown exceptional progress during the past six months.

Philadelphia

HARRY T. JORDAN, who has been general representative of the B. F. Keith interests in Philadelphia, and who has been spending the greater part of the last year in Hollywood as personal representative of E. F. Albee, will return to Philadelphia about July 1st and will assume general supervision of the extensive alteratons to be made on the B. F. Keith Chestnut Street Theatre during the summer months. The house closed down June 4th and approximately $60,000 will be spent on interior repairs and improvements.

Mr. Effinger is planning extensive improvements in his Leader and Glenside theatres during the summer months. The former house will be redecorated throughout and the seating capacity of the Glenside Theatre, at Glenside, will be increased some 400 seats, a new front will be erected and the house will have a general re-vamping. It is expected that it will be necessary to close the Glenside for a portion of the summer at least. In addition to the work planned on the Leader and Glenside a new marquee will be erected in front of the 69th Street Theatre, and minor changes made in the interior of the house.

Charles Segal, prominent Philadelphia exhibitor, has resigned as supervisor of construction for the Stanley Company and is devoting all of his time to theatrical and real estate interests. Mr. Segal has been succeeded by Charles Dingelman, who was engineer for the company under Mr. Segal. Mr. Dingelman will act as Chief Engineer.

Percy A. Bloch, branch manager for Paramount, is slowly recovering from a severe stomach ailment at the Jefferson Hospital. Eli M. Orowitz, a movie broadcaster for station WIP, and a former Paramount employee, made an announcement over the radio of Mr. Bloch's illness and as a result the popular Philadelphia exchangeman was literally deluged with letters at the hospital expressing best wishes for an early recovery.

The Lansdown Theatre, a joint enterprise of the Stanley Company of America and Herbert Effinger, opened on June 1st. The theatre, which has a seating capacity of 1,600, is located at Baltimore Pike and Lansdowne Avenue, Lansdowne. Sidney Jacobs, assistant manager at the 69th Street Theatre, has been installed as resident manager of the new house and John W. Stango, a prominent organist, has been assigned to the console temporarily.

Two Stanley Company executives recently sailed for short stays in Europe. Thomas W. Love, general manager of the Stanley Co.'s legitimate theatres, is en route to Ostend, Belgium, to attend as delegate from the Philadelphia Rotary Club an international meeting of Rotarians. Mr. Love will extend his short tour of Europe to include Paris and London. George W. Metzler, manager of the Stanley Company's William Penn Theatre, sailed on the Steamship "Reliance" for a general tour of European countries. He will return about September 1st, while Mr. Love is expecting to be back in Philadelphia at the expiration of five weeks. During Mr. Love's absence the theatres will be under the supervision of Miss Rae Freedman, who is executive assistant and secretary to Mr. Love.

THE theatre at Rolling Green Park, Sunbury, after having undergone material improvements, was opened for the summer season on Thursday, May 26, under the management of Jacob Dale, manager of the Park Theatre in that city.

The East Coast Theatres Company has acquired control of the Colonial Theatre, Trumbauersville, Pa., from Christian Hildebrand, under a ten-year lease with an option to buy. The theatre seats 400. Frank Hildebrand, one of the former owners, will act as local manager.

The management of the Olympic Theatre, Altoona, held a special morning show for children on Saturday, May 28, in co-operation with the Robert Morton Circus, which was showing in Altoona for the benefit of the Police Department. Each child who attended the morning matinee received a free ticket to attend the circus in the afternoon.

Use of the Strand Picture Theatre, Carlisle, was devoted on Memorial Day to the municipal celebration of the holiday. Following a parade in the early morning the theatre was thrown open at 10 o'clock for the convenience of the public. There was a band concert there at 10:15, and at 11 o'clock patriotic Memorial Day exercises were started.

In connection with the Sesqui-Centennial celebration in the city of York, to be held this Fall, the cameraman of the Strand Theatre is shooting motion pictures built around historical places and incidents in that city, some of which are based on revolutionary times.

Motion picture theatre organists took a prominent part in the annual convention of the Pennsylvania State Council, National Association of Organists, held in Harrisburg, May 24 and 25. Among those attending from Harrisburg theatre were Harold Booth, of the Colonial, and Mrs. Pauline Katz, of the Victoria. The organization is composed chiefly of church organists. Dr. William W. Wolf, of Lancaster, was re-elected president of the Council.

Two amusement companies have been granted Pennsylvania charters at the capitol in Harrisburg. One is the Forest Park Company, of Philadelphia, and the other the Indiana Amusement Park, Inc., of Indiana, Pa.

The first named is incorporated to acquire, own and operate theatres, parks and places of amusement, and is normally capitalized at $10,000, of which $1,000 has been paid in on a par value basis of $50. The incorporators are Emanuel G. Kolb, treasurer, of Gowen Street and Stenton Avenue, Philadelphia, 101 shares; Isabella Kolb, same address, 97 shares, and Gilbert F. Foote, Jr., 431 East Sedgewick Street, Philadelphia, one share.

Portland, Ore.,

WILLIAM C. ROACH, 53, owner of the Oregon and Sellwood theatres, died late Friday while enroute to the Sellwood hospital.

Roach was taking his sister-in-law to her home when he suddenly complained of feeling ill, and stopped his automobile. He tried to gain his feet alongside his car but collapsed. Roach has been in the theatre business here for five years. Born in Ontario, Canada, he came to the United States 35 years ago and lived in several northwest cities before settling in Portland seven years ago.

He is survived by his wife, Mamie Roach; a son, Howard W. Roach, manager of the Oregon theatre; his mother, a brother and a sister.

Contract has been let for two new electric signs for the Peoples theatre. One is to be placed to attract the Broadway traffic and the other for the Washington St. shoppers.

Eddie Smith, who came up from San Francisco to take charge of the Columbia recently for Universal has resigned his position and leaves tonight for San Francisco. No announcement has been made as yet as to who his successor will be, but Bob Bender is expected here Monday to take charge until another manager arrives.

The Flood Benefit show given by the allied theatrical people of Portland last Monday night was an overwhelming success. This was largely due to the untiring efforts of the committee in charge, headed by W. W. Ely, manager of the Hippodrome theatre.

Everything was free! Everything was contributed. The city donated the auditorium, which normally seats 3,000. 7,500 tickets were printed and 6,000 were sold. Result, $6,000 to turn over to the Red Cross for relief work.

Kansas City

FORTY-TWO representatives of First National arrived in Kansas City at various times Monday to board a special train for Hollywood, where they attended the First National convention last Thursday. William Warner, manager of the Kansas City First National branch, met each contingent at the union station with an old fashioned stage coach, pulled by a pair of pinto ponies, and escorted them in the fashion of the days of '49 to their hotels.

Fred Spear, publicity manager of the Orpheum theatre, Kansas City, is recovering from an operation at St. Luke's hospital, which probably will keep him in bed two weeks. The Orpheum closed this week for the summer.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market this week were: W. M. Hubble, Hubble theatre, Trenton, Mo.; John Tackett, Tackett theatre, Coffeyville, Kans.; Barney Dubinsky, Jefferson and Miller theatres, Jefferson City, Mo.; Walter Wallace, Orpheum, Leavenworth, Kans.

Eph Rosen, Tiffany branch manager, is hustling in the Kansas City territory.

Superiority guarded thirty-eight years

In 1889 Eastman film made movies practicable. And today the famous Kodak Research Laboratories still safeguard the superiority that has always marked Eastman Negative and Positive.

Superiority in film includes higher screen quality. High screen quality insures satisfaction to the public. And constant satisfaction is needed to maintain and increase box-office receipts.

Always specify prints on Eastman Positive, and look for the words "Eastman —Kodak" in the transparent margin.

Effect Lighting in Theatres

By J. H. Kurlander
Brenkart Light Projection Company

(Paper Presented Before the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, Norfolk, Va., April 25-28, 1927)

MOTION picture programs today, specially as found in many of the de luxe houses, represent a combination of the earlier "straight movie" show with a trimming of vaudeville numbers formed against a musical background provided by an organ, orchestra, or stage band.

There are exceptions to this formula, of course, but animated performers, assisted by music provided by one or more means, are used to supplement the motion pictures which still constitute the principal body of the program.

With the fusion of these two hitherto widely separated types of entertainment, it was only natural that the theatrical atmosphere which formed a part of the legitimate stage setting should also be used in constructing the modern form of entertainment peculiar to the presentation of motion pictures.

This rather indefinite, almost intangible, "something," usually referred to as "atmosphere," is provided, for the large part, by means of effect lighting.

In its general aspects, so-called effect lighting is composed of three very broad divisions, as follows:

1. The projection of animated scenic effects. 2. The projection of color effects. 3. The projection of simple masks, cut-outs and special lantern slides.

The last two of the above named divisions are of comparatively recent origin, at least as regards the particular manner in which they are applied to the presentation of motion pictures.

Animated scenic effects, however, were used on the legitimate stage a score or more years ago and they have been retained, with practically no changes, until the present time.

In general, scenic effects are imaged upon a suitable curtain, drop, or serim, by the simple expedient of placing a revolving transparent disc, on which the particular effect is painted, printed, or photographed, before a projection lens, much in the same fashion that a slide is projected by a stereoptican lantern. Indeed, many of the commonly used effects are nothing more than special, elaborate, lantern slides so designed as to repeat themselves continuously upon the screen. The driving power for these effects may be obtained from either a double-spring clock work motor or an electric motor, attached to the metal casing which encloses the revolving disc for purposes of protection and attachment to the projector.

Component parts of a disc type effect unit.

Mica is used in constructing the discs because it has the advantages of light weight; does not readily break; is suitably transparent; and above all, withstands a high degree of heat. An effect disc of the type just described is shown in Fig. 1. In the case of certain scenic effects, such as clouds and panoramic views of floods and cyclones, which are focussed in a fairly sharp manner upon the screen, the parts of the effect consist of simply the effect disc, the protective casing and the actuating, adjustable speed, clockwork motor.

Moonlight water ripple box effect and metal ripple mask.

Other effects, such as flames, ocean waves, babbling brook, etc., use the same parts in their construction with the addition of a 5-inch diameter glass ripple plate inserted just in front of the projected portion of the disc, so that the projection lens sees the disc through the rippled glass. The plate serves to give an irregular fused-motion effect to the local areas on the disc which would otherwise move across the screen in sharply defined rigid fashion. The component parts of an effect unit are shown in Fig. 2. Some effects, as for instance rain and snow, make use of either a special disc, or a special plate placed before the disc in such a position that both elements are projected at the same time.

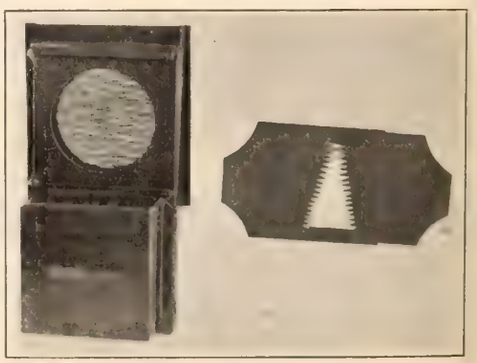
In the case of rain the standard 18-inch mica disc is used, the entire disc being opaque with the exception of the rain drops which are represented by elongated clear portions in mica for passing the light.

A rain plate, consisting of two separate plates of either glass or mica, on which have been printed closely spaced opaque lines, the plates then being placed together and rotated at a slight angle to form a zig-zag pattern, is then placed in front of the rain disc to break up the drops and give the effect of a shower.

A special disc is used in the case of snow, this being of a firm, opaque material in which have been punched many small holes (representing the snow flakes) closely spaced to simulate either a heavy or light snowfall, as desired.

Each effect disc is provided with a holding plate, the edges of which are turned over to form a lip so that the effect casing can be slid into a suitable holding plate on the projector in the same fashion that a colored gelatine is placed in position in front of a spotlamp.

These holding plates on the effect casing are not rigidly fastened but can be swiveled completely around to permit of the effect casing being rotated when in position before the projector condenser lenses. In this manner the effect, as shown upon the screen, can be made to sweep across it in any desired direction.



The method of projecting upon the screen such standard effects, as described above, is briefly shown in Fig. 3 where it will be seen that the optic system used is that of the well known stereoptican form.

Some effects require two elements, one of which consists of a suitable lantern slide or a metal stencil-mask placed in the slide carrier of the projector. Of such a type is the waving flag effect wherein a lantern slide of a flag is projected to the screen through the slots of a spoked wheel which revolves at a point between the projection lens and slide. The wave motion is imparted to the flag by the shadows of the wheel spokes sweeping across the projected image on the screen.

Other examples of two-element effects are the rainbow, aurora-borealis and lightning effects. The first named (See Fig. 4) uses a stencil of a rainbow cut in a metal mask which is then placed in the slide-carrier for imaging on the screen, and in front of the projection lens (Fig. 5) is placed a prism box containing two optical prisms for imparting the necessary rainbow colors to the image on the screen.

Some effects are quite complicated as to structure, a good illustration being the moonlight water ripple (a two-element effect using a ripple-box and a metal mask) shown in Fig. 6. Three ripple plates are used in this device, each plate consisting of

New A. H. Schwartz Theatres Adopt Typhoon System

Several new theatres being built by the Homack Corporation for the A. H. Schwartz circuit, a fast growing theatre chain operating in Brooklyn and on Long Island, N. Y., will be equipped with the Typhoon Two-in-One cooling system, according to a recent communication from the latter company. These new Schwartz houses are located at Flatbush and Kings Highway, Brooklyn; Coney Island Ave. and Avenue U, Brooklyn; Flushing, L. I.; Freeport, L. I.; Huntington, L. I.; Port Washington, L. I.; and Corona, L. I. Two others are also under way in Queens and Brooklyn.

Other installations reported are: the Pearl Theatre, Philadelphia; the Central Theatre, Atlantic City; the Star Theatre, Ealsenburg, Colo.; and the Guilford, New Haven.

Cancellograph Attachment Proves Popular

A recent report from the automatic Ticket Register Corporation indicates that the new Cancellograph attachment, a new invention, is undoubtedly responsible for the heaviest April and May sales in the history of the company. The printing department has also recently been enlarged in the purchase of the Empire Ticket company plant of Boston, Mass. E. S. Bowman, treasurer of Automatic Ticket states that he will shortly have an important announcement to make in connection with the further expansion of his concern.

an opaque field across which fine water ripple lines weave so as to overlap and form a network.

These three plates are then caused to move up and down by means of a clockwork motor, being thrown out of step (120°) with each other by means of three eccentric hubs on the motor shaft; each ripple plate being joined to its respective hub through a driving arm.

There are any number of animated scenic effects which can be devised, a few of those more commonly used being listed in Table 1, but in general, all of them are operated in one of the ways described above.

Scenic lantern slides, in combination with an effect for imparting motion to certain areas contained in the picture, are also commonly used. Thus, in a slide of a campfire group, a flame effect can be used to show a realistic camp-fire with the flames leaping from the logs; or a mountain water fall can be shown with the water tumbling over the brink of the fall to the bottom; or still further, the water in the pool at the base of the fall can be made to swirl about.

Indeed, by means of animated effects, volcanoes can be set into action; the fury of the elements invoked; and scenes can skip quickly from arctic to tropics, from summer to winter—while the patrons sit high and dry, in comfortable seats.

Cameron's "Talking Movies" Just Off Press

James R. Cameron, author of Motion Picture Projection and several other books dealing with the taking and showing of motion pictures, has recently published a new volume entitled, "Talking Movies." The first part deals with the "talkies" during a period between the years 1900 and 1914; the second part going into detail concerning the various systems now in use, and in such a manner that the subject is easily understood. Full page diagrams and photographs illustrate the text.

Among the present day systems covered are Vitaphone, Movietone, Phonofilm and the Western Electric Palaphotophone. The book is published at $1.50 and can be obtained from James R. Cameron, Manhattan Beach, N. Y.

Fakers Make Trouble for Reynolds Elec. Co.

A recent communication from the Reynolds Electric Company of Chicago, manufacturers of electric signs and color hoods, states that they have been put to considerable confusion and loss through the activities of a person falsely representing himself as an employee of the Reynolds Electric Co.

This is the second time that this concern has experienced this sort of a situation and the letter further states that authorized representatives of the Reynolds Electric Company carry sufficient credentials to easily identify themselves, and wish to notify the trade to that effect.

J. H. Rankin Buys New Site at Bridgeville, Pa.

A new theatre at Bridgeville, Pa., is promised in plans of J. H. Rankin, now manager of the Rankin theatre, who has just consummated the purchase of a site on Washington avenue. The building will be of brick construction, with a seating capacity of 700, and will operate under the name of Rankin theatre. The present house, according to plans, will continue to operate—under another name.

Emergency Power Plants Meet With Favor

That many theatre owners consider an emergency power plant as a necessary item of theatre equipment is evidenced by a recent report from Roth Brothers of Chicago, Ill., manufacturers of the Roth Emergency light plant. This system is claimed to be fully automatic throughout, automatically maintaining a bank of storage batteries in a fully charged condition, testing itself once a day and switching to battery operation in case of power failure.

Among recent installations of the Roth plant are included the new Marboro Theatre, Chicago; the new Orpheum Theatre, Omaha, Neb.; Balaban & Katz's Norshore, Chicago; (one Actodetector) the Orient, Detroit; Saxe's New Oshkosh, Oshkosh, Wis.; Yuma Theatre, Yuma, Ariz.; Avon Theatre, Watertown, N. Y. and fully a dozen other houses at different points.

New Cleveland Theatre to Add 2,000 Seats

The Commodore Perry will soon be listed among Cleveland's newest motion picture theatres. Situated on Lake Shore Boulevard and East 152nd St., it will add about 2,000 available seats for the local fan population. The house is being built by Henry Lustig, Max Lefkowitz, I. Polster and Henry Greenberger. The roof is already on the building, which is scheduled to be completed no later than September 1st.

Plans Under Way for New Detroit Theatre

Plans for the erection of a new theatre at Nine Mile Road and Gratiot, Detroit, to be known as the Olympia, are under way. The structure will contain stores and offices and the cost is said to be in the neighborhood of $200,000. The theatre has been designed to seat 1,300. Work is to start immediately.

Keith-Shea Interest to Build at Akron

B. F. Keith and Feiber Shea interests have combined to build a large new house in Akron. It will be built on the site of the present Colonial theatre, will have approximately 2,500 seats, and will be equipped for combination picture and vaudeville programs.

Ground Broken at Youngstown

The much talked-of new 2,000-seat motion picture theatre for Youngstown, O., is at last a reality. Last week ground was broken for the building by Spitz Renner and his associates. The same men will also build a new 500-seat house not far from the big theatre to take care of second-run engagements.

"Mother"—F. B. O., Hippodrome Theatre, New York City

Morning Telegraph: "A better picture than any on Broadway. The best picture I recall seeing at massive Hippodrome. The best F. B. O. production I remember. Easily the best thing Belle Bennett has done since 'Stella Dallas.' Has been designed to please millions, and will accomplish its purpose. Climax comes with a speed and power that brings a gasp from the audience."

Daily News: "Cast exceptionally well chosen. Each member a performer with personality and much versatility." Blakewell who plays young son, gives probably best performance of movie youth that screen has witnessed in many a day."

Daily Mirror: "Best movie of its kind yet to appear."

Times: "Miss Bennett gives sound idea of mother who puts duty before everything."

Evening Journal: "Film well handled."

Sun: "Mother simply and sincerely acted and directed. William

"The Better 'Ole" — Warner Brothers, Aldine Theatre, Philadelphia

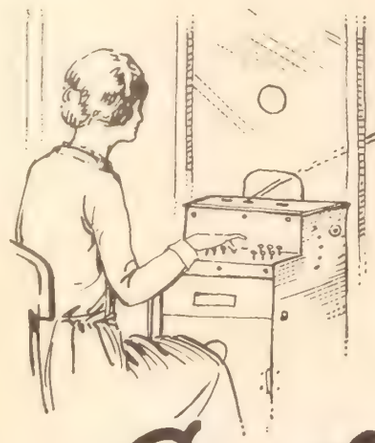
Record: "Syd Chaplin was never funnier than as Old Bill. He couldn't have been. There have been few funnier pictures."

Evening Bulletin: "For sheer buffoonery, cleverness in clowning and artistry of make-up, one of cinema's Croix de Guerre is due Syd Chaplin."

Public Ledger Review: "Here is just Old Bill himself, perfect in make-up and consistent throughout. His adventures behind the front provide continuous comedy."

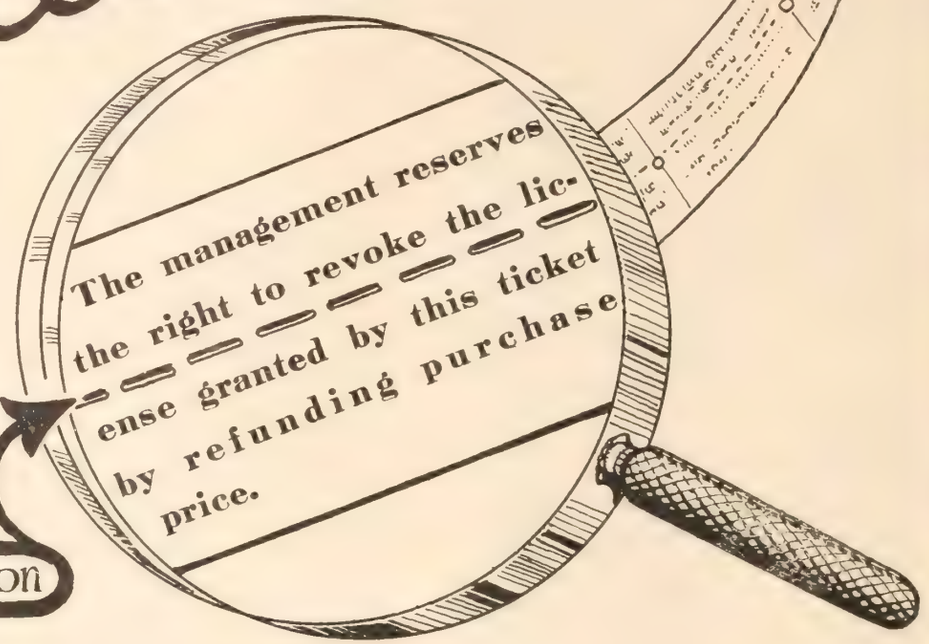
Enquirer: "A moving picture without a heroine and without a single kiss and yet which can hold the laughter, the tears and the interest of an audience to the end might be called a miracle. Yet such was 'The Better 'Ole'."

Evening Ledger: "Invariably amusing slapstick. Syd Chaplin's 'Bill' is superb characterization."



Daily News: "A rollicking farce of the World War."

"Is Zat So?"—Fox Films, Roxy Theatre, New York City



Evening World: "Very amusing comedy. Well worth seeing and there are plenty of good laughs all way through."

Evening Journal: "Gorgeously hilarious. If you like stage play, you'll get as much of kick out of film. George O'Brien perfect. . . . Edmund Lowe riot. . . .'Is Zat So?' is refreshingly slangy and genuinely entertaining."

Evening Sun: "Amusing little farce. . . . Marjorie Beebee . . . offers refreshing brand of clowning, and, before long she will probably become another Constance Talmadge or a humorous Clara Bow."

The Mark of Protection

For the first time—Full Protection for Your Box-office

This "Mark of Protection" perforates every ticket that is issued through Model 28 Gold Seal Register. "The Cancellograph", says one exhibitor, "makes all other ticket registers obsolete". Large exhibitors all over the country are trading in their old ticket machines for the improved Model 28, equipped with our new Gold Seal invention—the Cancellograph.

Find out now how this "Mark of Protection" will guard your box-office against stolen and counterfeit ticket supplies. Remember—only the Gold Seal has the Cancellograph.

The Most Complete Treatise on Modern Theatre Organs is NOW Ready for you . . . .

WHAT part does the pipe organ play in theatre programs? . . . What should an exhibitor consider in planning an organ installation? . . . How are pipe organs made? . . . What is the background of the modern theatre organ? . . . How does the organ help to put the picture across?

These are a few of the questions answered in an intensely interesting and informative Theatre Pipe Organ Manual published by Geo. Kilgen & Son, 287 year old guild of organ-builders. The book is pleasingly illustrated in colors and written in an absorbing style. One section written by John Eberson, the eminent theatre architect, tells how to purchase a pipe organ. This discussion alone makes the book the most notable and helpful organ treatise ever presented to the motion picture industry.

We will be glad to present a copy of this book free to any exhibitor who plans a new pipe organ for his theatre. Please make your request on one of your business letterheads and state the number of seats in your theatre . . . Geo. Kilgen & Son, Inc., 4038 North Union Blvd., St. Louis, U. S. A. (A Kilgen Theatre Organ architect is readily available at any of the branch offices of the National Theatre Supply Co.)

YORK
Air Cooling & Purifying Systems for Theatres

The KOMENSKY THEATRE one of CHICAGO'S NEWEST will be equipped with a York air cooling system. Old man "summer slump" needn't apply.

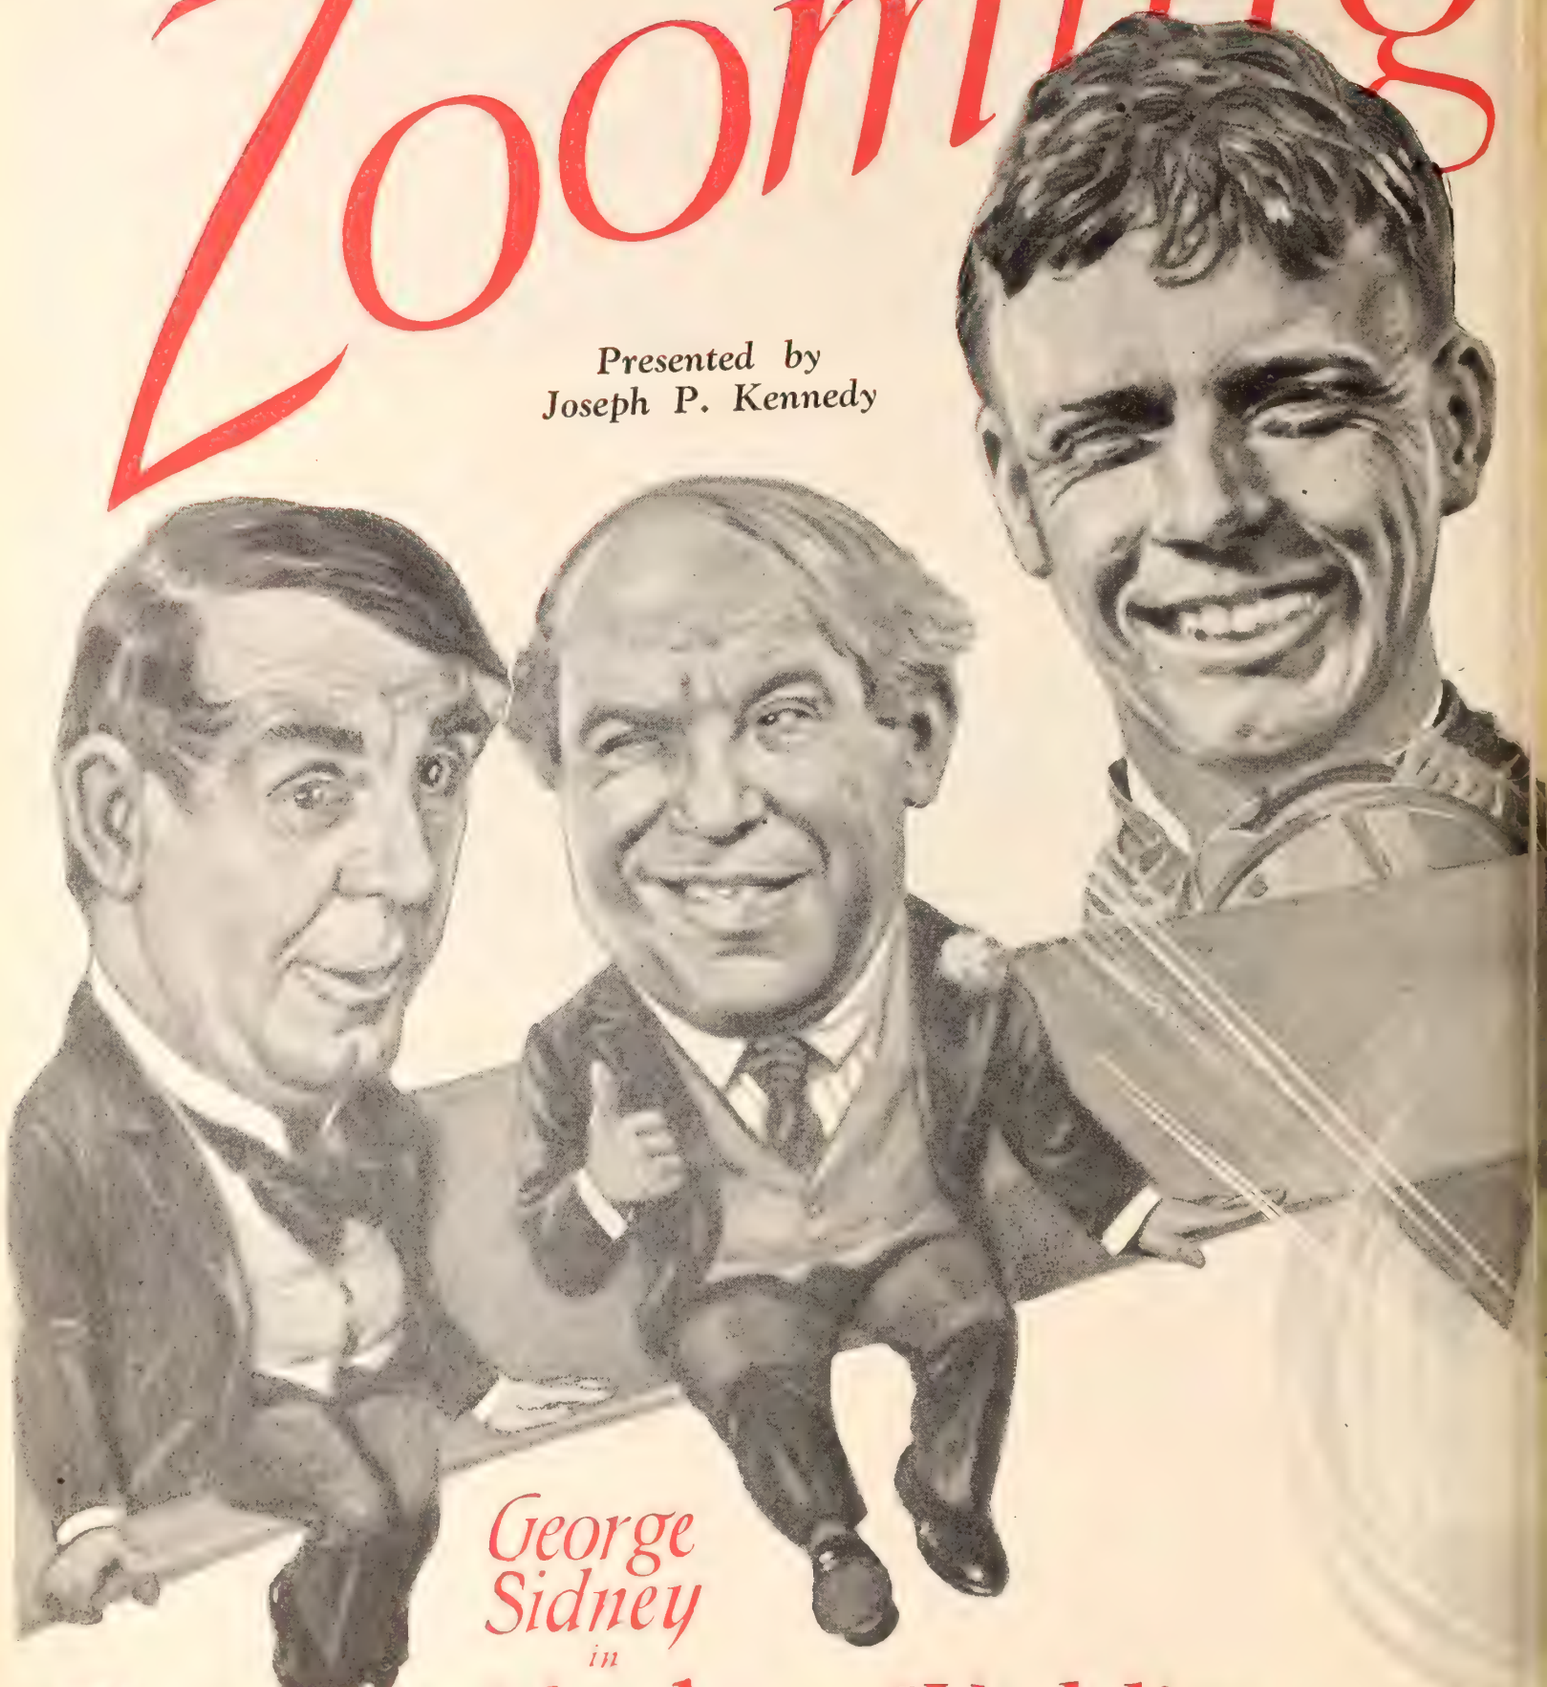
Hot weather is just around the corner, and you know what will happen to those houses that are not prepared for it—they can throw away their S. R. O. signs, for they won't need 'em.



Investigate the York system now—being curious won't cost you anything—besides, we would like to tell you about the long list of York theatre cooling installations now under way. There are some mighty fine houses on the list.

---An Eye Opener

Here's an eye opener for you. Go over your booking records for the last year and total up the number of reels of film you have played in the longer features. Then get the total number of reels made up of the short features you have played. Then compare the amount of money you have spent advertising those short feature reels with the amount you have put into advertising the long features.

If you are the average exhibitor, I'll bet these comparisons will be a surprise to you. Are you being fair to yourself in helping your short features to bring patrons to your box-office? Those figures will tell!

Educational Pictures are not only made to be the finest short features you can show your patrons, but they are backed up with consistent national exploitation and magazine advertising. They are making money for 13,000 exhibitors right now. But they'll make more money for you if you'll tie up this national advertising to your own box-office with adequate local exploitation.

It keeps theatres CROWDED

because it keeps them COOL

At last, a sure shot attendance builder for the summer months, at a price every exhibitor can pay. Does everything a more expensive cooling system can do—and at an unbelievably low price.

The device is the quiet Lakeside Cooler and Ventilator—an amazing invention. Nothing like it on the market for the money. A size that will keep your theatre delightfully fresh and cool during the most stifling weather is offered, ready for easy installation on remarkably easy terms.

A little a day for one year and it's paid for Successful exhibitors consider cooling and ventilating as business insurance not expense. And the quiet Lakeside has no competition on that basis. Set aside a small sum a day and in one year the size you require is paid for. It will keep on giving dependable service for year after year. It's unreservedly guaranteed. All metal construction.

Leading engineers endorse it highly

Nobody can offer you a cooling system at quiet Lakeside low prices that equals the quiet Lakeside for efficiency. With its low speed motor, S K F ball bearings and Tex-rope drive you have to strain your ears to hear it running. Engineers say that this feature plus its special improved method of deflecting air without drafts puts the quiet Lakeside in a class by itself. All the air that the quiet Lakeside takes in is circulated through the theatre—none stays in the drum.

Reserve one now—mail the coupon—no obligation

At these prices we expect to be oversold before the summer half starts. If you want to make sure of getting a quiet Lakeside, mail the coupon and it will act as a reservation order without obligating you to buy. Remember your theatre needs ventilation all year as well as cooling ventilation in hot weather. Your quiet Lakeside circulates fresh warm air as efficiently as fresh cool air —meets ventilating requirements of all health boards. Take a real step in the direction of net profit protection. Reflections on Mergers, Economy Gestures and Pictures

By William A. Johnston

MERGERS, economy, frankness. The first two words pretty well sum up the chief topics in the industry today. That third word—frankness—appeals to us. Broadway and points west offer plenty of things to be frank about—and for the general good, too.

LET'S SEE. The center of the film stage is held by theatres—from the financial exploitation angle. Meaning that "Wall Street" is backing the industry on a big scale with millions—and the end is not yet.

Of course, Wall Street knows virtually nothing about pictures and cares less. Real estate, brick and mortar appeal to the financiers. That's their language. So the race goes merrily on, while the general average of picture quality droops.

What's to be done about this? Nothing, so far as the bankers are concerned. They're told this is a psychological business. Well, it is. But just the same, production and some other vital things are dangerously near being lost in the merger shuffle.

Picture theatre palaces are great. They'll be greater if there is a better run of pictures to go into them. Otherwise, what handsome liabilities they are likely to become!

AND, of course, the economy thing is not without its humbug. Nothing much is being done about production economy, despite the hopeful, somewhat juvenile, expressions of some financial papers.

Let's see some real action on cutting down studio extravagances. There's where the big money is wasted. Nothing much can be done about this until studio politics get the gate—for good and all.

Also, economy gestures, for the sake of impressing bankers, at the expense of good business, are another form of humbug.

THE industry appears to be getting in a decided rut on the subject of exploitation. We know of two outstanding pictures, which did not do so well on Broadway. They offered great exploitation possibilities—and we don't mean bunk exploitation, either.

But they didn't get it, with the result that only one of them is left, and it is just about keeping an average pace.

Both pictures offered opportunity to attract the public and keep it attracted. But something was wrong with the advertising campaigns.

Come to think of it, we recall very few instances of first-class handling of Broadway pictures this year. What's the matter?

If we're wrong, tell us. But we don't think we are.

THERE seems to be an air of complacency around the business these days that does not augur well for the future. Remember, this is an amusement industry. Entertainment means novelty and flash—in the pictures and in the handling of pictures.

There's precious little of either visible at the moment.

BUT, perhaps, this is a natural development resulting from the extraordinary attitude toward trade advertising. We don't

Comment on Passing Affairs

JIMMY GRAINGER has signed a new five-year contract with Fox at what is said to be a record salary for a sales manager. We congratulate Fox and Jimmy, too, on this substantial recognition of great ability demonstrated in the tough field of film sales.

A good deal of slush has been written—and, we note, is still being written in some quarters in this industry—about executives. We are not interested in that kind of drivel, or any other kind. Some of these executives, to whom the press puff is the breath of life, were catapulted into fame and big salaries by publicity.

The picture business is peculiar, they say. Well, we guess that it about right. In no other that we know about, can some men sustain themselves in high-priced jobs for so long on so slender a foundation.

We say these things, because we wish to make it clear that we are not writing a puff for Jimmy Grainger. He doesn't need it, and we wouldn't write it, anyway. We are merely adding our own acknowledgement and recognition to the industry's—for the whole industry knows about Jimmy's achievements in sales, and some people know that he recently turned down a job with another company at a staggering salary.

He has delivered emphatically for Fox, just as previously for M-G-M, and he will continue to deliver, as a square-shooting, two-fisted, good-humored sales chief.

WITH Sydney Cohen's ideas and policies we have not always agreed, but on other occasions—and this is one of them—we do most heartily agree with his viewpoint.

At the Columbus convention he made an address which he titled "The Right to Live." We quote the following excerpts from the speech, because they state very well indeed some wholesome truths:

"The time and effort that these giants and their organizations are devoting to the promoting of money and the acquiring or purchasing of theatres, could be devoted with much better results to the making of better and more entertaining pictures. This would be both constructive and helpful. For the larger theatres will be built, anyway, as necessity dictates, since the theatre owner wants to give his public the beautiful and comfortable theatres which are its due. These theatres will yield larger profits to the producers, in film rentals, and theatre owners will likewise profit.

"If mergers become too far-reaching in their extent—if too many hitherto separate producing companies become merged under one banner, a certain standardization of product will inevitably result; a certain factory-made finish will be bestowed upon pictures; they will be turned out on schedule according to specifications drawn up by efficiency experts."

THEATRE properties are the industry's stabilizer, according to an article, one of a series, being printed in the Wall Street Journal. Pointing out the industry's great growth in the past three years, the Journal says:

"Realization of the wisdom of stabilizing the more or less precarious position of a film producer was the original reason behind the expansion by large producers into the theatre field.

"Motion picture theatre income is a comparatively stable factor in both good times and bad, barring unusual conditions such as floods and epidemics. The income from films, on the other hand, in the last analysis depends on whether or not productions please the popular taste. Without a proper distributing organization, or even without proper theatrical interests, a producer might find himself in the position of having spent $2,000,000 on a film which would not return to him his original investment.

"In the old days, when only a few thousands were spent on a film, this problem did not exist, but as soon as expenditures on films ran into hundreds of thousands the logical step was for the producer to form his own distributing organization, to sell the films to the local theatres in each territory.

"The next step was to acquire large theatres in important cities throughout the country, known in the industry as key cities, where films could be shown for long runs, to advertise them to the surrounding territory.

"Purchase of theatres immediately added a stabilizing factor to the income of the film companies, and put real values into balance sheets which had previously contained assets made up mainly of current film inventories and studio property. The result has put the amusement companies among the most important owners of city real estate in the country.

The Mirrors of Filmdom

By William A. Johnston

think it will last, because it is fundamentally wrong.

Chatting with an advertising manager of a film company the other day, a chap who is free with his criticisms and not unfair to anybody, brought out this:

His company had a picture to sell to the exhibitor. They went to it, good and strong, in the trade papers. In a month, the picture was sold to the theatres to the tune of three quarters of a million dollars. And the picture made good with the public. The advertising manager was emphatic in his statement that the trade paper advertising sold the picture.

He went on with some other thoughts. "How", he wanted to know, "can the industry expect to sell pictures to the public if we're not sold on the pictures ourselves?"

And how, he added, can we be sold on the pictures if we don't tell our story to the exhibitor in advertising consistently? Talk about psychology; what about keeping your own sales forces sold on your pictures?

ECONOMY gestures are humbug. They may also be dangerous, if you economize at the wrong point.

THIS is a great era of vital exploitation. Mussolini takes a nation and puts life into its whole structure by exploiting an ideal and his own personality. He holds the imperial thought before his people—and its appeal is always dramatically staged.

That's one kind of real exploitation.

Aviation is hustling to the front in public interest. Two trans-Atlantic flights have already caught the imagination of the world.

Let's not get self-satisfied. Motion pictures have a great hold on the public. But the job to keep the hold and make it still stronger is before us all the time.

The public gets no kick out of mergers or who owns what theatre. Good entertainment is the kick the public looks for.

More energy, more flash, more creative ability in picture-making is the need of the hour.

A tremendous amount of ability and energy is going into the realignment of the industry's economic processes. But, remember, however necessary this may seem to be, it does not mean anything to the great public.

People do not go to the theatre box-office to buy entertainment because it is the result of a merger, or isn't the result of a merger. They want good pictures—and the pictures just now are not so good.

"These have been the reasons influencing the larger producers to take an important part in theatre building to buy an interest in theatre chains throughout the country.

"When it is stated that a film producer has acquired a chain of theatres, or is building a large new house, it does not necessarily mean that a whole interest in the property has been acquired or that the film company is defraying the whole cost of building.

"If this were the universal practice, it would mean that all of the important systems would have had all of their funds tied up in real estate long ago.

"Paramount, Loew and Stanley, however, own most of their important houses subject to mortgages. Paramount, in building the new Paramount Theatre on Broadway, acquired the land at a cost of $4,000,000, now appraised at $6,000,000. The building has a total valuation of $17,000,000 and carries a $10,000,000 bond issue.

"Paramount in the last two years sold a total of over $30,000,000 worth of its stock to stockholders and put the proceeds into equities in theatres. Loew's only direct financing has been the sale of $15,000,000 6 per cent debenture bonds, proceeds of which also went into new property.

"The prevailing practice, however, is to have a theatre built by local capital, with a profit sharing or leasing agreement which turns the theatre over to the large system when it is completed.

"Several different arrangements are made. Sometimes a house is financed entirely by local capital and leased to the operating company. Sometimes the operating company helps in the financing or takes a 25 per cent interest in the property. Sometimes the operating company pays for equipment and seats, and leases the theatre for a long term."

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

U. S. vs. U. S. S. R,

CRITICS in Holland, who view the cinema landscape with a rather neutral eye, see the world film map at present as a battle between the United States and Russia for supremacy. A writer in The Hague Post gives somewhat the better of the conflict to date to the Russians, comparing "The Big Parade" with "Potemkin" and "Ben-Hur" with "The Mother." He says also: "The battle in the film arena will be fought out between Russia and America, because in these two countries the motion picture is one of the bearers of culture, along with the newspapers."

There is considerable point in the contention. As Russia develops its cinema resources, it will become the only nation, outside of the U. S., with a population of fans large enough to support elaborate productions on the home market—a condition which French, German and British producers are trying to meet artificially by means of production alliances between countries.

JUNE 11 will be a notable day in the lives of members of the Paramount Pep Club in New York, for on that date the club sets sail up the Hudson on the new "Peter Stuyvesant" of the Day Line bound for Indian Point, where a day of games, sports, dancing, eats and the usual trimmings will be put in.

The Spanish Influence

ROSITA MORENO, eighteen-year-old dancing star, is the newest addition to the Hollywood film family, having just been signed on a five-year contract by United Artists. Rosita has already taken a house, where, with her father and mother, Paco and Pilarico Moreno, she is awaiting her first screen assignment. Rosita's screen career is to be under the supervision of John Considine, Jr., and holds bright promise for the future.

Rosita has been dancing in pubic for ten years, and for the last three has been an Orpheum headliner, having appeared here recently at both Orpheum houses in the Herman Timberg act, in which she was featured, and at which time she was the object of considerable interest of the film producers, and received several offers, finally accepting the one from United Artists. Rosita comes by her dancing talents honestly, from both father and mother, the latter having been famous as a dancer in Europe, Mexico, and South America, as well as in the United States.

Le Baron Welcomed in Hollywood

IN honor of William Le Baron's recent arrival on the West Coast, one of the most unique festivities of the season was tendered the erstwhile Eastern executive by Robert G. Vignola at the director's palatial home the other night.

An Italian restaurant, reminiscent of those identified with Gotham life, was improvised in the large floor ballroom. Tables, dressed in red and white cloths, lighted by candles and accurate in every detail, were placed against the walls adorned with Italian flags, posters and similar decorations, leaving the center space for dancing. An Italian orchestra furnished the music while professional entertainers and talented guests provided numbers typical of a cabaret. The genial host, in the role of proprietor, visited the tables, keeping everybody happy until the wee small hours, the party unanimously acclaimed a huge success.

Edna Murphy, charming blonde screen actress, with Mervyn Le Roy, the screen's youngest director, slated to direct Colleen Moore's next picture for First National, to whom her engagement has been announced.

Among the guests bidden to welcome Mr. and Mrs. LeBaron were: Marquis and Marquise de la Falaise (Gloria Swanson), Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Schenck (Norma Talmadge), Marion Davies, Bebe Daniels, Mr. and Mrs. Sylvano Balboni (June Mathis), Mr. and Mrs. Lew Cody (Mabel Normand), Bess Meredyth, Kathleen Key, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene V. "Hy" Daab Invades the Legit

THE ranks of advertising men who are writing for the stage grow larger every day. The latest recruit is Hyatt Daab, in charge of publicity, advertising and exploitation for F. B. O., who, with Edward Paramore, Jr., author and producer of "Set A Thief," is completing a melodrama based on a colorful phase of New York life. Daab and Paramore spent the last week-end at the shore, rounding out the last act of the new play.

Daab will be remembered as the author of "Her Honor The Governor," one of Pauline Frederick's greatest screen successes, and an F. B. O. release.

Mrs. Seger in Vidor Film

MRS. LUCIA BACKUS-SEGER, popular character actress, has been added to the cast of "The Crowd," for which King Vidor is filming exteriors in New York.

Al Christie, noted comedy producer who starts for Paramount release soon, is equally famous as a dog fancier. The wire-haired fox terrier on the right, "Let's Go, of Newfield," is an international champion; his running mate, "Tille of Mountain View," is an Irish champion

Sennett Meets Public Demand

MACK SENNETT believes he is meeting a public demand in giving the Jimmy Smiths a life upon the screen in a series of Pathe domestic comedies. It is a demand of curious folk eager to know how other people live and who can apprecate the many laughs and funny situations which occur each day within the four walls that we call home.

Jimmy Smith is portrayed by Raymond McKee. Mrs. Smith is enacted by Ruth Hiatt. And Bubbles Smith is played by Mary Ann Jackson, a four-year-old whose cleverness has won her featured billing in this group of two-reel farces.

These comedies are somewhat akin to the former popular Sydney Drew series of home-life productions, but they have been brought up to date, and in addition they are geared high in situations, actions and gags. They have been woven around the home of the middle class, the heart of the nation. Each comedy is bound up with a real story with gripping interest, suspense and surprise. The action is unfolded in a rapid-fire manner, with everything "coming out in the wash" every day of the week—so to speak.

There is probably not a city, town or hamlet in the United States that doesn't list hundreds of families like the Smiths in the local directory. It was this fact that gave Mr. Sennett the idea for the Jimmy Smith comedies. The producer desired to perpetuate on the screen the sort of typical American family that, as he said in a recent interview, "is met frequently even these jazz days."

M. P. Photographers Organized

THE International Photographers of the Motion Picture Industry (I. A. T. S. E.), which was organized some months ago, elected Billy Bitzer as its president at a recent meeting.

Bitzer is well capable of piloting this organization, being a pioneer cameraman and creator of many of the standard effects used in pictures today.

F. N. Foreign Heads Return

REPRESENTATIVES of First National Pictures in the various countries of Europe, departed for their homes on Saturday following the company's first international sales convention held in Burbank, California. They had discovered that "liaison" and "missions," two words so widely used in the war, have a distinct function in times of peace, and had been given an opportunity to meet the domestic sales force and study the actual manufacture of the product they are selling throughout Europe.

Head of the delegation was H. A. Bandy, foreign sales manager; J. S. Skirboll, European General Manager, with David Rossheim, of the British office, as his chief lieutenant came six thousand miles to participate in this world-wide conference. Both of them were enthusiastic in endorsing the policy that had given the European representatives a chance to come to this country and study conditions here. Both expressed the conviction that the sessions of the convention had given the foreign force a new impetus as well as a better understanding of their product.

This same feeling was also voiced by the domestic officials of the company. They were convinced the men from abroad were bound to benefit from their experience, not only in enlarging their outlook by a chance to study conditions in this country but by being brought into contact with American business methods and policies so typified in the domestic organization and stressed in the sessions of the convention.

ONCE more Pathe Review has scored where feature producers failed. It is the only subject to receive the asterisk this week from the National Board of Review, issue No. 27 being so favored.

Another Movietone News Event

FOX NEWS scored this week with a Movietone recording og the takeoff of Clarence D. Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine in their Bellanca plane, "Columbia," on the flight from Long Island to Germany for a new world's distance record.

Audiences at the Sam H. Harris and Roxy Theatres Saturday evening were thrilled with the showing of the Movietone news reel showing the departure from Roosevelt Field earlier the same day, accompanied by the roar of the plane and the cheering of the crowd. Jack Painter, Fox News cameraman, had planted his camera a little ahead of the starting point so that the "Columbia" taxis toward the audience at the start of the reel and runs past with a roar that is almost deafening. The noise lessens as the plane climbs upward just beyond Commander Byrd's plane, "America."

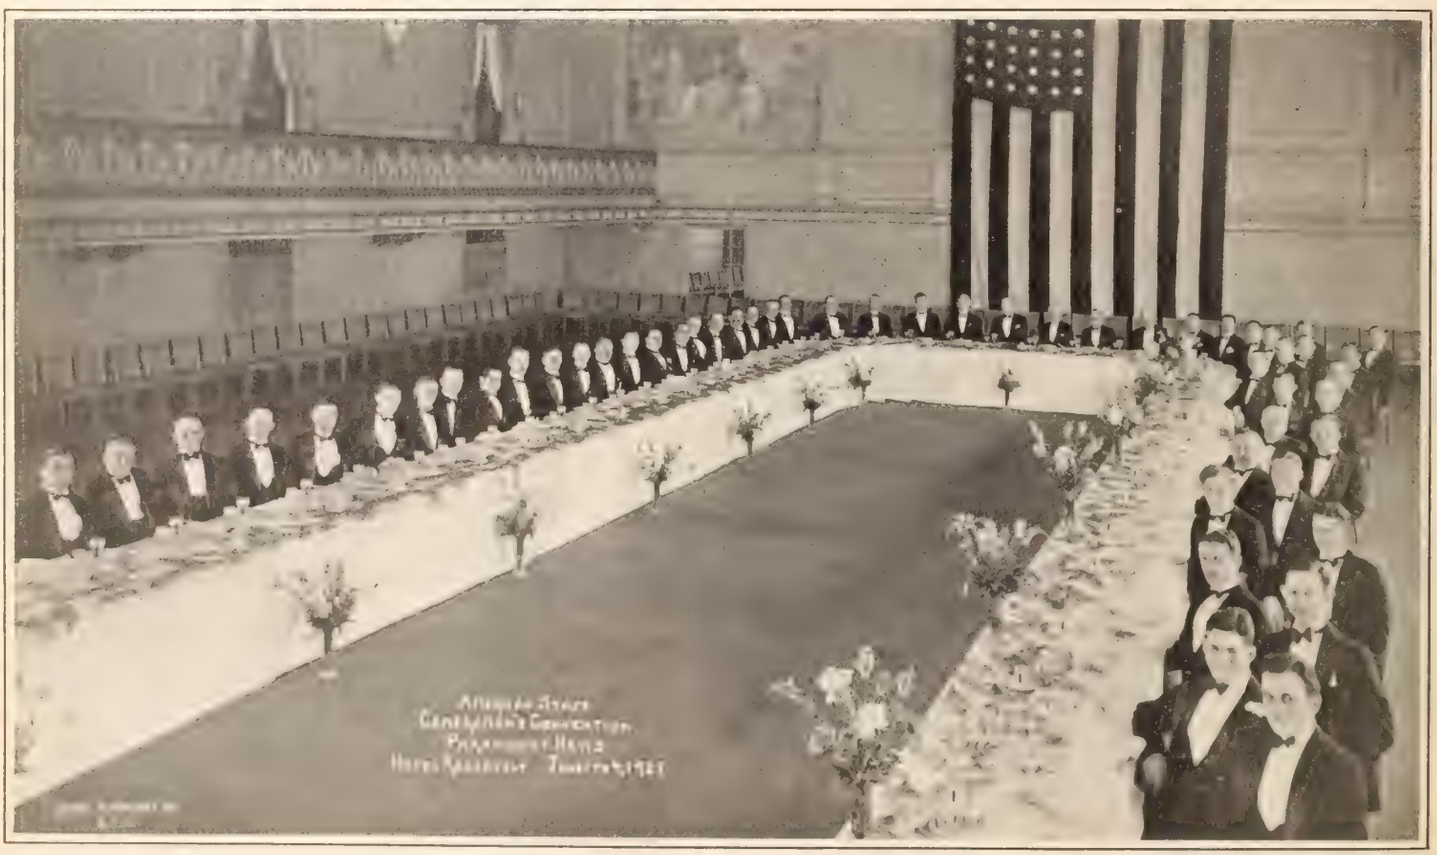
Rotary Everywhere

AN interesting sidelight of the First National sales convention at Burbank was noted at a luncheon given the foreign delegation at the Hollywood Country Club by Colleen Moore.

In a dining room adjoining the one occupied by the First National party, the local Rotary Club was holding its mid-day fiesta. H. A. Bandy, foreign sales manager of First National queried Luther M. Jee, First National's representative in China as to whether the Rotary Club had penetrated into his part of the world. Mr. Jee's answer was in the affirmative, and much to the surprise of those present Jee admitted to being president of the Shanghai chapter.



When the luncheon was over Mr. Bandy took the liberty of introducing Mr. Jee to the Rotarians who, oddly enough, were at the moment discussing China. Mr. Jee, in response to an invitation by the chairman, addressed the gathering and told them some interesting things concerning the operations of Rotary in China. It was further disclosed that Mr. Jee is a graduate of the University of California and Harvard.

Pathe Club Outing

THE Pathe Club, live-wire social organization of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., is all set for its big water-and-land combined outing picnic, carnival and tournament. The Hudson River steamer Albany has been chartered and five hundred or more members and associate members of the Club, stars, exhibitors and other guests will cross the gang plank next Wednesday morning, June 15th, and put up the river for Indian Point. Special arrangements have been made whereby a limited number of outside guests may secure tickets and join the Patheites.

The Pathe Club orchestra will furnish music aboard the Albany and at Indian Point. A baseball game and twenty or more sporting events for both sexes are on the program.

Producer Theatres Invited to Join M. P. T. O. A.

Harmony Reigns; Woodhull Re-elected as President; Roxy Makes Hit; Cohen For Theatre Moratorium

Columbus, Ohio, June 9.

THE key note of the Eighth Annual M.P.T.O.A. convention held here beginning Monday and ending today can honestly be stated as harmony. Contention and differences of opinion, if there were any, did not reach the convention floor.

Viewed unofficially all the states are back again and there seems to be no reason to doubt that the organization has gained in strength and is in a position to serve the industry efficiently and well.

Michigan and Illinois seemed to be well satisfied and while official action is still to be taken in the former state it was generally understood that all differences of the past were to be forgotten.

Undoubtedly the most important action expected was the invitation to producer owned theatres to join the National organization.

It is assumed that all the larger circuits will avail themselves of the opportunity. Practically all of the leaders here viewed this move as a step forward and expressed no fears of producer domination or undue influence.

R. F. Woodhull, who was re-elected president, left the convention more popular than ever and the other officers are completely satisfactory. Great credit is due the Ohio M.P.T.O., its president, Wm. Jones, and Business Manager "Pete" Word, for the efficient manner in which the convention crowd was handled and the variety of amusements and entertainment provided.

All in all Columbus is a success, showing plenty of constructive work done and showing the way for much more to be accomplished before the next convention, which probably will be held at Toronto, Canada.

Thursday morning the convention continued to listen to addresses by Douglas Griesmer, director of public information of the Red Cross, who thanked the industry for its relief work in the Mississippi flood catastrophe; J. G. Kroesen of the Edison Lamp Works who read a paper on projection lighting, and Fred McConnell, editor of the Exhibitors Trade Review, who talked to the exhibitors on the subject of trade papers.

A letter from Governor Smith of New York was read, to the great pleasure of the delegates.

Roy Lewis, secretary of the Toronto M. P.T.O. nearly caused a riot, when in a speech he complained of alleged lack of courtesy at the Wednesday night banquet and brought a controversy between Harry Reichenbach, the toastmaster, and Harry Warner, one of the speakers to the convention floor, over remarks about Will H. Hays by Mr. Reichenbach.

The net result of Miss Lewis' remarks in the convention was the passing of a motion and later a resolution censuring Mr. Reichenbach and declaring that the sentiments he expressed did not represent the opinion of the M. P. T. O. A. and that Mr. Hays be so officially informed.

Resolutions, thanking branch offices of the distributors for aid in promoting the convention, expressing appreciation to Gov. Donahey, the Columbus mayor, the Ohio M. T. O. and others of complimentary nature were passed by acclamation. An amendment to the constitution voicing the majority of the board of directors from eleven to sixteen was adopted.

Election of the board of directors from the slate prepared by the special committee resulted as follows:

J. W. Rogers, Cairo, Ill.; Glen Harper, Los Angeles, Cal.; Ben Barinstein, Los Angeles, Cal.; M. E. Comerford, Scranton, Pa.; L. M. Sagel, New Haven, Conn.; Joseph W. Walsh, Hartford, Conn.; E. M. Fay, Providence, R. I.; Nathan Yamins, Boston, Mass.; J. Louis, Rome, Baltimore, Md.; C. B. Wilson, Louisville, Ky.; Fred Dolle, Louisville, Ky.; Jack Miller, Chicago, Ill.; A. Julian Brylawski, Washington, D. C.; J. M. Seider, Hightstown, N. J.; Fred Wehrenberg, St. Louis, Mo.; William M. James, Columbus; Nate Freedburg, Pittsburgh, Pa.; J. W. Maxfield, Miami Beach, Florida; D. A. Harris, W. Va.; Arch. Hurley, Tucumcari; N. M. Steve Bauer, Milwaukee, Wis.; Fred Pickerel, Oklahoma City, Okla.; Jules Michels, Buffalo, N. Y.; I. Weinberg, Scranton, Va.; Leon Rosenblat, New Jersey; J. B. Phillips, Fort Worth, Texas; C. H. Metzger, Indianapolis, Ind.; John A. Schwalam, Hamilton, O.; Rudy Saunders, New York City; H. D. Wharton, Warren, Ark.

The newly elected board of directors returned to select the other officers of the organization.

The result is as follows:

A. Julian Brylawski, Washington, D. C., chairman board of directors; Jules Michaels, New York; M. E. Comerford, Pennsylvania; Jack Miller, Illinois; W. M. James, Ohio; Nathan Yamins, Massachusetts; Joseph F. Walsh, Connecticut; Louis M. Sagel, Connecticut; R. F. Woodhull, Dover, N. J., president; Louis M. Sagel, Connecticut, treasurer; M. J. O'Toole, Scranton, Pa., secretary.

Regional vice-presidents: J. C. Brady, Canada; Henry Blum, Maryland; J. J. Harwood, Ohio; M. Rosenberg, Pennsylvania; Frank Koch, New York; Roy Gombacher, Washington.

The only business transacted on Monday, the first day of the convention, was meetings of the Administrative Committee and the National Board of Directors. The balance of the day was given over to pleasure, principally the Golf Tournament, held at the Elks Country Club.

The first prize of low gross was won by V. L. Nowes, of Gary, Ind., with William M. James, of Columbus, Neil Schultz, of Elwood City, Pa., Lou Hodges, Springfield, O., Link Doris, Columbus and H. T. Palmer, Painsville, O., as runners-up for prizes.

Dozens of prizes for the Golf Tournament were given by Motion Picture News, Film Daily, Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World and a golf bag by William M. James, president of the Ohio M. P. T. O.

The first business session, scheduled for Tuesday at 11 a.m. did not get under way until after lunch but business was transacted rapidly once proceedings were started.

The session began with J. J. Harwood of Cleveland, chairman of the convention committee, presiding. He introduced William M. James, the Ohio M.P.T.O. President, and James T. Thomas, Mayor of Columbus, who made official "welcome to the city" addresses.

These were followed with a response by A. Julian Brylawski, of Washington, D. C., after which a committee composed of M. A. Rosenberg, of Pennsylvania, J. Louis Rome, of Baltimore, Fred Pickerell, of Oklahoma, Nathan Yamins, of Massachusetts, and Mr. James escorted President R. F. Woodhull to the chair.

Woodhull Makes Report

Mr. Woodhull's annual report endorsed in principle the work of the Arbitration Boards, recommending that the M.P.T.O.A. endeavor to aid in its application by cooperation. He touched on the non-theatrical situation to the extent of offering advice on methods of combating it by establishing good will in church and educational circles, stressed the service idea in conducting theatres and struck at the "trick" promoter who is responsible to a large extent for alleged theatre overbuilding.

After Mr. Woodhull's report was read and accepted, Joseph M. Seider presented the report of the Board of Directors.

Mr. Seider scored the double feature clause written into contracts by distributors in some sections, attacked the practice of adding clauses to the uniform contract and insisted on the right of objection to changes in producers' plans where quality of product deteriorated, although expressing no objection to changes of title alone.

Seider Hits Overbuilding

He hit at Wall Street methods as applied to theatre construction, called overbuilding a menace to the industry and stated that lowered receipts were already in evidence as a result of overseating. A conference with distributors owning theatres, for the purpose of discussing plans for curtailing new competitive construction was recommended and the amalgamation of small independent circuits as a means of combating the larger chains suggested.

The report also recommended that a special committee be appointed to investigate the advisability of amending the by-laws of the national organization so that distributor-owned theatres might be admitted to membership.

A motion to accept the report and place it on file met with objections and brought forth an amendment to exclude the clause referring to the recommendation to admit distributor-owned houses. There were several expressions of personal opinion against such action, principal of which was a speech by M. A. Rosenberg, of the Western Pennsylvania delegation.

"As a state unit, Western Pennsylvania will not go along on any such proposition," Mr. Rosenberg declared.

The motion offered by Rudolph Sanders of Brooklyn to amend the report was later withdrawn when it was explained that it was only intended to appoint a committee to inquire into the circuit theatre membership proposal and that accepting the report did not place the convention on record as favoring the plan.

Two resolutions, one to appoint a committee to aid the Mississippi Flood Control Committee and the other to urge exchange and home office officials to give assistance to exhibitors in the flood area, were adopted.

The next order of the day was an address by Sydney S. Cohen, Past President and Chairman of the Advisory Committee. Mr. Cohen was enthusiastically received and made a speech that was roundly applauded.

"The Battle Of The Giants"

"Unintelligent and destructive competition is now taking place in what I once termed 'The Battle of the Giants.' Producing companies are building large theatres not alone in downtown sections of the larger cities but in the smaller towns and even in neighborhood sections of the large cities.

"This is all bringing about overshowing, overproducing, overtheatring, and eventually will bring about a lowering of admission prices to a point where profits will cease to be. We have during the past few months read of an instance where a producing company has advised their stockholders in a well-known city, that owing to the competition of a rival producing company's theatre in that same city, it has been necessary to 'pass their dividend.' At this time still another rival producing company is about to open another very large seating capacity theatre in the very same zone in the same city. The disastrous result of this is self evident. In another city, we had as early as last September at the commencement of a new season, an announcement by one producer-owned large downtown theatre of a lowering of its admission prices, and this was immediately followed by an announcement by another producer-owned theatre in the same locality of the same city of a similar reduction in prices. This is happening now at this very moment, in Chicago and elsewhere.

"We have in sections of this country right now, theatres being erected in competition by producer-affiliated groups in spots where they realize and almost openly state that there is no possible chance, not only of any profits being realized, but that there is a well-defined doubt, even, of sufficient monies being earned to take care of the carrying charges for the mortgage bond interest, taxes and amortization.

"These producer interests are in a position to carry some of these huge losses now, because of the gains they are securing from production and distribution, and the profits they are realizing from some of their other theatres in sections where this keen competition does not exist at this time. But with the continuation of the abnormal theatre building program that each of these producing companies has arranged for in opposition-theatred sections, they will soon have competition in these now non-competitive zones, thus seriously dividing both patronage and income, and bringing about a lessening of profits and perhaps even losses.

"This condition of senseless overbuilding now constitutes the gravest menace in the Industry. There is nothing to be said in favor of it, while reams might be written in condemnation.

"Some of the able minds in the industry who are directing these companies, plainly state that it is a battle for the survival of the fittest. That someone will be hurt. But the public's funds, available as yet, can carry on these intensive programs for some time to come. When the public once senses the actual conditions, however, and the prospects for profits are not as roseate as formerly, additional monies will not be forthcoming and an entirely different complexion will be placed upon matters.

Building Moratorium

"Why not, then, before this catastrophe comes about—and surely it must—why not a sitting down of the producing heads engaged in this unintelligent and destructive competition, together with the representatives of theatre owners, to properly consider this situation? A situation which not alone is hurting these combatants, but one that may destroy the investments of thousands of others. At such a gathering, theatre owner interests should insist that a moratorium of at least several years should be declared against theatre building by producers. Such action would not be without precedent. It has been brought about during wartimes in other industries, and with the state of war now existing in this industry similar action is required; or otherwise this ruthless, uneconomic and unbusinesslike procedure will bring about a complete annihilation of the doughboys in the ranks —the great army of men and women in all parts of the world who own and operate theatres.

"We theatre owners two years ago pointed out to the heads of the various producing companies at a meeting in the offices of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors, the very things enumerated here, but it was impossible at that time to bring about any arrangement for a cessation of the overbuilding campaign they were then embarking upon.

"It was coming too easy for each of them then. They were not competing against one another so strongly then. They were only competing against the unarmed theatre owner. They were only skirmishing, reconnoitering as it were, at this stage in "The Battle of the Giants," but now the "battle" is in full blast, the big guns are in action, and so much damage has been done already that perhaps they will welcome an armistice.

"It is not too late to call a halt in hostilities, however, and to make arrangements for some such meeting at an early date."

Mr. Cohen was followed by C. M. Burlingame, of the Perfection Arc Co., Milwaukee.

A. J. Moeller, President of the American Cinema Association, gave an address on "The Independent Producer."

The Wednesday morning session began with an address by S. L. Rothafel, who was greeted enthusiastically and gave a most interesting and practical talk on showmanship, with comments on the new Roxy Theatre and his experience with radio.

"Roxy" Gets Ovation

He coined a new phrase in theatre management when he recommended "judicious extravagance" as the highest type of modern showmanship. Too much economy, Mr. Rothafel stated, was a present-day danger, explaining that the theatre must ever progress to hold its prestige with the public. "Roxy" advised exhibitors to hire "those young people and to stop trying to do all the work themselves." Much of "Roxy's" address was devoted to reminiscing concerning his early days as a theatre manager in Forest City, Pa., and at times digressed from the practical to the poetic, however, to the evident pleasure of the convention delegates.

Harry Reichenbach, of New York, was the other featured speaker of the session, giving a talk on applied exploitation. Business Manager M. J. O'Toole made his report and officially advised the delegates that the time has come when the M. P. T. O. A. cannot ignore the theatre circuits. He predicted basic changes in production methods and expressed the desire for elimination of over rated stock, with more attention paid to quality product than in the past.

Mr. O'Toole announced that in the future labor problems would be handled materially and related in some detail the work his office had accomplished over the year.

A committee composed of leaders from every state, including those who are not at this time affiliated with the national organization, was appointed to arrange a slate to be voted upon in place of the retiring directors and to frame such resolutions as seemed expedient.

This committee went into executive session about noon and did not return until nearly five thirty o'clock.

In the interim, the delegates marked time and discussed by groups the relative merits, as each saw it, of the proposition to admit the producer owned theatres, as recommended by the board of directors at Tuesday's session.

When the convention reconvened to hear the report of the special committee, President Woodhull announced that this report

Stanley-Keith Merger Deal On; May Pool Film Concerns Later

Negotiations Officially Announced As Under Way; Indicated First National, Pathe, and P. D. C. Will Eventually Combine

Elmer R. Pearson, J. J. Murdock, and John C. Flinn

ACCORDING to an official statement, issued through Doremus & Company, Wall Street advertising agency, the merger of Stanley and Keith--Orpheum-B. S. Moss is under active negotiation. It will probably be completed in September.

The statement also indicates that, eventually, the film producing interests affiliated with or controlled by the theatre circuits will be consolidated. This would mean a merger of Stanley and Keith-Orpheum-B. C. and the Cecil B. de Mille interests.

The Doremous statement, which calls the deal a $250,000,000 merger, follows:

"A $250,000,000 merger of motion picture and vaudeville companies, representing the largest combination of interests ever projected in the amusement field, is under negotiation and probably will be completed during the summer. The proposed consolidation, according to reports in Wall Street, will unite the Stanley Company of America with the Keith and Orpheum vaudeville circuits and the B. S. Moss theatres organization, bringing under unified control a nation-wide chain of more than 600 theatres.

"The first step in the combination, it is understood, will be a physical merger of the Keith and Orpheum interests, which dominate the vaudeville field, together with the B. S. Moss Company, which operates a New York City chain of combined vaudeville and picture houses. Later it is contemplated that a new company will be formed, providing for a consolidation of the Stanley Company and the enlarged Keith-Orpheum group.

"While the present merger plans embrace mainly the motion picture and vaudeville theatre chains of the Stanley, Keith and Orpheum interests, the combination will have under its control extensive producing and distributing organizations which are designed to make it the most powerful unit of the amusement industry. Control of First National Pictures, one of the largest film producers in the country, is held by the Stanley Company of America jointly with the West Coast Theatres Company, while the Keith-Orpheum group has similar affiliations with Pathe Exchange, Producers Distributing Corporation and the Cecil B. de Mille producing concern. Eventually it is expected that the various film producing interests will be consolidated.

"The plans now under consideration represent the latest move in a series of consolidations which have been under way since early this year, all of which aim to centralize control of the production, distribution and exhibition of motion pictures. The first important step was the passing of control of First National Pictures, Inc., to the Stanley Company of America and West Coast Theatres, Inc. Subsequently, Pathe Exchange was recapitalized to permit a tie-up with the Keith and Orpheum groups, the Cinema Corporation, which controlled the Cecil B. de Mille productions, and Producers Distributing Corporation, a subsidiary of the Cinema Corporation.

Among the well-known executives who are participating in the present negotiations are E. F. Albee, head of the Keith organization, John J. McGuirk, president of the Stanley Company of America and of First National Pictures, Inc., and Mark Hutman, president of Orpheum Circuit, Inc.

"Financial details are being arranged by Edward B. Smith & Co., bankers for the Stanley Company and First National Pictures and Lehman Brothers, representing the Keith and Orpheum groups."

E. F. Albee, head of the Keith-Albee Circuit, was in Philadelphia for a day recently outlining the changes and improvements to be made in Keith's Chestnut Street Theatre during the summer. The house has just closed and approximately $60,000 will be spent on repairs and improvements. During his stay in the city Mr. Albee had an hour's conference with John J. McGuirk, president of the Stanley Company of America, and following this conference the Philadelphia papers carried front page stories of the proposed consolidation of Keith-Albee and Stanley interests.

Mr. McGuirk was rather silent as to the outcome of the conference but it is understood that a working agreement will be arranged within the next few months whereby the Orpheum and Keith Circuits will be consolidated as a vaudeville stronghold, with Stanley-First National coming in to further fortify the picture situation.

Figures given out indicate that it will be a $250,000,000 merger with the Stanley interests representing about $100,000,000 of this and the Keith-Albee and Orpheum Circuits the remainder. Conferences between Stanley officials and Keith-Albee representatives have been going on for some time and satisfactory progress is reported, although all of the proposal figures for properties entering into the deal had not yet been submitted to both parties. It is understood from reliable sources that the deal in all likelihood will be a reality by September.

$6,000,000 Issue Offered for Finance of Pathe Expansion

J. J. MURDOCK, of the Keith-Albee interests, was this week elected President and Chairman of the Board of Directors of Pathe, and Elmer R. Pearson and John C. Flinn were named vice-presidents. These facts are incorporated in a statement given out through Doremus & Co., which follows:

"A banking syndicate headed by Blair & Co., Inc., and the Chase Securities Corporation is offering today $6,000,000 Pathe Exchange, Inc., ten-year 7 per cent sinking fund gold debentures, priced at part and interest.

"The financing will permit the company to carry out expansion plans, which involve long term contracts with the Keith-Albee and Orpheum circuits for exhibition facilities and arrangements with Cecil B. de Mille and the Cinema Corporation for an enlarged production program of both feature pictures and short subjects. Funds provided by the sale of the debentures will be applied as part consideration for the acquisition of certain assets of the Cinema Corporation and its subsidiaries, to the redemption of $900,000 ten-year 8 per cent gold bonds and to increase working capital.

Raw Stock Manufacture to Exhibition, Phases Embraced by Pathe-P.D.C.

ADVICES from the Pathe-P. D. C. group, in convention at Los Angeles announce what is termed the first motion picture enterprise to encompass in one company all phases of the industry from the manufacture of the raw film stock to the presentation of the finished pictures. The statement is made by Cecil B. De Mille, Elmer Pearson and John C. Flinn, officials of the new organization at the convention banquet in the Ambassador Hotel, Los Angeles.

This enterprise, which results from the alliance of the De Mille, Pathe and P. D. C. groups with the Keith-Albee, Orpheum, B. S. Moss, Proctor and affiliated circuits, will be headed by John J. Murdock, now general manager of Keith-Albee.

The new concern, through its association with Pathe-Dupont and the Pathe interests, manufactures its own raw film and cameras. The Keith-Albee, Orpheum, B. S. Moss, Proctor and affiliated circuits provide a reservoir of stage talent, as well as theatre outlet.

West Coast Theatres Plans New Houses

Seven Theatres to Be Constructed on Sites in California, Arizona and Washington

PLANS are now being drawn for seven new theatres to be built and added to the holdings of the West Coast Theatres, Inc. They, in accordance with the anouncement made by Harold B. Franklin, president of the theatre circuit, are to be located in three states: California, Arizona and Washington.

The new houses in California will be located in Oakland, Redlands, Riverside and San Bernardino and Redondo Beach. The Redlands house will have a seating capacity of 2,000; that in Riverside the same amount, with three sites for the theatre now under consideration. San Bernardino will have a new house with 2,500 seats, which will be located in close proximity to the present West Coast theatre in that city. The new theatre at Redondo Beach will replace the Art Theatre there, and will seat 2,000.

A new house will be built in Phoenix, Arizona, thereby extending West Coast management into that state. There are two sites under consideration in the downtown business section of that city at the present time. The plans call for a theatre to accommodate 2,500.

In Spokane, Washington, the new West Coast house is to be located on a site at Sprague Avenue and Monroe Street, and the work of demolishing the structures now on the property is to be started shortly. This theatre will have a seating capacity of 3,000.

In Oakland ground has been broken at Telegraph Avenue and 19th Street for a theatre which will hold 3,500 seats. Weeks & Day, architects, have prepared the plans for this structure, which will be built by Diggs & Breed.

Each of the new theatres will be of the most modern type of theatre architecture, equipped to present the very finest type of entertainment of both stage and screen, with ample stage facilities to play the largest attractions. Every possible innovation for the convenience of the public will be installed. It is the intention of the West Coast executives to make each theatre and building as fine as anything that there is in the communities.

Cleveland to Give Flood Benefits Week of June 13

Cleveland exhibitors have set aside the week of June 13-18 inclusive for a series of Mississippi river flood benefit performances. Every member belonging to the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Association has been requested to turn over to George Erdmann, secretary of the local exhibitor association, all receipts for one performance during the week designated. Every effort is being made to make the benefits a success. Exchanges are contributing programs free of charge for benefit performances. Sixty out of a hundred houses have already signed up.

M. B. Horwitz, general manager of the Washington circuit, which operates a chain of motion picture theatres in Cleveland and surrounding towns, played a midnight flood benefit performance at the Globe theatre, last Friday night, tickets selling for a dollar apiece. Horwitz sent a pair of tickets by mail with a self addressed stamped envelope enclosed, to everyone in the city connected in any way with the picture business. Results were gratifying.

The Memphis-Little Rock Film Board of Trade reports that 53 theatres in the Memphis territory have raised $8,495.28 for the Mississippi Valley flood sufferers. 37 theatres are still to be heard from. The Chicago Film Board of Trade estimates that theatres in that territory will raise at least $10,000 for the Red Cross.

$6,000,000 Issue for Pathe Expansion

"To give representation to the new interests which have become identified with Pathe Company, the board of directors has been increased to fifteen members, consisting of J. J. Murdock, Chairman, E. F. Albee, George Armsby, Frank Callahan, Cecil B. de Mille, Paul Fuller, Maurice Goodman, Marcus Heiman, E. G. Lauder, Edmund C. Lynch, Jeremiah Milbank, B. S. Moss, Charles Pathe, Elmer R. Pearson and Elisha Walker. J. J. Murdock has been elected president and chairman of the board of directors and Elmer R. Pearson and John C. Flinn have been elected vice presidents.

"The new debentures bear stock purchase warrants entitling the holder of each $1,000 debenture to purchase twenty shares of common stock at prices of $25 a share prior to May 1, 1929; thereafter at $30 a share prior to May 1, 1931; thereafter at $35 a share prior to May 1, 1933; thereafter at $40 a share prior to May 1, 1935 and thereafter at $50 a share prior to May 1, 1937.

"The debentures are redeemable at a price of 110 and accrued interest on any interest date up to May 1, 1928, the premium thereafter decreasing 1 per cent each year. A fixed semi-annual sinking fund beginning Feb. 1, 1928, will retire 50 per cent of the issue by maturity.

"A pro forma consolidated balance sheet as of December 25, 1926, giving effect to the expansion, recapitalization and present financing of the company shows total net tangible assets of over $12,600,000, after deducting all liabilities except these debentures."

Coston's Circuit Augmented by Thirteen Theatres

Thirteen houses have recently been added to the large string of theatres being booked by James E. Costen's Circuit in the Chicago territory. They include Ashland, Madlin, Rose, Empire, Imperial, Milford; Sidney H. Selig's Kozy and Gem Theatres in the loop, the Forsythe, East Chicago; Kleighe's De Luxe, Orpheum and Parthenon at Hammond, Ind.; the State of Hammond, recently taken over by Alex. Manta, which gives Coston's Circuit booking control in Hammond. This brings the number of houses controlled by Coston to eighty-five.

"Patent Leather Kid" Booked for N. Y. Globe

"THE Patent Leather Kid," the First National special starring Richard Barthelmess, will be given an extended run at the Globe Theatre, New York, starting August 15, at $2.00 top. Alfred Santell made the picture under the management of Al. Rockett. The story is by Rupert Hughes and its war scenes were made with the full co-operation of the tank corps and other branches of the United States Army at Camp Lewis in Washington. Molly O'Day appears opposite the star.

Non-Theatre Field Greatest

E. W. Hammons, at Harvard, Discusses Short Subject Aims, Competition, Newsreels and Educationals

SPEAKING before the Harvard Graduate School of Business, Earle W. Hammons, president of Educational Pictures, Inc., gave an illuminating summary of the short subject field and the peculiar problems which it presents at this time, with two of the largest producer-distributors about to invade it. It is impossible to present Mr. Hammons' talk in full, but the leading highlights follow:

Mr. Kennedy stated that the word educatonal is a misnomer, but there is a reason for it, like everything else. When I first organized this company in 1915, it was with the sole idea that I would produce strictly educational pictures. It did not take me very long to find out that the demand did not exist and we could not survive by doing that alone.

I think we are under more of a handicap in making short reels than is the producer of the so-called feature.

Comedy Difficult to Make

Incidentally, the comedy is the most difficult picture in the world to make. There are hundreds of directors at the present time around the world, in Hollywood principally, who are capable of taking a manuscript and making a so-called feature picture. But you can count on your fingers the men capable of making salable two-reel comedies. It is like telling a story. You have a laugh the first time, but if you keep on repeating that story it falls flat. One of our most prominent directors in talking about the laughs in a picture claims that a laugh is worth $330 apiece.

A short subject has great competition. We have to have an organization practically the same as the large feature companies. We have 36 offices in the United States and Canada and have to pay the manager of one of our offices just as much as one of the large feature companies pay their managers. We have to pay just as much for our stock, just as much for cameramen, just as much for typists and bookkeepers and just as much for office rent. The only thing that does not cost as much is the amount per reel. We do not have to go out and spend $30,000, $40,000, $50,000 or $100,000 for a story. We do not have the highest-priced actors like some feature companies can afford to employ, although I assure you that the people we employ in the acting get more than enough money. Some of them I think get too much.

The ordinary two-reel comedy will cost somewhere between $10,000 and $40,000 a picture. To make a profit on your investment you must gross at least three and one-half times and you should gross four times the cost. In other words, if a picture should cost $20,000 you should gross $80,000 in order to make a good profit.

Now some of the bigger companies like Paramount-Famous-Lasky and Metro have found the short subjects of so much importance that they have determined to go into the releasing of short reels. Personally, I do not think it is sound business for them to do it. But they think otherwise and only time will tell.

How are we going to meet such competition? Take a big organization that has a number of theatres. One of the principal theatre chains in the United States, known as the Publix Theatres, is affiliated with and owned by Paramount Famous. Paramount Famous are going into the releasing of short subjects. It is only natural that their theatre department will contract and book all of their short reels. Those theatres have been a source of large revenue for our company and we are confronted with a problem of how to retain that revenue. I think that will be comparatively hard but at the same time it can be done, and I say that first because of the fact that with the terrific amount of money they have invested in their theatres they will be compelled to have the best pictures in order to retain their audience and to gain a new clientele, which they must do, because the building of theatres is going on very rapidly and unless they get additional audience they are going to be in great trouble. The head of the theatre department in order to make his theatre successful will have to be given a free rein to purchase pictures, to book them as we term it, from whatever source can produce the best pictures. Therefore, the big theatre chains will have to have our pictures even though they have their own.

"Voice of the Nightingale"

Another thing I cannot understand and have not been able to solve, is this: While in France a few years ago I bought a picture, a beautiful hand- colored picture, entitled "The Voice of the Nightingale," a picture that took 18 months to make. It is to my mind one of the most beautiful pictures I ever looked at. It took the Riesenfeld prize for the best short picture released in 1925. Well, some of the theatres would not book that picture. We could not sell it; they would not take it.

The following year, 1926, we were again awarded the Riesenfeld gold medal for the best short subject of the year, and that was taken on "The Vision," a most beautiful picture. It played down in the slums and received terrific applause, and has met with great success with every audience. Yet the theatres will not take it. What is the answer? I have not been able to find out except that a great many theatre managers do not represent their audience.

On the first picture that I mentioned, "The Voice of the Nightingale"; think of a man working 18 months on a classic of that kind, which was awarded the Riesenfeld gold medal, and what is his profit to date? His profit to date is $35. Can you imagine it?

One of the subjects that we have put out in the news reel, the Kinograms news reel.

At the present time there are four news reels on the market. The first of September there will be six. There is hardly revenue enough to support four. With those six news reels there will be six organizations and at least 75 per cent of their efforts will be duplicated.

Of course, I cannot predict the number of years but I venture to say it will not be so many years before the present industry will be the little twig or branch and the non-theatrical, educational and entertainment, will be the trunk of the tree. You know the number of colleges and schools in the United States; you know the number of Y.M.C.A.'s and you know the number of different welfare centers. These are all prospects for pictures. There are also great opportunities in the big factories.

Block Booking

A number of questions were then put to Mr. Hammons by the students, a few of which follow:

Q. "How do you sell the pictures? Do you use block booking?"

A. We have to sell in block booking on account of the expense. The expense of a short reel organization, roughly speaking, will run about 38 per cent. That is, the cost of distributing, including overhead of your organization, and not the cost of the actual negatives and prints. A feature company's expense should be from five to seven per cent less. Why is that?

Take a comedy that cost $30,000, and assume I am a salesman employed by a short-reel company, who have to pay me the same salary as a feature company would pay, and I go to a theatre to sell this picture, that cost $30,000. Perhaps I may be able to get $500 rental. If I am allowed 20 per cent; that is $100 expense. With the feature I can go to the same theatre but this time I have a picture that has cost $200,000. Naturally I must get a great deal more than $500. We will say $2,000, as an illustration. Twenty per cent of that is $400. We would be eaten up by expense if we sold picture by picture, so to overcome that, we sell by series.

"You spoke a while ago of the educational pictures for factories and such as that, coming in the future. Are the larger established companies taking that up now or are they waiting for the smaller independent or newer organizations?"

No; the larger companies have not. We are probably the largest company of our kind, that is, specializing in short subjects. We have not done that before, although we have carefully studied it.

We have almost come to the conclusion that the time is getting ripe to start. It is going to be a hard thing to do. There is a lot of prejudice to overcome, but there are many ways that that can be overcome.

I think some time in the next few years our company is going to make very determined efforts to make progress and do something in the non-theatrical field.

We have a little plant at Providence. We made several pictures for the Rockefeller Institute, notably The Unhooking of the Hookworm. We made some pictures for the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, in order that they could show them to their own people.

In making pictures of this sort we have

Associated Press Tie-up on Photos With Paramount News, Is Story

ACCORDING to Editor and Publisher, trade publication in the newspaper field, a tie-up has been arranged between the Associated Press and Paramount News by which the news association will be supplied with still photos of all subjects shot by the Paramount newsreel cameramen.

It is understood that the Associated Press, which has been rapidly broadening its activities under the administration of Kent Cooper, will enter the news photo field actively, buying pictures from outside photographers as do Underwood & Underwood, Wide World and others.

Pathe News has for years furnished stills of important events to newspapers, receiving valuable publicity through credit lines, and International Newsreel has done the same through its Hearst affiliations.

$200,000,000 for Fox 30 First Run Houses

THE Wall Street Journal's series of articles on motion pictures contains, in article number five, an analysis of the theatre project of Fox Theatres Corporation which, as announced by William Fox at the film company's sales convention two weeks ago, consists in the construction of 30 first run houses in key cities throughout the United States; the project to be completed before 1929.

The Journal's article, treating with various ramifications of the company's plans for the future, says of the theatre project:

Fox Film Corporation has joined in the contest for position in the theatrical field with an exceedingly ambitious and unique plan. Working on the theory that the trend has set definitely toward mammoth theatres, Fox has laid out a building program for the next few years calling for the construction of 30 first run theatres seating on the average between 4,000 and 5,000 persons each, all located in key cities of the United States. The theatres will cost from $5,000,000 to $12,000,000 each and most of them will include adjoining office buildings and stores. Between $150,000,000 and $200,000,000 will be expended before the system is completed.

Capital of Fox Theatres Corporation consists of 800,000 shares of no par Class A stock and 100,000 shares of no par Class B stock. There is no preferred. The company was founded in November, 1925, with total asset of $21,000,000, consisting of real estate and cash. Its net profit for the 52 weeks ended October 31, 1926, was $757,651, which does not of course include any income from the new theatre projected. The new group will add about $40,000,000 to the gross assets of the company.

	Seats	Cost
Brooklyn	5,000	$11,000,000
Detroit	5,000	10,500,000
St. Louis	5,000	7,000,000
San Francisco*	5,000	7,000,000
Los Angeles	5,500	7,000,000
Philadelphia	4,200	12,000,000
Kansas City	4,000	2,500,000
Boston	5,000	7,000,000
Newark	4,800	5,000,000

*Indicates theatres built by local capital which will be leased.

In laying out the plan of building, the key cities of the United States were divided into three groups. In the first group are cities of 1,000,000 population and over, including New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, etc. In the second group are cities of around 500,000 population and in the third group are cities with an average population of 250,000.

The erection of buildings in the most important cities is already under way. Construction work has been started on new theatres in Brooklyn, New York, Detroit, St. Louis, Washington, Philadelphia and San Francisco.

A number of plans are employed in acquiring theatres. New York has been covered by the purchases of a majority of the common stock of the Roxy Circuit, Inc., which controls the Roxy Theatre, the largest theatre in the world, seating 6,200 people. This theatre made a new high record for Memorial Day week-end, taking in a total of $70,500 for three days. Roxy Circuit also will operate under lease the Roxy Midway and Roxy Mansion in New York City, seating 3,800 persons each.

Other houses will be built and financed by local interests, notably a new building in San Francisco, being financed by the Bank of Italy which will be leased by Fox Theatres. In Washington a theatre will be leased from the builders of the National Press Club building.

The new theatre in Detroit costing $10,500,000 is being financed by a separate bond issue of $6,400,000. The balance of the cost will be handled by the Fox Theatres Corporation, which will probably handle the bulk of the construction work.

Balaban & Katz After Chicago Paradise, Report

It is reported, on apparently good authority, that Balaban & Katz are negotiating to secure the Paradise Theatre in Chicago, which has been under construction by Cooney Brothers for some time past.

Hammons Says Non-Theatre Field Greatest

to go to your big colleges for advice. When we go into the non-theatrical field field it is our purpose to go to the big colleges, like Harvard, Yale and Columbia.

"Would it not be an economic move for your company to hook up with one of the larger organizations like Famous Players, that has its own chain of theatres?"

We have been approached several times on that subject and I had to decide no. My reason for doing that was while we could get their business — and their business would help us a great deal—however, we are tied up with one of the big theatre chains at the present time. I'll take a few minutes to tell you about that.

When we first produced pictures ourselves we released through independents on a percentage basis, but we did not get the percentage we were entitled to. We finally opened our own branches. I went to the big theatre chains in the particular districts. Here in this New England territory, which is served by the Boston and New Haven offices, at that time Mr. Gordon owned the biggest chain of theatres. I went to Mr. Gordon and I sold him a 49 per cent interest in this particular exchange and we had a 51 per cent interest. In Chicago we went to Balaban & Katz and sold them a 49 per cent interest in that exchange. In the beginning that was fine because all these theatres were interested with us. Then they tried to use that interest for the benefit of their theatres and tried to pull down the price. They thought because they were interested with me that they could pay anything they liked for their film. I told them that would be satisfactory to me if they gave me a 51 per cent interest in their theatres. If they did that they could make their own price for pictures but until that time I was going to sell to the theatre that paid me the most money. While we had that theatre connection, yet at times we could see to his competitor at better prices.

The business we have received from Paramount-Famous-Lasky has been about 10 per cent of our gross on a picture. We are in 13,500 theatres. Such a combination as you speak of might be a good thing and it might not.

If you have one of the new small projectors you want to know where you can get pictures. We are planning to establish a film library so that you can come and get pictures. There are a great many branches in the non-theatrical field.

"Are you planning on making little films of the same size used in the Eastman Kodak?"

Yes, sir.

"Will they be sold or rented?"

That is something we will have to determine. In some cases they may be sold and in other cases they may be rented, whichever will turn out to be the best method, and that is something we have to study carefully. We will take the pictures with the standard size film and reduce them.

New England Theatres Give Red Cross Benefits

Besides the $5,000 from the Fay Theatres in Providence, R. I., and the more than $7,000 given by the theatres of Worcester to the Red Cross for the relief of the Mississippi flood victims, the following New England theatres have contributed their proceeds from benefit performances to the welfare organization: Metropolitan, Boston, midnight show, $2,000; Loew's State, Boston, midnight show, $3,025; Magnet, Claremont, N. H., $160 (this house will run another benefit next week); University, Cambridge, from collection and speakers, $00; Bijou, Holyoke, Mass., $125; Eagle, Manchester, N. H., Red Cross collections made in theatre and amount not reported by the Red Cross; Playhouse, Chicopee, Mass., $62; Pastime, Franklin, $264; Strand, Holyoke, $250.

New England distributors have agreed to supply films without cost to exhibitors who will use them for benefits and give the entire gross proceeds to the Red Cross. Practically all of the New England houses have run slides urging people to contribute to the fund.

Chicago Apollo Leased to Balaban and Katz

The Apollo Theatre, former legitimate theatre, now being completely remodeled by United Artists, who will use it as a long-run house, has been leased to Balaban & Katz, according to Chicago reports. It is expected to open some time in September.

French Subtitles in Quebec Cost About $200,000

An estimate has been made that the making of French-tongue or bilingual sub-titles presented in the theatres of the Province of Quebec has cost motion picture producers and distributors in the neighborhood of $200,000. There are 106 theatres in the Province.

Washington Film Board Flood Relief Figures

EXHIBITORS in Virginia, Maryland and Washington, D. C., raised $32,207 for the victims of the Mississippi flood, a report from the Washington Film Board of Trade states. The amount raised was divided as follows gross recipts of Virginia exhibitors, $5,300; of Maryland exhibitors (excluding Baltimore), $2,000; Baltimore exhibitors, $18,000, and Washington, D. C., exhibitors, $6,907. Against this total the distributors contributed film which in rentals would total $5,796.25.

A preliminary report from the Indianapolis Film Board of Trade indicates that 18 special performances in that territory raised $5,947.36 for the sufferers. Film service valued at $497 was contributed by the distributors. The Omaha Film Board of Trade reports the 40 performances resulted in a contribution of $3,011.47. The value of the film rented was $746. A number of theatres are yet to be heard from in this territory.

A preliminary report from Portland, Oregon, Film Board of Trade shows that 11 theatres raised $1,220.26.

First National in Big German Deal; To Produce Fifteen Pictures

By HEINRICH FRAENKEL

Berlin Correspondent, Motion Picture News

BERLIN, June 8 (By Radio).—First National is opening a big German distributing organization to be managed by Phil Kauffmann and Herman Rosenfeld.

In addition, a fifty-fifty tie-up has been made with powerful German financiers to start a production company to produce fifteen German pictures to be handled by the new distributing company. Production is to be supervised by Frederick Zelnik. Fritzsche and Haimann are on the Board of Directors.

Prominent First National stars and Lya Mara are to be featured in the First National German films. Sandberg, a famous Danish director, has been engaged for three productions.

Lepers Enjoy Film Gifts

Governor-General Wood Thanks Will H. Hays for M.P.P.D.A.'s Shipments to Culion Colony

SEVERAL thousand lepers in the Culion Leper Colony in the Philippines are now seeing the outside world in motion pictures which were shipped to them recently by members of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. The pictures were presented to representatives of the Surgeon General of the United States by Paramount Famous-Lasky Corporation, Fox Film Corporation, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Distributing Corporation and Universal Pictures Corporation.

Leonard Wood, Governor-General of the Philippine Islands, in a letter to Will Hays, President of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, expressed his thanks in the following manner:

Baguio, April 29, 1927.

Mr. Will Hays,
M. P. P. and D. of Amer.,
New York, N. Y.
Sir:

"I have pleasure in informing you that the moving picture films recently donated by you for use at the Culion Leper Colony, have been received and forwarded to that place. I am informed that the list comprises 69 titles, most of them 5 reels or more, and 13 International News films, making a total of 404 reels.

"These films will each have not less than three showings at the colony, once in the open-air theatre at the main plaza, where the general population gathers to see them, and one or more times in hospital wards for the benefit of the bed-ridden; they will also be run once for the benefit of the staff, non-leprous, but equally far from and eager for such diversions.

"I wish to express my personal appreciation of this magnificent and most useful gift, and the generous thoughtfulness that impelled it. I can think of nothing that could give the lepers more pleasure or that could so effectively take them for a time away from the routine of their none too happy lives."

Very sincerely,
LEONARD WOOD,
(Governor General)

At the same time that films were sent to the Philippines, pictures contributed by First National Pictures, Inc., Educational Film Exchanges and Kinograms were sent to the Virgin Islands Leper Colony. Previously 200 reels of film had been presented to the United States Leper Colony in Balboa, Canal Zone.

Jay Schreck Managing Editor Exhibitors Herald

Jay M. Schreck, who has been engaged in trade paper publicity in the Paramount organization for the past two years resigned last Saturday to return to the editorial staff of the Exhibitors Herald in Chicago, as managing editor. His fellow workers tendered a luncheon to him on Saturday last at the Blue Ribbon on West 44th Street and a number of representatives of the trade press were among the invited guests.

He is succeeded in the publicity department by Richard B. O'Brien who has been identified with the trade paper field of the motion picture industry for some years past.

New Jannings Film to Show at New York Rialto

"The Way of All Flesh," Emil Jannings' first American-made and Paramount picture, will follow "Beau Geste" at the Rialto Theatre in New York this month. It is said that the picture had an unannounced pre-view at a neighborhood house in the city, and was favorably received. Jannings is supported by Belle Bennett, Phyllis Haver, Donald Keith.

Bearing of Supreme Court Eastman Decision on Paramount Case

DECISION of the United States Supreme Court at Washington, D. C., last week, that the Federal Trade Commission had exceeded its authority in attempting to force the Eastman Kodak Company to dispose of the three film-finishing laboratories owned by it, is expected to put the finishing touch to the charge of the commission in the Paramount case regarding the acquisition of theatres by that company.

It is not expected that the court decision will have much influence upon the opinion of the commission in the film case, since the charge that theater ownership was an unfair method of competition and part of Paramount's alleged attempt to monopolize the industry was dropped by the wayside sometime during the five years or more over which the case has spread. But it will relieve the commissioners of the necessity of reviewing that phase of the case with a view to determining whether the charge should be revived. Practically the only thing decided by the commission is whether block booking is illegal, which seems to be a very difficult determination, it having been under consideration since about the first of February.

The Eastman decision, however, will bring to an end, it is believed, the series of prosecutions which have been undertaken by the commission as a result of mergers and purchases in various industries during the past few years, of which the Eastman laboratory acquisition was but one of a number.

The decision of the Supreme Court, of course, will be binding upon the commission in all cases now in hand or brought in the future, but it was by no means an unanimous verdict, two of the justices dissenting. It is pointed out here that the Federal Trade Commission decision was not unanimous, the minority of that body taking the attitude held by the majority of the Supreme Court.

Film Trade Boards Meet

Hays Asks Members to Sponsor Fair Play in Hearings on Arbitration; Pettijohn, Hess Address Convention

SECRETARIES of all the thirty-eight Film Boards of Trade of the United States and Canada, in convention at French Lick Springs, May 30 to June 3, were asked by Will H. Hays to stand "steadfastly at all times for fair play and absolute honesty in all arbitration board hearings." This request was contained in a telegram sent by the head of the M. P. P. D. A., which also contained the advice that the board "do these things clearly, fairly and with sincerity of purpose at all times."

The delegates observed Memorial Day in fitting manner. A golf tournament was won by Miss St. Louis with Miss Buffalo runner-up. All-day business sessions were conducted by C. C. Pettijohn and Gabriel L. Hess and discussions on conservation were held by Hickman Price, director of conservation of the M. P. P. D. A., and on finances by George Borthwick, auditor.

"Definite improvement in Film Board of Trade activities will result from this convention," said Mr. Pettijohn and Mr. Hess, upon their return from French Lick. "The practices of all the boards will be more thoroughly coordinated and all doubtful questions regarding arbitrations, contracts, conservation and other Film Board work have, we believe, been effectively straightened out in the minds of the secretaries.

"In the convention each secretary profited by the experiences and problems related by all the other secretaries and the meetings ended with the secrtaries as a whole thoroughly organized into a smooth functioning unit."

Of the thirty-eight secretaries, eighteen are women—most of them college graduates. Nearly all of the men are lawyers. Secretaries attending were: Jane H. Holloran, Edna A. Pfister, Albany; E. L. Cole, Atlanta; Martha W. Ferris, Boston; Emma Adplanalp, Buffalo; Harry Myer, Butte; Audrey Littell, Charlotte; J. D. Abramson, Chicago; E. McNamee, Cincinnati; Mrs. G. D. Moffett, Cleveland; Don C. Douglas, Dallas; Duke W. Dunbar, Denver; Miss M. Benjamin, Des Moines; David Palfreyman, Detroit; Miss M. McCulloch, Indianapolis; Miss A. L. Menagh, Kansas City; Mrs. Lola Adams Gentry, Los Angeles; Ben Koenig, Milwaukee; George B. Wiggins, Minneapolis; Kathryn Sullivan, New Haven; Mrs. J. B. Heine, New Orleans; Louis Phillips, New York; Charles R. Zears, Oklahoma City; Clare Foley, Omaha; J. H. Greenberg, Philadelphia; Olive J. Harden, Pittsburgh; E. K. Oppenheimer, Portland, (Ore.); Miss L. B. Schofield, St. Louis; D. T. Lane, Salt Lake City; Milton A. Nathan, San Francisco; Mrs. R. B. Lynch, Seattle; James B. Fitzgerald, Washington; Col. John A. Cooper, Canada; G. O. Burnett, Toronto.

Famous Players Canadian Opens Toronto House

The new Runnymede Theatre, located in a high class residential district on Bloor Street West, Toronto, Canada, was opened by Famous Players Canadian Corp., on June 2. The manager is James Lynch, who has been identified with Famous Players for a number of years, principally as manager of theatres in Western Canada.

It is interesting to note that half of the Runnymede Theatre is inside the city limits and the other half is in the Swansea district. The house, which seats 1,800 people, was designed by Raymond Card with N. G. Reynolds as the builder. The theatre is equipped for stage presentations.

Remains of R. S. Peck Inferred at Chatham, Ont.

With members of the Canadian Senate, House of Commons, Ontario Government, municipal officials and other prominent persons in attendance, the remains of Raymond S. Peck, director of the Canadian Government Motion Picture Studio at Ottawa, were taken from the residence of his brother, Wilfred R. Peck, at Chatham, Ontario, to Maple Leaf Cemetery at Chatham, on May 30.

The funeral service at the house was conducted by Capt. Rev. D. H. Marshall, pastor of First Presbyterian Church, Chatham, while the body was accorded a Masonic burial by the members of Wellington Lodge, No. 46 A. F. and A. M. The body was carried through an avenue of floral offerings which were held by his Masonic brothers.

Among the civic officials present were both the present and former mayors of Chatham, six aldermen, the city manager, city solicitor, postmaster and others. It was one of the largest funerals ever held in Chatham.

New Montreal Company to Build Large Theatre

A new theatre company, the Electra Theatre Company, Limited, with headquarters at Montreal, Canada, has been organized under the company laws of the Province of Quebec with a capitalization of $350,000 for the purpose of erecting a large new theatre in Montreal.

New Firms Secure N. Y. Incorporation Charters

The past week showed a slight falling off on the part of motion picture companies incorporating at Albany, New York State, as compared with some of the recent weeks, during which the number has been running considerably above the average. Records in the Secretary of State's office at Albany during the past week showed the incorporation of the following companies: B. and G. Theatre Corporation, $6,000, Nathan Schwartz, Rose Duberstein, Miriam Kirman, Brooklyn; Essemess Film Corporation, $5,000, Alexander Morskoi, Davis S. Samuels, Ruben Schmitz, New York City; Park U Theatre Corporation, capitalization not stated, Rudolph B. Radtke, Charles B. Paine, Brooklyn; Helen E. Hughes, New York City; Maros Corporation, $10,000, Philip Goodman, Anna V. Rodgers, John H. Dahn, New York City; Patroon Theatres Corporation, capitalization not stated, Harry and Nettie Hellman, Michael D. Reilly, Albany; Max E. Hayes Productions, Inc., $100,000, Max E. Hayes, Philip G. Offin, Frank J. Friedman, Brooklyn; Pollock Productions, Inc., capitalization not stated, Harry C. Hand, Samuel C. Wood, William M. Stevens, New York City; Charley Powers Pictures, Inc., capitalization not stated, Daniel G. Griffin, Julius Walerstein, F. Edward Camus, New York City.

Paramount Opens Branch at Valencia, Spain

The opening of a new Paramount exchange at Valencia, Spain, is announced by E. E. Shauer, general manager of the foreign department of the Paramount Famous-Lasky Corporation. This is the fourth Spanish exchange and will be followed shortly by the fifth to be opened at Malaga. The Valencia exchange will be in charge of Salvador Vidal Batet as manager.

Large Increase Noted in March Film Exports

AN increase of nearly $175,000 as compared with the value of February shipments and of $45,000 as compared with March, 1926, is shown in our March exports of motion picture films, details of which have just been made public by the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce of the Department of Commerce, Washington, D. C.

Total exports for the month were 23,190,397 feet, valued at $753,990, as compared with 20,700,094 feet, valued at $580,096, in February, and 19,559,501 feet, valued at $688,503, in March of last year. Although, as compared with February, the volume exported was greater only in positive film, all classes of film showed increased values, as follows: Positives, 18,363,509 feet, valued at $483,726, in March, against 15,597,327 feet, valued at $404,836, in February; raw stock, 2,765,657 feet, worth $88,145, against 2,885,986 feet, worth $76,064; negatives, 757,158 feet with a value of $156,615, against 915,544 feet, with a value of $80,904. Shipments to noncontiguous territories totaled 1,304,073 feet, worth, $25,404, against 1,331,237 feet, worth $18,292.

Grainger Appoints E. T. Gomersall Fox Short Subject Sales Manager

E. T. (PECK) GOMERSALL was this week appointed short subject sales manager of Fox Films by James R. Grainger, general sales manager for the company. Early in May of this year Mr. Grainger promoted Mr. Gomersall from branch manager of the Indianpolis exchange to special representative with executive sales duties in the field. The new short subject sales manager assumed the duties of his office this week.

Mr. Gomersall joined Fox in 1919 as salesman working out of the Cincinnati branch. In September, 1920, he was made branch manager of the Buffalo exchange, resigned in 1921 and rejoined Fox two years later. In June, 1923, he was transferred to the general sales manager's office at New York headquarters, later returning to Cincinnati as special home office representative. From May, 1924, until March, 1926, Mr. Gomersall served as manager of the Minneapolis branch, being transferred at the latter date to the managership of the Indianpolis office.

Short Subject Houses Coming, Says Hammons

Predicted in Address to A.M.P.A.; Two Reel Dramas With Feature Comedies Favored

THAT short subject houses will be established throughout the country in the near future was the prediction of E. W. Hammons, president of Educational, in an address to the members of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at the weekly luncheon of that organization held in New York City. Such houses offer great opportunities, stated Mr. Hammons, and are bound to become a reality. They will in no way compare with the number of theatres showing feature pictures, however, but will offer an excellent advantage for people who care more for pictures than they do for presentations, he declared. They will also be of benefit to people seeking film entertainment without being compelled to drop in during the middle of a feature, stated Educational's president.

Scarcity of dramatic subjects may be attributed to the fact that a feature-length drama and a short reel of the same type are not acceptable to the public, forcing exhibitors to book comedies to lighten the bill, he said. This situation is changing rapidly. Producers are making more comedies of feature length, thereby providing an open market for the short reel dramatic reel. Several experiments where exhibitors booked a feature length comedy and a short reel dramatic vehicle proved highly successful and, according to exhibitors offered a perfectly balanced program and the opposite of the present-day program of feature drama and short comedy.

Regarding presentations, Hammons stated that "motion pictures are still and will always be the sole backbone of the industry. Presentation acts can go over only in a few theatres of a certain class."

Publix-Loew Ohio Move?

May Launch New Expansion Through Latter Firm's Buckeye State Holdings; All Chains Active

THOUGH Publix is not expected to enter the Ohio theatre field on its own it is quite possible that the company, through aliance with Loew's Ohio Theatres, will expand throughout the state, according to advices from Cleveland. It had been recently reported that Variety Amusement Company, newly formed chain which operates a number of houses in Cleveland, as well as several in the southern part of the state, was a Publix subsidiary, but this has not been confirmed and is believed without foundation.

Ohio is attracting national attention as a field for expansion of the national circuits, particularly Stanley and Universal. The former is reported seeking to purchase three and possibly four houses at Portsmouth, where a "price war" is in progress, while Universal, through Schine Enterprises, is reported to have acquired houses at Van Wert, Salina, Lima, Bucyrus, Sidney and Sandusky.

In event Publix does enter the state, the company may be expected to follow its procedure of buying in on existing chains. This takes the form of a 25 per cent interest, giving the company privilege to book and sometimes manage, with an agreement that Publix will be given first preference as a prospective purchaser of the individual house or circuit.

Paramount News Meeting

Roosevelt Hotel in New York Scene of Staff's Convention; Zukor, Kent, Katz, in Attendance

AT a get-together of the Paramount News staff—the first convention of field representatives of this news reel—opportunities for making each other's acquaintance, listening to executives' talks covering the production and distribution of newsreel productions and discussing their individual problems, were had by the assembled cameramen. The Roosevelt Hotel in New York housed the meeting which began on June 1 and closed with a banquet the evening of June 4.

The banquet was the climax of the convention and at it were Adolph Zukor, Paramount president, who returned last week from a trip abroad, and Commander Richard E. Byrd, of the U. S. Navy, as the guests of honor. Other guests present were Sidney R. Kent, Paramount general manager, Sam Katz, of Publix, and George Palmer Putnam, publisher. Emanuel Cohen, editor of Paramount News and director of short features production, acted as chairman. Best wishes for the success of Paramount News and tribute to its staff were made by General Salzman, chief signal officer of the U. S. Army, by Mr. Putnam, and by N. A. Hughes, of the Associated Press.

The first day of the convention was spent in a recreational way, the convention proper starting at 10 o'clock on Thursday morning. At this time Mr. Cohen outlined the plans he has in mind, and stressed the importance of the new newsreel as a vital part of the Paramount organization. The first edition of the Paramount News was unreeled at this time. After the Friday luncheon the men were addressed on technical matters by Dr. K. Hickman, of the Eastman Kodak Company, Fred Waller, trick photography expert, David Sussman, superintendent of the New York laboratory of Paramount, and Eugene La Roche, who discussed the various phases of camera work.

At the banquet, Mr. Cohen praised the personnel of the Paramount News staff, both here and abroad. Mr. Zukor, in extending his official welcome to the cameramen, likened the company to a large family. Mr. Kent spoke of the spirit that the Paramount executives have attempted to create and maintain among employes, and Mr. Katz emphasized the value of a good orchestration as an essential part of a newsreel's showing. Commander Byrd, whose talk was pitched mostly in a humorous strain, mentioned the Cohen pictures of the Byrd polar flight branding them as some of the best Arctic pictures that ever got back to civilization.

F. B. O.'s Western Plans

Twenty Outdoor Dramas Scheduled for New Season Will Star Tom Tyler, Bob Steele and "Buzz" Barton

WITH the signatures of Bob Steele and "Buzz" Barton affixed on long-term contracts, Film Booking Offices is inaugurating an ambitious expansion program in Western pictures. Tom Tyler will head the trinity of action stars, taking the place of Fred Thomson, who has gone over to another company. There will be 20 Western productions coming from F. B. O. during the 1927-28 season.

Tyler has been with F. B. O. for two years. With his horse, "Flash," and his dog, "Beans," he has been the featured player in many pictures during that time. He is a former star of the Los Angeles Athletic Club and holds the world's weight lifting record in two events: the one hand "clean and jerk" at 240½ pounds, and the two "snatch" at 213 pounds. Tyler is now on location for "Tom's Gang," and is working under the direction of Robert De Lacy.

Bob Steele, who will star in seven films, the first of which "The Mojave Kid," is the son of Robert North Bradbury, supervisor of Western units for F. B. O. Since he was old enough to sit on a horse he has been rigorously trained in athletic activities with the end in view of making him a Western film star. He inherits histrionic ability from his parents who were both players on the legitimate stage. He is 21 years of age, and is now on location at Red Rock Canyon, 60 miles from Mojave, California, where exteriors are being shot for the first of his starring vehicles.

"Buzz" Barton, whose age is 13, will make a series of seven Westerns. He is described as "freckled and homely" and has doubled for many of the better known screen youngsters when a difficult feat of horsemanship was required. He first appeared on the screen with Jack Perrin, completing seven pictures with him. After appearing in one picture for F. B. O. he was signed by Joseph P. Kennedy, president of F. B. O., to star in a series the first of which is now in work.

Marion Davies to Star in Ade Story

"The Fair Co-ed," written by George Ade several years ago as a musical comedy, will follow "Quality Street," as the next Marion Davies vehicle to reach the public.

Film Booking Offices Becomes F B O Pict.

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by Joseph P. Kennedy, president of Film Booking Offices, that the company and its various subsidiaries will hereafter be known as F B O Pictures Corporation. F B O will be written without periods.

The name has been changed so that the corporate name will conform to the name with which the industry has long been familiar.

Details of National M. P. T. O. Convention

had been delegated to a subcommittee consisting of Joseph M. Seider, of New York, and Jack Miller, of Chicago. These members made separate reports, Mr. Miller's being verbal and referring generally to constructive work accomplished by the special committee.

Mr. Seider read a resolution prepared by the committee declaring all theatre managers eligible to membership in the M. P. T. O. A., thus removing the barriers for producer-owned houses, the only apparent bone of contention in the convention.

Sydney S. Cohen, of New York, and John Schwalm, of Ohio, requested that their names be removed from the board of directors' slate, but Mr. Schwalm was persuaded to remain a candidate. Nominations from the floor brought the names of John B. Horowitz, of Cleveland, Charles Metzgar, of Indianapolis, Nathan Freidberg, of Pittsburgh, and M. Guthrie, of Oregon, for places on the board of directors.

Just prior to this, M. A. Rosenberg, of Pittsburgh, also declined to stand for a place on the board. The convention then adjourned until Thursday at 10 A. M.

Wednesday evening the banquet was held in the main dining room of the hotel. Guests of honor at this function included the Costello sisters, for whom a party had been given at the Deshler Hotel Tuesday evening; Charles C. Pettijohn, of the Hays' office, Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Brothers, Edward A. Guest, of Detroit, the popular poet, former Representative in Congress, James F. Burke, of Pittsburgh, "Roxy," and Ohio's Governor, "Vic" Donahey, and Mrs. Donahey.

Harry Reichenbach acted as toastmaster after the dinner and a program of entertainment consisting of vaudeville talent playing the local theatres and after the Columbus Elks' male chorus had been enjoyed the speech-making began.

Mr. Pettijohn, speaking for Will H. Hays, voiced his appreciation of the convention's action in proposing to admit the producer-owned circuits to membership in the organization and paid tribute to a dozen or more exhibitors in various parts of the country for aid the Hays office had received from time to time.

Mr. Rothafel made only a brief adress, but was given a great ovation. His speech before the convention had caught the fancy of the crowd and they cheered wildly.

"Roxy" offered the use of what he termed "his mike" to the M. P. T. O. A. and repeated in a few words the key note of his morning address, "Service." Edward A. Guest proved a rare entertainer, reciting a number of his poems. One which Mr. Guest called the "Stick Together Family" was especially enjoyed.

An unannounced speaker was former Congressman Burke, who paid his respects to "Roxy" when he referred to the latter's address of the morning as something more than an outburst of eloquence.

"It was the story of a dreamer," Mr. Burke said, "whose dream had come true."

Governor Donahey in his address took what was construed to be a fling at Ohio's censor board when he said that the exhibitors in the state could deny responsibility for any pictures to which objection was made by saying, "kick to the censors."

Allison Re-elected Head of Atlanta Board of Trade

The incoming board of directors of the Atlanta Film Board of Trade announce the election of George R. Allison, manager of the local Fox exchange, as president. This is the fifth time Mr. Allison has been chosen for the office. The retiring president is Ben Y. Cammack, manager of the Atlanta exchange of Universal.

When the Film Board of Trade was organized, Mr. Allison became its first president, and signalized himself for a friendly and constructive administration that did much to establish the Board in favor with exhibitor leaders. His splendid work in averting unfair legislation has been outstanding. No better testimonial of his popularity could be offered than the fact of his having been returned four times to the post he originally filled with so much credit.

At the next meeting of the board of directors the remaining officers of the new administration will be elected and various standing committees will be named.

Sam Bischoff Production Manager for Gotham

As a preliminary step toward the production of the Gotham schedule for the season of 1927-28, Sam Sax, president of Gatham, has appointed Sam Bischoff to the position of studio production manager. During the past year Mr. Bischoff acted on several occasions as production supervisor for the William Fairbanks unit which releases through Lumas. Though it is Mr. Sax's intention to personally supervise all production of Gotham pictures at the West Coast studio, the many details of studio production manager will in the future be taken care of by Mr. Bischoff.

West Coast Film Notables Welcome Franklin

HIGH officials from every branch of the motion picture business assembled Wednesday evening, June 1st, at the Biltmore Hotel, Los Angeles, to welcome Harold B. Franklin, newly elected President of the West Coast Theatre chain. More than 400 invited guests attended the banquet.

Rupert Hughes acted as toastmaster of the affair, which featured commendatory remarks intended for the guest of honor. Mr. Franklin replied in kind, expressing his pleasure at being permitted to join the local film colony—"in any capacity," he said. He further pointed out that his new position would undoubtedly be an easy one due to the expressions of co-operation from every producing organization in California. Guests at the speakers' table included C. B. De Mille, Gavin McNab, attorney of San Francisco, Samuel Goldwyn, Louis B. Mayer, Joseph Schenck, Milton Sills, Conrad Nagel, Sid Grauman and others.

A feature of the evening was the presentation by Marco of the Fanchon-Marco producing organization. Eddie Peabody of the Metropolitan Theatre, Jane Green of West Coast and various highly talented performers took part in the impromptu program.

"U" Profits Increased 55 Percent Since 1923, Bank Analysis Shows

PROFITS increase of fifty-five percent since 1923 are shown in a financial analysis of Universal Pictures Co., Inc., by Shields and Company, which prepared the report as part of a compilation known as "A Record of Progress" which concerns itself with the financial history of a number of corporations which this Wall Street firm has financed. The report shows Universal's business has increased consistently with sales of $27,070,000 in 1926 as against the volume for 1923, which amounted to $20,735,000, a thirty percent increase. During the same years, net income rose from $1,267,000 to $1,968,000 or fifty-five percent more. These earnings amounted to $3.54 a share of common in 1923 and $6.41 in 1926.

"Universal Pictures Co.," the analysis reveals, "has followed the practice of reinvesting its earnings in the business. Adherence to this policy has placed the company in an increasingly strong financial position and has built up large equities for its shareholders. Within the last two years additions to surplus have exceeded $3,150,000; this increase represents a growth in equity per share of common stock of more than $12 per share since this stock was offered in February, 1925.

Universal has no funded debt and its entire outstanding organization is represented by: 8% 1st preferred par $100, $2,748,600; 7% 2nd preferred par $100, $2,000,000; common no par value, 250,000 shares.

"U" Plans 16 Houses in Western New York

Sites Secured in Many Cities; Construction in Fall; Capacity 1,000 and Over

UNIVERSAL Chain Theatrical Enterprises this week announced plans for the construction of sixteen theatres to be erected in as many cities in the Western part of New York state; many sites have been secured and construction plans are well under way for a number of the houses with actual erection expected under way by fall. It is understood that the majority of these theatres will approximate a 1,000-seat capacity, but houses in the bigger cities, Buffalo, for example, will have a greater number of chairs.

At present sixty theatres in up-state New York are affiliated with Universal and in New York City the company will take over this summer the Central and Colony theatres on Broadway, the Park Lane, a neighborhood house, and the Park Plaza, now under construction at the Bronx, New York City. In addition the Universal theatre, said to be the first "atmospheric" house for New York, is in process of erection at New Utrecht Avenue and 46th Street, Brooklyn. The theatre, costing approximately $1,500,000, will be opened early in August.

The sixteen cities where Universal will build are: Niagara Falls, Batavia, Buffalo, Binghamton, Cortland, Dunkirk, Elmira, Fredonia, Fulton, Hornell, Ithaca, Jamestown, Kenmore, Lancaster, Olean and Tonawanda.

The Universal Chain Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., under the managership of Dan Michalove, is co-ordinating its country-wide activities to an extent never before attempted by the Universal Theatres. Under the new methods of operation and expansion, the New York state houses will form the most important link of a vast chain.

The proposed New York state houses will bring the total of Universal owned, controlled or affiliated theatres well over 300, with a scattering of projected houses in important centers elsewhere throughout the United States.

In this connection, the directors of the Universal Chain Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., have just declared a regular quarterly dividend of 2 per cent on the 8 per cent first preferred stock, payable June 15th to stockholders of record June 6th.

West Coast Managers Hold Regional Convention

The Los Angeles division of West Coast Theatres, Inc., convened the early part of this week in the Cocoanut Grove of the Ambassador Hotel to hear Harold B. Franklin, president of West Coast, outline the new policies for the organization. More than 100 theatres from Bakersfield to San Diego sent representatives to the meeting.

The plan of realignment of West Coast means that four distinct divisions created for the operation of the circuit. The Los Angeles Division will be under the direction of Harry C. Arthur, Jr.; the Northern Division under the guidance of A. M. Bowles; the Seattle Division will have Herschel Stuart as chief and the Portland Division will be supervised by J. J. Franklin.

The entire executive staff of West Coast Theatres was present at the gathering, the first of a series of four which will be staged at each of the divisional headquarters.

Resume of Current News Weeklies

By L. C. MOEN

AVIATION continued to be the highlight of the newsreels this week, with further welcomes to Lindbergh, the take-off of the Bellanca plane piloted by Chamberlin and Levine, the free balloon elimination races—and a further bit of aerial work in the 14-ft. pole vault by Carr of Yale. The next, we suppose, will be the race to show the first scenes of the Columbia pilots in Berlin. Although the first forced landings naturally could not have been filmed, the arrival in Berlin no doubt was.

International Newsreel No. 46, released last Saturday, showed Mussolini restoring the cross in the Coliseum after 57 years, an impressive pageant; the graduation exercises at Annapolis were shown, being about the same in all the news services; the start of the balloon races at Akron lent a graceful touch; a bit of comedy was introduced in scenes showing the end of Toronto's 11-year dry spell, with the eager rush for liquor; Lindbergh's further triumphs in Paris ended the reel.

This Wednesday's release, No. 47, featured the Chamberlin take-off; views of the fliers' wives after word of their safe arrival came; Lindbergh's flights to Brussels and London, with his clamorous reception there; some amusing scenes of a baby raccoon being disciplined by its stern parent; and impressive shots of President Coolidge reviewing the fleet at Hampton Roads.

Fox News, Vol. 8, No. 72, contained an unusual touch of beauty in scenic shots of the Black Hills of South Dakota, in the region about the summer White House, worthy of a regular scenic; good action shots of "Big Bill" Tilden and Borotra, with their partners, at play; thrilling views of a Yorkshire, England, girl going over the side of a 400-foot cliff for gulls' eggs, wearing a tin hat to protect her from the birds; striking slow motion of the 14-ft. pole vault by Carr of Yale (a real classic), the Indianapolis speedway classic, and Capt. Lindbergh's further reception in Paris.

Fox News, No. 73, has the presidential review of the fleet; debutantes driving up to Buckingham palace to be presented at court; the dedication of Harvard's new school of business, with leading financiers present; the dedication by King Emanuel of Italy of the Victory Lighthouse at Trieste, a memorial to sailor dead; daredevil stuff at Spokane Falls; and Chamberlin's take-off.

Kinograms, No. 5297 last Saturday, included the winning of Australia's derby at Sydney by a 100 to 1 shot; the laying of a cornerstone by President Hindenburg in Germany; the balloon races; a couple married atop in lighthouse in Frisco, with remarkable shots of the boat going through heavy seas, rolling and pitching dangerously; the meeting of Lindbergh and Bleriot in Paris, just 18 years after Bleriot flew across the English Channel.

Kinograms, No. 5298, was largely aerial, with the Chamberlin-Levine hop-off; the fliers' wives receiving awards; and Lindbergh in Belgium and England. The other subjects (in the New York version shown us) were the dedication of new buildings at Harvard and the presidential review of the fleet. This latter subject was remarkably good in Kinograms, with airplane shots and impressive views of the Langley, aircraft carrier, not in the other newsreels.

Pathe News, No. 47, last Saturday, had some of the best flood scenes we have seen, taken from airplane; views of two picturesque old windjammers at Falmouth, Eng.; and excellent scenes of the crowds cheering Lindbergh in Paris. The other subjects included the balloon races; the end of the Toronto dry Spell; and the Annapolis graduation exercises.

Pathe News, No. 48, opened with the Chamberlin take-off, followed by views of the fliers' wives; the Vassar daisy chain; King Emanuel at Trieste; the demolition of a century-old prison in Egland; Coolidge reviewing the fleet; and splendid scenes of Lindbergh leaving Paris and arriving in Brussells, leaving Brussells and arriving in London.

New Faces on Christie Lot

Brothers Augment Production Forces for Schedule of Paramount Short Feature Releases

BEGINNING now what looks to be the busiest season in the history of the Christie Film Company, new personalities for the screen and talent in the other lines of production are augmenting the producing forces of the Christies, who are making 36 comedies for Paramount's new short feature department. Many new people were signed during the last few days and now practically all of the Christie stars, directors, supporting players and executives are engaged in their work with the exception of Anne Cornwall and Jack Duffy, and they will apply the grease paint within a few days.

Bobby Vernon, Billy Dooley, Jimmie Adams and Neal Burns are acting before the cameras and taking direction from Harold Beaudine, William Watson, Robert Kerr and Arvid Gillstrom.

The first three comedians mentioned will each make eight fun-reels, while twelve comdeies will be filmed with such players as Burns, Duffy and Miss Cornwall enacting the feature roles. They will be supported by leading ladies in Vera Stedman, Frances Lee, Caryl Lincoln and Gayle Lloyd. New feminine talent secured recently by the signing of contracts include Doris Dawson, June Manners and Lorraine Eddy. The Christie beauty brigade girls, Agnes Allison, Fern Price, Kent Jackson, Helen Cox, Peggy Hude, Louise Billets, Jeanne Williams, Joan Marquis, Helen Fairweather, Virginia Jennings, Evelyn Egan, Ann Carter and others, will also be seen in the various productions, Ethel Shannon has been signed as Jimime Adams' leading lady.

Sid Smith, comedian, gag man and author, has affixed his signature to a Christie contract, also Billy Engle, a supporting player in Christie comedies for the past year. In addition to others to be announced later, supporting players will include Bill Irving, Jimmie Harrison, Bill Blaisdel, Eddie Baker, George Towne Hall, Blanche Payson, Tom Dempsey, Cliff Lancaster, Bert Swor, Stella Adams and Bobby Higgins. The scenario department will again be headed by Frank Roland Conklin. Al Martin has signed to do the captions, and Norman Z. McLeod the cartoons adorning the subtitles.

Vitaphone Opens New Branch in Chicago

An exchange in Chicago has been opened by the Vitaphone Corporation under the supervision of Paul Swift, who left New York Saturday, June 4, on the Century to prepare the official opening, after which occasion E. R. James will be in charge. The Chicago exchange will be located at 839 South Wabash Avenue. At the present time the Chicago station will give service to 48 theatres throughout the Middle West and Far Northwest.

De Mille Places Ethel Wales Under Contract

Ethel Wales, who is busy playing in "Beautiful But Dumb," William C. De Mille's first production as associate producer with his brother, Cecil B., has been placed under a long term contract by the De Mille organization. The above-mentioned picture stars Vera Reynolds, and is taken from the novel "The Bar Sinister," by Richard Harding Davis.

Exposition is Held at M. P. T. O. A. Meet

ONE of the interesting features of the M. P. T. O. A. convention at Columbus this week was the exposition, with a large number of exhibits from prominent accessory firms. Those having exhibits were:

Sterling's New Schedule Comprises 8 Films

ADOPTING the slogan that quality is preferable to quantity, Henry Ginsberg, Joe Rock, I. L. Walenstein, production executives of Sterling Pictures, are now hard at work formulating plans for the production of the schedule of eight pictures for the new season. Already sixteen of the eighteen Sterling films for the present season have been completed.

The new season's product consists of "Stranded," by Anita Loos; "Marry the Girl," by Norman Houston; "A Million for Love," by Peggie Gaddis; "It Might Happen to Any Girl," by Cosmo Hamilton; "Outcast Souls," by John Peter Toohey; "Burning Up Broadway," by Wallace Irving; "Pretty Clothes," by Peggy Gaddis, and "Undressed," by John Leeds.

Cohen and Ullman to Enter Production Field

Harry J. Cohen, formerly manager of the foreign department of Metro Pictures Corporation, and George Ullman, former manager of the late Rudolph Valentino, are about to enter the production field. Their first contract is with Claire Briggs for the motion picture rights to several Briggs cartoon creations—"When a Feller Needs a Friend" and "Days of Real Sport." Both Cohen and Ullman are well known in motion picture circles.

Mendikow Tiffany Manager of Chicago Exchange

John Mendikow, who was with Associated Exhibitors in the Chicago territory before joining Tiffany Productions, Inc., has succeeded A. H. McLaughlin as manager of the Chicago exchange of Tiffany. Mendikow was also sales manager for five years of the Chicago locality for Universal.

Another addition to the Tiffany managers is Dave Biederman, who has been appointed to handle the Tiffany Los Angeles exchange.

"The Viking" to Be Made a Special by "U"

PLANS that have been contemplated for some time at Universal City to film a story of the Vikings will materialize soon, according to Carl Laemmle, the Universal president, who has issued the statement that his company will make "The Vikings," to be based on the famous voyage of Lief the Lucky, the Scandinavian explorer whom history credits with having landed on the coast of America in the year 1000 A. D. The story is timely in that it offers a contrast between the voyages of the ancient Vikings and the recent flight of a young American of Scandinavian descent in an airplane across the Atlantic. This feat has fanned the plans of the Universal into immediate action. The modern part of the story will carry a trans-Atlantic flight sequence. Much of the film will have to be taken in the exact locale of the story—the Southern fringe of Greenland.

Lloyd's Next Comedy Will Have Manhattan Settings

Harold Lloyd's new comedy for release through Paramount, for which technical experts are now drafting plans that will invest it with several of Manhattan's settings, will be made for the most part in California, the comedian using for the first time the 10 acres at Westwood that he purchased several years ago, primarily as a studio site. In Lloyd's story the Yankee Stadium and Coney Island will serve as backgrounds. Lloyd intends to bring his unit to Gotham around July or September, when New York is generally overflowing with the crowds that his comedy demands. The comedian should be acting before the cameras inside of two or three weeks, as Production Manager John L. Murphy has the entire organization in full swing at the present time. Ted Wilde will direct Lloyd. John Grey will head the scenario staff, while the balance of the production staff will remain as it was in the case of "The Kid Brother," except for Howard Emmett Rogers, who is a newcomer to the unit.

First National Changes "Road to Romance" Title

"The Road to Romance," Al Boasberg's original screen story for First National, has been supplanted by another title, and will hereafter be known as "Smile, Brother, Smile." The picture features the team of Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall. Shooting was completed this week under the direction of John Francis Dillon. Rex Taylor made the adaptation. The cast includes Yola D'Avrill, Philo McCullough, E. J. Ratcliffe, T. Roy Barnes, Harry Dunkinson, Ernest Hilliard, Brooks Benedict, Charles Clary, Harry Bailey, Jed Prouty, Sam Bloom and Fred Warren.

Tiffany Productions Enlarges Home Office

Additional office space adjoining their present headquarters in the Loew State Building in New York has been rented by Tiffany Productions, Inc., to accommodate the increase in the office force and the number of executives due to Tiffany's expansion as national producers and distributors. Tiffany has occupied their present quarters for the past five years. With this additional space rented the company now has half of the 16th floor of the building with options to annex more space.

W. C. Fields and Conklin to Form Comedy Team

W. C. Fields and Chester Conklin will form a new comedy team for Paramount pictures, according to a decision arrived at by B. P. Schilberg, associate Paramount producer, and Jesse L. Lasky and Walter Wanger, production executives, after seeing previews of "Tell It to Sweeney," the Conklin-Bancroft vehicle, and "Running Wild," a new Fields comedy. Bancroft's dramatic work in "Underworld" influenced Paramount officials to decide to give him parts of a serious nature.

$2,067,273 Paramount's Three Month Profit

THE Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation, in its consolidated statement for the three months to April 2, 1927, which includes earnings of subsidiary companies, reports combined net profits of $2,067,273.83 after deducting all charges and reserves for Federal Income and other taxes. This figure includes its $376,847.57 undistributed share of earnings of the Balaban & Katz Corporation, a 65 per cent owned subsidiary.

After allowing for payment of dividends on the preferred stock, the above earnings amount to $3.33 per share for the three months on the Common stock outstanding.

Columbia's "Romantic Age" a June Release

Columbia Pictures' first release during June will be "The Romantic Age," co-starring Eugene O'Brien and Alberta Vaughn. Bert Woodruff and Stanley Taylor are the other featured members of the cast. The story was written by Dorothy Howell and directed by Robert Florey.

Warner Baxter Signed by F.B.O. for "The Coward"

The leading role in "The Coward," based on the story by Arthur Stringer, will be played by Warner Baxter. The complete cast will be announced in a few days. The story tells of the regeneration of a spiritual and physical coward.

Paramount Chooses Own Ten Best Films

FOR the purpose of publicly commending the work of those concerned in the making of outstanding Paramount releases during the past year, especially the "ten best" selected by Paramount, according to box office returns, a mass meeting of the employees of the West Coast studio was held recently on one of the studio stages which had been transformed into an auditorium for the occasion. Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of Parmount, presided, and B. P. Schulberg presented the prizes.

The ten best pictures are listed by Paramount in the order of their standing, as follows:

"We're in the Navy Now" and "Behind the Front," co-featuring Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton and directed by Edward Sutherland; "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter," with Adolphe Menjou and Florence Vidor, who were directed by Malcolm St. Clair; "Let's Get Married," starring Richard Dix and directed by Gregory La Cava; "The Quarterback," another Dix vehicle which Fred Newmeyer directed; "The Vanishing American," directed by George B. Seitz and also starring Dix; "The Campus Flirt," with Bebe Daniels featured and directed by Clarence Badger; "Mantrap," directed by Victor Fleming and starring Clara Bow; "Kid Boots," starring Eddie Cantor and directed by Frank Tuttle, and "Forlorn River" in which John Waters directed Jack Holt.

"The Rush Hour" Title of New Prevost Picture

Marie Prevost's current starring vehicle for Metropolitan is "The Rush Hour," which for the past two weeks has been in the process of filming from the Frederic and Fanny Hatton story, "The Azure Shore." E. Mason Hopper is directing, with Harrison Ford playing the leading male rôle, and Franklin Pangborn, David Butler, Ward Crane, Seena Owen and Bill Irving in prominent supporting rôle. Zelda Sears and Fred Stanley adapted the production which Dewey Wrigley is filming.

Columbia Fills Title Role for "Sally in Our Alley"

Shirley Mason is the choice of Harry Cohn, vice-president in charge of the production of Columbia pictures, to play the title role of "Sally in Our Alley," one of the eight specials which Columbia will produce for the new season. This production will mark the fourth appearance of Miss Mason in a Columbia feature, her others being "The Wreck," "Rich Men's Sons" and "Sweet Rosie O'Grady."

New Marion Davies Film Will Be "The Fair Co-ed"

Marion Davies, who recently finished the starring role in the Cosmopolitan production, "Quality Street," at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, will next be seen in a screen version of "The Fair Co-ed," a romantic story by George Ade. It will be produced under the supervision of Irving Thalberg and will be directed by Sam Wood.

Atlanta Theatre Subs Vita for Musicians

SEEKING to reduce the size of its orchestra because of a change in policy of theatre management and a lowered scale of prices, the management of the Metropolitan Theatre in Atlanta has precipitated a controversy with the Atlanta musicians union which resulted in a strike by the musicians and their replacement this week with a straight Vitaphone program.

A clause in the Metropolitan's contract with the Atlanta union reads that "any change of policy will render the contract null and void." This stipulation has resulted in the different opinions held by the contending parties. Manager Crovo regards the installation of the Vitaphone as a radical change of policy which automatically renders the contract nullified; the union thinks the contrary. The matter is in a deadlock with no settlement in sight, although conferences with local union officials and Joseph N. Weber, president of the American Federation of Musicians, have been held.

Sig Samuels, managing director and major stockholder of the Metropolitan, believes that the theatre management is entirely right in eliminating the entire orchestra after this difference of opinion. As only four members comprised the intended cut in the orchstra, his interpretation of the contract receives much support from other theatre men.

George Bancroft to Star in Paramount Features

GEORGE BANCROFT has been raised to stardom following the production of "Tell It to Sweeney," according to an announcement from Jesse L. Lasky, Paramount's first vice-president. "We have decided that you are hiding your light under a bushel," said Mr. Lasky, "and at the conclusion of 'Tell It to Sweeney' you are to be starred in a series of productions."

Pathe Starts New Serial on Program of June 19

"The Crimson Flash," the newest of the Pathe mystery serials, written by George Arthur Grey, and featuring Cullen Landis and Eugenia Gilbert, is the principal release on the program of short subjects that Pathe has scheduled for the week of June 19. Paul Fairfax Fuller prepared the serial's scenario, and Arch Heath directed. The remainder of the releases for the week are "Fluttering Hearts," a Hal Roach comedy starring Charley Chase. Pathe Review, No. 25, "Died in the Wool," an Aesop Film Fable; Topics of the Day, No. 25, and the two regular issues of the Pathe News, Nos. 52 and 53. The Chase comedy has Martha Sleeper, Oliver Hardy, William Burress and Eugene Pallette in support. Three different subjects are offered in the issue of the Review. They are: "Russia's Greatest Industry," "The Birthplace of Civilization," and "With the Putnam Expedition to Greenland.

Last Christie-Educational Comedies Finished

The last of the series of thirty releases for the 1926-27 season were recently previewed and edited by Al Christie and his organization in an effort to have the last of the Educational-Christie releases in as perfect shape as possible. The last comedy to be finished was "Dead Easy," the eighth Bobby Vernon comedy, which is the comedian's final production for Educational program for 1926-27. The feminine leads are Doris Dawson and Jane Manners, both new to pictures. Jimmie Adams has just completed "Meet the Folks," his new comedy for July, which has Gail Lloyd, a girl who has just received recognition, as leading lady. The final Billy Dooley production on the Educational schedule is "Wild Wallops," which was finished for release late this month. Olive Hasbrouck, a new addition to the Christie ranks, is seen opposite Dooley.

"Sorrell" Exteriors to be Taken in England

Herbert Brenon, filming "Sorrell and Son" as a United Artists picture, will take his entire unit of players appearing in the Warwick Deeping novel to England, where exterior scenes will be taken. The director began production on the story Tuesday, May 31, at the United Artists studio in Hollywood.

"Beautiful But Dumb" Latest Reynolds Vehicle

Under the supervision of William C. De Mille, who is making his bow as associate producer with Cecil B. De Mille, and under the guidance of Frank Urson, first assistant director during the filming of "The King of Kings," Vera Reynolds, diminutive star of the De Mille organization, is playing the leading rôle in "Beautiful But Dumb," a love story by Clara Beranger, suggested by the Richard Harding Davis novel, "The Bar Sinister." Kenneth Thomson is the chief male player, while others in the film are Majel Coleman, Ethel Wales, Claire McDowell and Micky McBann.

"The Little Firebrand," Pathe July 3 Release

"The Little Firebrand," a drama starring Edith Thornton, with Lou Tellegen and George Fawcett, is cheduled for release by Pathe on July 3. Also in the cast are Eddie Phillips, Joan Standing and Lincoln Stedman.

M-G-M Has Ten in Work; to Start Five

PRODUCTION on the three new pictures which were started last week at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio has increased to ten the number of films in work at the Culver City plant. With half a dozen pictures at least in the cutting rooms and prospects bright for the placing into production of five additional pictures, the production end of the company is indeed active.

Last week saw initial work begun on "Romance," "Terror" and "Spring Fever." Those pictures, which have been progressing steadily towards completion for some time, are "The Trail of '98," "The Crowd," "The Wind,' "Quality Street," "Twelve Miles Out," "After Midnight," and a Tim McCoy film, as yet untitled. The scenario for "In Old Kentucky," to go into production shortly under John M. Stahl's direction, has just been completed by Dorothy Farnum. Fred Niblo is preparing for the filming of "The Enemy," for which Willis Goldbeck is now writing the scenario, and the story and script for "Smarty" have also been finished by F. Hugh Herbert and Florence Ryerson. "Rose-Marie" is now being adapted and will be directed by William Nigh, while the script for "Buttons" is in its last stages of preparation before being placed by Josephine Lovett into the hands of Director George Hill. Most of this latter picture will be filmed aboard a trans-Atlantic liner, enroute from New York to England.

As an indication of the plans which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer are laying for the production of its McCoy vehicles the company has secured the services of Viaschlev Tourjansky, Russian director of "Michael Strogoff," for the direction of "The Gallant Gringo," a romance of Latin America. The story is the work of Jack Cunningham and the cast chosen for it includes Charles Delaney, Dorothy Sebastian, George Cowl, Michael Visaroff, Gayne Whitman and Alex Melesh.

Key City Reports

New York City

THE Big Four among the week's change houses, the Capitol, Paramount, Roxy and Strand, fared pretty well last week, despite a mixed program of weather. The Capitol had "Slide, Kelly, Slide," following a run at the Embassy. It apparently didn't draw well with the feminine fans, which put matinee business off, but the house went over $50,000 on the week; not strong enough to hold over, by a good bit, but satisfactory for this time of year.

The Paramount, which has been in a slump for several weeks, came back a little with "A Million Bid," but is still well below the $70,000 figure it maintained for some months after opening. Paul Whiteman, now playing an extended engagement at $10,500 a week, is expected to boost the gross here.

The Roxy, as reported last week, started off big with a Memorial day week-end gross of more than $70,000 for Saturday, Sunday and Monday on "The Cradle Snatchers," but the picture failed to hold up the four days remaining, and was not held for a second week.

The Strand, with "Resurrection" in its third week, did the unusual by recording a bigger gross for the third week than the second. Had bookings permitted, the film would probably have held up for a satisfactory fourth week.

"Camille," at the Globe, which many figured not strong enough for a two-dollar run, is doing so well that the original seven weeks will be extended to nine, carrying it to June 18.

"Rough Riders" has finished its run at the Cohan, with nothing particularly remarkable to show for it. "Annie Laurie" is figured not so strong at the Embassy. The two Vitaphone shows, "Missing Link" and "When a Man Loves," are running around $12,000 weekly. "Old Ironsides" is still making out fairly well at the Criterion, and will end its run at the same time as "Camille." "The King of Kings" attracts little attention or fuss, but is doing not far from capacity. "Seventh Heaven" in its first full week did about the same as "What Price Glory" was doing at the Harris. "Beau Geste," in its fourth week at the Rialto at popular prices, showed a gain, while "Chang" at the sister house, the Rivoli, held even.

Chicago

SPOTTY conditions developed in Chicago theatre business last week, some houses reporting a slight improvement.

The Oriental and Chicago Theatres in the loop, both did exceptionally good business with excellent shows bringing out the crowds. At the Oriental "Frisco Sally Levy" on the screen and Paul Ash's "Red Head Revue" were the attractions and at the Chicago, "The Show," featuring John Gilbert and Publix Anniversary Syncopation Celebration were the offerings. At the Roosevelt, "Convoy" in its last week did a fair business and the other loop long run house, McVickers, with "The Night of Love" ended its run with average houses.

Of the de luxe neighborhood theatres the Capitol on the south side reported average business with "Mr. Wu" Vitaphone and Del and his Capitol Merrymakers, and the Tivoli with "Evening Clothes" on the screen and Bennie Kreuger and his band on the stage, did normal business.

The Uptown, on the north side, showed "Mr. Wu" and usual elaborate stage show to fair audiences and the Senate also returned a fair box office report with "Mr. Wu." At the Harding "Three Hours" did average business. The Sheridan continued to do good business with "Sunset Derby" on the screen and popular Verne Buck and his band on the stage. "Cradle Snatchers" and Charles Kaley's band were the attractions at the Granada, which did good business.

At the big new Marbro on the west side, "The Love of Sunya" plus Bennie Meroff's stage band, did a rushing business the early part of the week, but tapered off slightly towards the end.

Los Angeles

HIGHEST in appeal of this week's attractions is "King of Kings" at Grauman's Chinese Theatre with an almost complete sell-out for the week

"Seventh Heaven" at Carthay Circle Theatre in its sixth week is causing favorable comment resulting in full houses at each showing.

The third week of "The Love of Sunya" at the Criterion is certainly indicating the popularity of Gloria Swanson in Los Angeles by the splendid box office receipts.

"The World at Her Feet" plus the stage offering of Jack Partington, "Sailing On," featuring Frank Jenks and the Metropolitan band at the Metropolitan is doing average business.

Leatrice Joy in "Vanity" coupled with "The Angelus" at the Forum is checking up satisfactorily.

"The Rough Riders" at the Million Dollar in its first week is playing to large audiences.

Loew's State is presenting "The Unknown" and the Uptown is showing "Dearie." Both houses report satisfactory business.

Philadelphia

ANOTHER week of excellent business is reported by downtown houses with few exceptions.

"Rookies" supported by vaudeville and well exploited shots of Captain Lindbergh, drew exceptional business at the Stanley Theatre this week.

The Stanton, with John Barrymore in "The Beloved Rogue" for an indefinite run, drew very well the first week, although the houses were not quite up to expectations.

The Fox with "Cradle Snatchers," and a presentation program did fairly well.

"What Price Glory" after three months at the Fox-Locust, is announcing its close.

The Arcadia with Johnny Hines in "All Aboard," had a fair week.

The Karlton with Harry Langdon in "His First Flame," ran along fairly well.

"The Love of Sunya," with Gloria Swanson repeated at the Palace to fair business after a [illegible] at the Stanley.

Lon Chaney in "Mr. Wu" at the Victoria had a very big week.

The Globe with Babe Ruth in "Babe Comes Home" had a very satisfactory week.

The Aldine with Syd Chaplin in the "Better Ole," and Vitaphone unit continues to play to very satisfactory business.

Minneapolis

ANOTHER good week of business recorded at Minneapolis picture houses last week.

Richard Dix in "Knockout Reilly" proved a strong attraction at the State theater. A number of other supporting features helped to swell the attendance at the State. The Capitol theater was taking a week off while a Vitaphone production was being shown.

At the Strand, "Rookies" showed to good crowds, but remained for only a week. Raymond Griffith in "Wedding Bells" was responsible for a brisk business at the Lyric. Leatrice Joy in "Vanity" proved a stronger than usual attraction at the Hennepin-Orpheum, and the riotous and rowdy "Cradle Snatchers" was featured to good advantage at the Pantages.

"The Yankee Clipper" was shown at both the Lagoon and the Rialto and drew well, while Buster Keaton in "The General" turned out to be a good drawing card at the Lyndale, another neighborhood theater.

The weather was cold and windy, and it rained intermittently during the week. Counter-attractions were few, the most important being Martha Herman in "The Outcast" at the Shubert.

Cleveland

CONSISTENTLY cool weather, no important side attractions, and every requirement considered necessary for theatrical success failed to bring about the desired results. The average of all local first run theatres for the week was fair. Unstable business conditions generally, combined with a general satiety of winter amusement fare are the only attributable causes for the decided slump in and around Cleveland.

"The Love of Sunya" was a disappointment at the Stillman. Combined with a strong Vitaphone program, it managed to hold its head above water for one week only, and did not enjoy the prestige of a continued run. "Captain Salvation" was the one bright spot on the theatrical horizon. It played the Allen theatre and started out only fair but built up daily until it almost reached normal by the end of the week.

Keith's Palace did moderately well with "The Love Thrill," a good featherweight summer picture, bolstered up with a standard Keith vaudeville program. "Frisco Sally Levy" did only fair business during its second week at the Cameo. "The Climber" took a tumble at the Park, failing to register anything above "fair." "No-body's Widow'' held up for the week at Keith's East 105th St. and did pretty well during half of the week at Reade's Hippodrome. Buck Jones in ''Whispering Sage,'' playing the Hippodrome the other half of the week went below normal. ''Wedding Bills'' and an average program of Loew's vaudeville at the State also received a report of fair business for the week. A second run of ''Ankles Preferred'' and Vitaphone specialty numbers attracted a moderate amount of business at the Circle. Glenn Hunter in ''Merton of the Movies'' playing at the Ohio theatre was the only legitimate show in town and did well considering the general low average of theatre attendance locally.

Kansas City

ANY damage which rain might have done to attendance at first run theatres last week was more than made up for this week, although the weather played little part in the cause for increased attendance. One of the strongest lineups of pictures in several months was served the public.

At the Newman theatre Eddie Cantor in ''Special Delivery'' made it difficult to obtain a seat in that house all week, while Karl Dane and George Arthur in ''Rookies'' established equally as good a record at the Royal theatre.

Raymond Griffith in ''Wedding Bills'' at the Liberty played to better crowds than any previous picture in the last month, although that picture, as well as the two previously mentioned pictures, had no more than ordinary exploitation. ''Her Father Said No'' at the Pantages did a good week's business, as did ''Convoy'' at the Mainstreet theatre and ''Whispering Wires'' at the Globe theatre.

New Orleans

(Previous week)

EXCELLENT weather all during the past week sent receipts at all the downtown theatres soaring. Managers of neighborhood and suburban houses also report an increase in patronage.

The ever popular Tom Mix was the feature of the Loew State Theatre bill, the play being ''The Great K and A Train Robbery.'' Crowds packed the playhouse at every performance. In addition to the screen attraction a strong vaudeville bill was presented.

Sharing honors with its across the street neighbor, was the Saenger Theatre. ''Lovers,'' coupled with a mammoth Publix stage attraction, packed them in at all shows.

Some high class exploitation by Saenger publicity experts filled the Strand theatre where Bebe Daniels, Chester Conklin and Richard Tucker were featured in ''Kiss In A Taxi.'' The combination of Ricardo Cortez and Lois Wilson was enough to draw full houses for the Liberty Theatre where ''New York'' was the film attraction. ''The Show,'' with John Gilbert and Renee Adoree had its local premiere at the new Saenger some time ago but this didn't keep the Globe theatre from enjoying some of the big business. ''Fashions For Women'' was the Trianon attraction, featuring Esther Ralston and Raymond Hatton. It drew well.

At the Tudor Theatre, ''Stage Madness,'' drew good crowds.

''Hey! Hey! Cowboy,'' proved an interesting picture at the Crescent theatre but the writer believes it was the musical comedy show with pretty girls presented in connection with it that was responsible for the good houses all week.

A strong vaudeville bill and ''Matinee Ladies,'' with May McAvoy, filled the Orpheum at almost every show.

The Famous, Mecca, Valentino, named in honor of the late star; Gaiety, Tivoli, Prytania and Carrollton all report attendance increases.

Boston

(Previous week)

CLOSING of four legitimate theatres, coupled with a season of cold, rainy weather have rolled dollars into the box offices of all of the motion picture houses during the week, resulting in excellent business.

''Resurrection'' at Loew's State proved one of the best drawing films of the season. For the divertisement accompanying the picture, The Russian Art Choir, featuring ''Song of the Flame'' blends in remarkably well with the Tolstoy masterpiece.

''Rough House Rosie'' at the Metropolitan is somewhat out of the usual channel of films at this theatre but has been cordially received. Gene Rodemich is completing his sixth week with his band of Marry Makers. ''Vienna Life'' is Frank Cambria's Publix contribution.

The Twin Houses, Beacon and Modern, opened this week with Vitaphone, playing ''Don Juan.'' These are the first Boston theatres to provide Vitaphone as a regular part of their programs and the first time Vitaphone has been heard at popular prices. The result has rolled up new box office records at both houses.

''Mr. Wu'' plays another week in Boston, this time at the Washington Street Olympia, with a reception equally as great as last week. ''Blind Alleys'' at the Fenway has drawn good houses throughout the week. ''Cradle Snatchers'' at the Keith-Albee Boston has proven a big drawing card for comedy lovers.

Next week in prospect: The circus comes to town. Its effect on matinee audiences may be felt. The Ghost Train closes this week at the Copley, to be followed by a melodrama. Gilbert & Sullivan opera also closes this week at the Plymouth.

Minneapolis

(Previous week)

BUSINESS took a turn for the better in some of the Minneapolis picture houses last week.

The Vitaphone production, ''Don Juan,'' with John Barrymore, did a very good business at the State theatre. Gilda Gray in ''Cabaret'' enjoyed unusually good crowds at the Lyric, and the Grand likewise had a big week with a double program featuring ''The Lost Batallion'' and Billie Dove and Huntley Gordon in ''The Sensation Seekers.''

''Convoy'' was the picture at the Strand. This film did only fair business and was not held over for a second week. The ever popular Tom Mix scored another hit on the Pantages program in ''Outlaws of Red River,'' which was featured along with the regular vaudeville acts.

Neighborhood theatres, as a rule, found business good. The Loring offered Florence Vidor in ''Afraid to Love,'' Billie Dove in ''An Affair of the Follies'' and Joan Crawford in ''The Gay Deceiver.'' The Lagoon showed Constance Talmadge in ''Venus of Venice,'' Clara Bow in ''Children of Divorce'' and Billie Dove in ''An Affair of the Follies.'' At the Lyndale the pictures were Casey at the Bat,'' ''The Night of Love,'' ''Johnny Get Your Hair Cut'' and ''Canyon of Light.''

The weather was bad, with plenty of wind and rain. Edith Taliaferro made farewell appearance at the Shubert in ''The Little Spitfire'' and probably cut into the picture trade some.

Baltimore

(Previous week)

WITH the exception of Loew's Century and Valencia Theatres, business at the other first-run playhouses in Baltimore, was not particularly good for the week beginning Monday, May 23, and the poor patronage might be attributed largely to the fact that the Ringling Bros.-Barnum and Bailey Circus hit town on Wednesday and Thursday.

''The Show'' with John Gilbert and Renee Adoree, with Vincent Lopez and his orchestra on the same bill, proved an excellent drawing card at Loew's Century and large publicity space, gained by Charles Winston for illustrations showing the music and steps of the Lindbergh hop composed by Lopez, helped business very much at that theatre.

''Mr. Wu,'' starring Lon Chaney with Renee Adoree, also proved a wonderful drawing card for Loew's Valencia, but this was not strange because Lon Chaney pulls big houses in Baltimore in almost any picture.

At the Embassy the Russian film ''Potemkin'' did good business for its second week and proved twice as good a drawing card during its second week than first-run pictures have proved here in the past several weeks.

Keith's Hippodrome with ''Home Struck,'' and five acts of vaudeville, and the Garden with ''Hills of Peril and five acts of vaudeville each did a fair business which was far below their usual very good business.

''The Tender Hour,'' with the Baltimorean Ben Lyon and Billie Dove, only went over fair at the Rivoli. ''Vanity,'' with Leatrice Joy and Charles Ray proved a poor business getter at the New Theatre, but ''The Climbers,'' with Irene Rich did pretty good business at Warners' Metropolitan with Vitaphone added attractions.

San Francisco

THIS week's business at the down-town and residential theatres was not as good as usual, partly do to the weather conditions, for three days it was exceptionally hot when the people then go to the beach, in this city.

''Don Juan'' was shown at the St. Francis Theatre for its second week and continued to draw crowds. ''Lost at the Front,'' at Loew's Warfield Theatre, did not prove as popular as expected. The presentation act, ''Ali Baba,'' was very popular.

''Rookies'' at the Granada Theatre also did not prove as popular as expected. The ''Wolf's Clothing'' at the California did not draw a large house.

The Cameo Theatre drew a fairly full house with ''The Naked Truth.''

''All Aboard,'' as shown at the Golden Gate was fairly popular, but the crowds going mostly for the acts of vauleville. ''The Wolves of The Night'' and the comedy ''Shoosh,'' drew a number to the Union Square and the acts also were enjoyed. "Breed of The Sea," was fairly popular at the Pantages, the acts being the drawing card.

"Across The Pacific," drew a great number to Nat Holt's residential house, The Wigwam Theatre, the crowds also enjoying the musical comedy, "Oh Daddy." "Orchids and Ermine" was fairly popular at the Residential theatre, The Coliseum Theatre, but "The Music Master,' was an exceptionally good draw.

St. Louis

IT was a fair week for first runs, the period ending on June 3, and in some of the neighboring houses of St. Louis there was slightly increased business, so that on the whole general conditions were not so bad.

Fundamentally the amusement market is but fair to middling. None of the motion picture houses can look to record-breaking business and the same is true of other lines of endeavor.

At the Ambassador Elinor Glyn's "Ritzy" was the screen attraction and aided by a special stage revue did fair business.

Loew's State offered "Lovers" on the screen and three good units on its stage. This house got its share of the business for the week.

Out at the Missouri "Long Pants" with Harry Langdon as the star was on the screen, while Brooke Johns and his organization on the stage had another very good musical offering. It is reported that Johns has boosted receipts at the theatre some 35 per cent since his arrival.

The Grand Central enjoyed a fair week with "Held by the Law" on the screen. The St. Louis Theatre's receipts were up to standard. The featured screen attraction was "Vanity;" Theodore Roberts in person was the headliner on the vaudeville end of the program.

Seattle

FOR the second time in as many weeks Manager Al Raleigh's Coliseum Theatre stood head and shoulders above other first run houses in business for the last seven days. The attraction was the second week's run of "Rookies" which packed the house and came within a few hundred dollars of duplicating the first week's gross. This was the fourth picture to play a full two weeks in the last five years, and could have broken a house record by a third week's run if previous bookings had not interfered.

"Long Pants" at the United Artists Theatre was a good attraction, but failed to please audiences as much as Langdon's previous efforts have. It did a good business for a week, but could not be called a successful engagement for this house.

At John Hamrick's Blue Mouse," "The Better 'Ole" and Vitaphone finished a five-week run to very pleasing business. The picture held up decidedly well for its 175 performances.

The Fifth Avenue Theatre offered its patrons "Children of Divorce" which came far from being a box office success. The Douglas Teenie Weenies, a group of 20 youngsters from a local dancing academy, were featured on the stage to help put over a weak Fanchon and Marco stage revue. It was "Ollie" Wallace's farewell week as orchestra director. Altogether a poor program and poor gross.

At the Columbia Theatre "The Popular Sin" did a very pleasing business, and audience reports were quite favorable toward the picture. The house consistently has a very pleasing cross, part of which is due to Francesco Longo's Columbia All-Artist Orchestra, which can always be depended upon for a good program.

At the Embassy there was "The Heart of Salome," at the Strand "The Red Kimono" in its second week, and at the Pantages "Play Safe," all of which did an average good business. The Winter Garden has gone to a second run policy, with two changes weekly, which relieves the local first run situation.

Weather: Fair. Spring is late in arriving, and general business conditions are slightly off as a result.

Milwaukee

THE added week end holiday, Memorial Day, this week brought box office receipts of Milwaukee theatres slightly above the average. The threatening weather on Monday kept Milwaukeeans in the city, and the tempting programs at the theatres brought them down town.

"The Better 'Ole" at the Wisconsin kept that theatre well filled with gleeful patrons all through the week. "Frisco Sally Levy" at the Merrill and "Ritzy" at the Strand drew excellent business. "Beware of Widows" at the Alhambra was very well attended. "Down to the Sea in Ships" made its second appearance at the Garden and again found appreciative audiences.

..Neighborhood theatres also had a very satisfactory week. "Easy Pickings" at the Tower and Modjeska theatres drew very well. "The Sea Tiger" brought crowds to the Milwaukee, and "Altars of Desire" proved an attraction at the Colonial. "Casey at the Bat" entertained the patrons of the Venetian.

Baltimore

PATRONAGE at the moving-picture theatres in Baltimore continued fairly well during the week beginning Monday, May 30. All houses did a fine business on Decoration Day and then business dropped to normal.

Topping the week was "Mr. Wu," starring Lon Chaney, at Loew's Valencia for a second week and "Casey at the Bat," starring Wallace Beery, at Loew's Century. A new mammoth cooling plant is now used for both houses, upon which stress is being laid in advertisements.

"Rough House Rosie," starring Clara Bow, did a good night business throughout the week at the Rivoli and it was fair in the afternoons. "Tracked By the Police," starring Rin-Tin-Tin, went over good at Warner's Metropolitan.

At the New Theatre "The Telephone Girl," starring Madge Bellamy did pretty good and the two family vaudeville houses the Garden and Keith's Hippodrome did business considered a little better than fair.

Portland, Ore.

ALTHOUGH favorable show weather prevailed throughout the week, business seemed to be off generally. The Broadway was the only theatre that did not suffer to some extent. Fanchon & Marco's "The Follies" idea was largely responsible for their fine business. It was widely advertised as an outstanding production, and lived up to this report. "Frisco Sally Levy" was the film attraction, and was enjoyed, although not considered anything unusual.

"The Love of Sunya" at the Columbia opened to brisk business, and held up sufficiently well during the week to warrant holding it over for another week. Reports from patrons indicate that they were much impressed with Gloria's work.

The Blue Mouse enjoyed satisfactory business on the fourth week of "The Better 'Ole" and Vitaphone. It is being held for a fifth.

"McFadden's Flats" played three days at the Peoples, followed by "Venus of Venice" for the balance of the week. Both second run. Neither picture did more than average business, although comments on both were favorable.

"Wedding Bills" at the Rivoli drew a fair amount of trade.

"See You In Jail" at the Liberty drew poorly.

"Ben Hur" played a three-day return at the Auditorium and got by nicely.

It is generally thought that the closing of one of the large banks in Portland recently has slowed up the spending of money. Although the bank was entirely solvent all business in the town has felt the reaction.

Detroit

ALES conditions showed a decided improvement of activities among the picture houses along theatre circle. Fair weather helped business along and a general pick up was noticeable.

Reginald Denny's speedway romance, "Fast and Furious," registered exceptionally well at the Capitol. With a stage attraction headlining Herbert Rawlinson, this attraction went over the top in great shape.

At the Michigan, an elaborate Publix unit and Billie Dove in "The Tender Hour," claimed an excellent attendance, the combination provig fine for this type of theatre.

"Lost at the Front," with Charlie Murray and George Sidney, drew a fair portion of fans during its second week on the Madison bill.

Scotch lads and lassies cavorted on the Adams silver sheet in "Annie Laurie," featuring Lillian Gish with Norman Kerry. More money was spent at the ticket office than during the previous week.

The State presented "Bitter Apples," starring Monte Blue, and a bang-up stage show. Good houses summed up the entertainment situation here and no let down was evidenced during any of the performances.

Albany

THE Lindbergh pictures sent attendance records skyrocketing in Albany during the last four days of last week, and brought hundreds of dollars to the exhibitors. All in all, the week from the standpoint of attendance, proved very satisfactory. At the Leland, "The Taxi Dancer" ran to consistent business throughout the entire week, the theatre being well filled each night. The Clinton Square used two features during the week, "Remember" and "Cheaters," and played to some exceptionally good business. The Mark Strand did an exceptionally fine business throughout the week with Clara Bow in "Rough House Rosy," coupled with three Vitaphone presentations.

At the Mark Ritz, "Cradle Snatchers" any record in the way of attendance. Business continued good at all of the theatres in Troy during the week.

Ottawa

OTTAWA, ONTARIO, theatres enjoyed a land-office business during the week of May 30. There was one Canadian and one United States holiday to help make a difference; counter-attractions were inconsequential, and the weather favored theatre-going.

Manager Ray Tubman of the Regent found that "The Night of Love" was pleasing and both matinee and night business was well above average. By way of variety, Manager J. M. Franklin of B. F. Keith's presented "The Broncho Twister" with Tom Mix and the box office told a good story, particularly with male and juvenile patronage.

"Broadway Nights" made an excellent hit at the Centre Theatre, while the Imperial Theatre had its best week in a long time with "Demi-Bride," starring Norma Shearer.

James Moxley divided the week at the Francais with three features, "Twinkletoes," "Why Girls Go Back Home" and "War Paint." The first named drew very nicely with the second doing fair business and the third attracting the younger patrons particularly.

"Held by the Law" at the Laurier Theatre, Hull, Quebec, did better than some recent pictures here and "The Music Master" enjoyed only steady attention.

Oklahoma City

BUSINESS was good with the theatres this week, especially over the week-end, which included the holiday of Memorial Day. The weather was pleasant most of the time and the theatres benefited by it.

The Criterion had a splendid business with "Slide, Kelly, Slide" all week. The Empress wasn't so fortunate in its picture, but had good business with "Lost at the Front." The "Music Master" at the Liberty Theatre the first part of the week received good notices and drew fair-sized audiences. "Capital Punishment," which is being roadshowed finished the week at the Capitol to unusually fine business, and was kept over for Saturday, which is supposed to start the next week's program. At the Capitol "Tracked by the Police" kept business just about up to average the first part of the week. "Captain Salvation," the picture that ended up the week, would seem to deserve a longer run than the three days given it. It was well received.

Central Pennsylvania

FOR once rain was welcomed by the picture theatres of Harrisburg, on a Saturday, June 4, the "big" business day of the week. This was because it kept lots of persons from attending the Ringling Brothers-Barnum circus, which showed there that day, and sent them to the movies instead.

At Lowe's Regent the management put on a "Jazz Week" program of ten units, featured by Marion Davies in "Tillie the Toiler," and the box office receipts were above normal. The same may be said of the business done at the Colonial and the Victoria.

At the latter theatre an added stage attraction was put on for the first time. The film feature was "Senorita." At the Colonial the principal film attraction was Milton Sills in "The Sea Tiger," which went over big.

"The Midnight Watch" was the film offering at the State in the last half of the week, and it scored popular approval. The Russell successfully presented Rod La Rocque in "Bachelor Brides," and the Grand did good business with "Kid Boots," featuring Eddie Cantor.

Tampa

ANOTHER week of "good" business for the Tampa houses, with the exception of one night, Wednesday, which was pretty much "off" in all houses.

John Ingram and his "New Idea Orchestra" divided the honors with the pictures as the feature attraction at the Tampa this week. "A Million Bid" was the feature picture the first half of the week and "Venus of Venice" the last half, the combined attractions pulling "very good."

The Strand enjoyed good business for the week, the Wednesday matinee coming up better than usual to help out for the evening slump. They had "Wedding Bills," "The Brute," and "The Prince of Tempters" as their feature attractions and all went over good.

"Silver Comes Thru" pulled three good days' business for the Franklin, with "Rich Men's Sons" and "Yours to Command" doing well for two days each. Business satisfactory in spite of the hottest week of the summer.

Salt Lake City

WEATHER conditions cleared up considerably in Salt Lake City during the past week with downtown theatre business also on the improve.

The Paramount Empress Theatre reports an exceptionally big week during the showing of "Senorita," with a special stage presentation. "Rookies" has had an unusual amount of exploitation this past week and has crowded the Victory. "The Monkey Talks" is said to have been received very favorably at the Pantages Theatre, according to Manager Grant Pemberton. The double feature offering at the American has brought capacity business; the pictures being "McFadden's Flats" and "Down the Stretch." A great deal of exploitation was used this week in connection with the feature picture at the Gem, "Bigger Than Barnum's"—and very good business has been enjoyed all week. "The Princess of Broadway" topped the vaudeville bill at the Orpheum Theatre as a first run. Charles Ray and May McAvoy in "The Fire Brigade," went over good as a second run at the Kimena.

Shirley Dorman, "Find," Signed by Paramount

The latest screen find of Hollywood to be signed up by a movie company is Shirley Dorman, a brunette who hails from Richland, Georgia, who has been placed under a long term contract by Paramount. Miss Dorman, a stenographer, was seen in the Studio Club in Hollywood by Lois Weber, who assigned her a bit in "The Sensation Seekers." She won her contract with Paramount because of her role in "Fireman, Save My Child!"

Fox Starts "Two Girls Wanted" With Gaynor

Fox Films has started production on "Two Girls Wanted," the successful stage play by Gladys Unger, which John Golden produced. The featured player will be Janet Gaynor, and this will be her second Golden play, her first being "Seventh Heaven." Glenn Tryon has the leading male role, and Earle Fox has a supporting character part. Marie Mosquini, Joseph Cawthorn and Doris Lloyd are in the cast. Alfred E. Green will direct "Two Girls Wanted" from a scenario by Seton I. Miller. Jack Boland is assistant director and George Schneidermann will take care of the cameras.

No Preacher in "Sadie Thompson," Says Schenck

Declaring that "there will no preacher in the cast of characters in Gloria Swanson's next film, 'Sadie Thompson,'" Joseph M. Schenck, president of United Artists, releases the information that Miss Swanson does not desire to have any minister or missionary of any church in the picturization of the W. Somerset Maugham story, and is particularly anxious of having this point understood. Raoul Walsh is making rapid progress with the script for the forthcoming picture, and expects to place it in production before the end of June.

Fitzmaurice Story Put Into Work by First National

The first of George Fitzmaurice's specials for the new season has been placed into active work by First National, who sent the director, his production staff and several members of the cast, Sunday, June 4, for Monterey, Cal., the location of the story of "The Rose of Monterey," where the exteriors will be shot. Gilbert Roland has been signed for the featured masculine rôle in the picture; Mary Astor has been assigned the feminine lead. Montagu Love and Gustav von Seyffertitz are other players engaged for important rôles.

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., in Corinne Griffith Film

Corinne Griffith has signed Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., as her leading man in "The Garden of Eden," her first independent production for release through United Artists. Production on the picture began last Friday, June 3, with Andres de Segurola, former baritone of the Metropolitan Opera House, in the rôle of the heavy. Emily Fitzroy, whose name was previously announced as one of those making up the supporting cast, will not appear in the Griffith film.

Gribbon and Pitts in "U's" Buck Privates

Eddie Gribbon and Zasu Pitts have been signed by Universal to play in "Buck Privates," the Jewel production which was started this week under the direction of Mel Brown.

Selecting a Slogan to Sell Summer Comfort

Catch-line Important Feature of Newspaper and Display Advertising in Hot-weather Period

WITH summer just over the threshold of the theatrical season now drawing to a close, there is now in process of preparation the campaign ideas upon which picture theatres will make their bid for patronage during what formerly was the "dull season," now somewhat relegated to the past, thanks to the marvelous strides made in cooling systems.

The cool theatre has come to be an attraction holding a lure to a public that swelters during "dog days." Indeed the picture theatre equipped with an efficient cooling system has in that one feature alone a box office attraction no less potent than the show itself, during humid July and August days at least.

Looking toward the summer advertising campaign presents first the question of a slogan, a catch-line selling the "cool idea" and therefore a prominent feature of newspaper ads, poster billing and frontal advertising.

Possibly it will be helpful at this time to list some of the "cool" slogans which leading theatres of various types featured last season, and with that idea in mind we refer back to an article published in the Theatre Management section of Motion Picture News of July 31, 1926. The slogans quoted in that article were selected from advertising of theatres all over the country, and covered both catch-lines for the theatres having modern cooling systems, as well as those in which every effort was made to provide a comfortable playhouse for picturegoers, but which were without special equipment of this kind.

Of course it makes a difference whether the theatre is actually "20 degrees cooler inside." For that is a statement of fact, and unless the theatre man can actually deliver the goods he promises in such a declaration, there is likely to be more harm than good done by advertising in that vein.

Theatres equipped with cooling systems can sell facts—with the means of manufacturing their own weather they can promise cool atmosphere to every patron, regardless of the outside weather, and among the catch-lines featured by theatres thus equipped, the following were used last season:

"Atlanta's Refrigerating Station" (Howard theatre, Atlanta, Ga.; "Cool as a Mountain Top—The Ice Plant Does It" (Rialto theatre, Des Moines); "It's Always Cool" (Eastman theatre, Rochester); "Where Dallas Keeps Cool" (Palace theatre, Dallas); "Entertainment on Ice" (Loew's Temple theatre, Birmingham); "Come and Keep Cool at America's Coolest Theatre" (Capitol theatre, Chicago); "Largest Theatre Cooling Plant in the World" (Capitol theatre, New York); "We Now Manufacture Our Own Weather." Several others used by one or more theatres last year are: "Coolest Spot in Town—Never Over 70," "Where Cold Breezes Blow," "Where Northern Breezes Blow," "Ever Notice How Cool It Is at the . . . ?", "No Draughts—No Chills—But Cool."

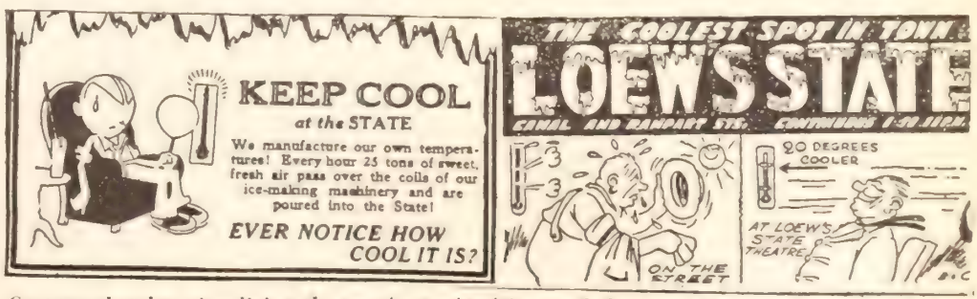
The Publix theatres equipped with refrigeration plants all used an outside banner, usually suspended under the marquee and printed in script, light blue on a white ground, with the line "Cooled by Refrigeration" displayed. Another method used by the Publix houses was the display of the line "The Refrigerated" before the theatre name slug in all newspaper ads.

Catch-lines applicable in cases where there is no cooling plant but where every effort is made to keep the house comfortable and where light, cool draperies, seat covers, etc., contribute a note of relief for those seeking escape from the heat, included the following:

"Delightfully Cool and Comfortable," "Always Cool and Comfortable," "The Cool Spot," "Cool Off at the Strand," "As Cool as a Shady Dell," "The Strand—Where It's Cool."

Part of Name Slug

The catch-lines quoted above were, for the most part, made an integral part of the stock name slug. They were used in conjunction with frosted, wind-streaked, or ice-capped lettering spelling out the name of the theatre. Several theatres used special borders, mostly ben day effects, with the slogan imposed in solid black.



Selling the cool feature of theatres which have equipment for manufacturing weather has become one of the most important phases of the advertising campaign during summer. It puts upon the advertising man the obligation of featuring two points of appeal—the show and the comfortable atmosphere of the scientifically cooled theatre.

The box office possibilities of this feature of modern showmanship recently caused one of the companies manufacturing a cooling system to issue a campaign book, containing ad layouts, suggestions for stunt exploitation, and suggested catch-lines to be used by theatres equipped with their apparatus.

The organization is the Typhoon Fan Company. The campaign book illustrates a range of stock cuts, which are supplied by the company to their clients.

In addition to the name slugs, carrying a catch-line on the cool feature, several theatres last season conducted extensive campaigns selling their cooling plants as an attraction. A series of ads prepared by the Publix Theatre advertising department in co-operation with Hanff-Metzger, Inc., covered five insertions, in which small cartoons illustrated the text, dealing in simple form with the cooling plant installations at theatres in this circuit.

Humorous cartoons, occupying a small box prominently placed in the newspaper displays, were also popular in several parts of the country. These were used in place of catch-lines, and included a few lines of type telling facts about the cooling plants.

Cartoon sketches visualizing the comforts of refrigerated theatres in summer carry conviction and may be used to brighten the display, as shown by the samples above of Loew's State, New Orleans, and the State in Detroit

Mothers Honored at Special Saturday Matinee

Manager E. E. Whitaker issued a special invitation to mothers at the Saturday morning matinee when "One Increasing Purpose" was the feature film attraction at the Publix Imperial Theatre, Charlotte, N. C.

All mothers were admitted free with their children and, throughout a tie-up with one of the local florists, every mother was presented with a carnation.

During the run of the picture, a large picture of "The Whistler's Mother," made by the theatre artist, was used on the stage. The house was darkened with a soft spot on the organist while she played "Mother Machree."

Local Music Club Supplies Singer for Prologue

A clever exploitation idea executed by Manager E. R. Rogers of the Tivoli theatre in Chattanooga, Tenn., attracted wide interest to the showings at that house of "Cabaret." The tie-up directly interested a local music club, which supplied a singer each afternoon to appear in conjunction with a prologue for the picture.

A cycle of songs entitled "Songs of the Nation" were presented each day.

Credit for the attractive window display featuring "Outlaws of Red River" (Fox) shown above goes to Charlie Cohen, manager of the Fox Washington theatre in Detroit. A poster cut-out was the feature of the display, which included cowboy paraphernalia and special ads offered by the store in which the outfit was displayed

Fire Prevention Drive Launched By Theatre Stirs City

A FIRE prevention drive, tying up with the presentation of "The Fire Brigade" at the Colonial theatre, received the hearty support of officials and accomplished important civic benefits in Portsmouth, New Hampshire. The campaign was started in advance of the showing of "The Fire Brigade" at the Colonial, and under the sponsorship of the mayor and fire chief, the event assumed great significance, particularly since the Portsmouth section has been the scene of many destructive forest fires within recent times.

The idea was first presented to the mayor, who agreed to back the plan and appointed the manager of the theatre to stage it with the assistance of the city machinery which was placed at his disposal. The drive was for the purpose of "Preservation of Property Against Fire Loss."

Rally at Market Square

A rally held at Market Square, directly in front of the North Church, an historic building which is adjacent to the Colonial Theatre. The local newspaper editor agreed to have the manager's speech taken down and feature it as a valuable household code for the preservation of property against fire. This speech consisted of rules to be observed in preventing fire. The management, in addition to this co-operation on the part of city officials, had the assistance of the Navy Department, through an invitation from the mayor to have the Portsmouth Navy Yard participate in the review of a parade of firemen and equipment. The parade was covered by Pathe News, and fire departments of surrounding towns joined the Portsmouth fire-fighters in the line of march throughout the northern city.

The Commandant of the Navy Yard responded to the invitation by offering the services of the Navy Yard Band and Fire Pumping Engine for the parade.

The rally consisted of a parade which started from the Central Fire Station marching through the important streets and passed the reveiwing stand which was erected in the heart of the city.

Florida Presentation Shows Evolution of the Dance

A stage presentation, based on the evolution of the dance, proved a popular hit in St. Petersburg, Fla., when it was offered at the Florida theatre there. The presentation was devised by Manager Charles N. Amos of the Florida.

The dance offering was divided into three different periods; on Monday and Tuesdays, "The Classical Age" was presented; on Wednesday and Thursday, "The Colonial Period," and on Friday and Saturday, "Modern and Character Dances." By dividing it in this manner, a complete change of program was made with each change of picture and at the same time created interest in the patrons that made them want to come and see the next unit.

Over 100 girls took part in the dancing ceremonies during the week. The girls were from the best families, furnished their own costumes, and did not receive any salary; the only cost to the theatre being a dancing teacher's salary and a small production expense.

Mutual Benefits from "Cat and Canary" Tie-up

Both parties to a tie-up in connection with the showing of "The Cat and the Canary" in Montreal profited through arrangements between the Herald, daily newspaper, and His Majesty's Theatre, where the picture played. The tie-up featured a contest in which the management of the theatre offered tickets as prizes for an essay in which readers of the Herald set forth their answers to the question "What feature of the Herald do you like best and why?" The stunt proved very popular and response in the form of essays was heavy.

The awards consisted of a first prize of a box for six; a second, a box for four; third, four seats; fourth, two seats; and twenty single seats. These tickets were all for the Friday night performance.

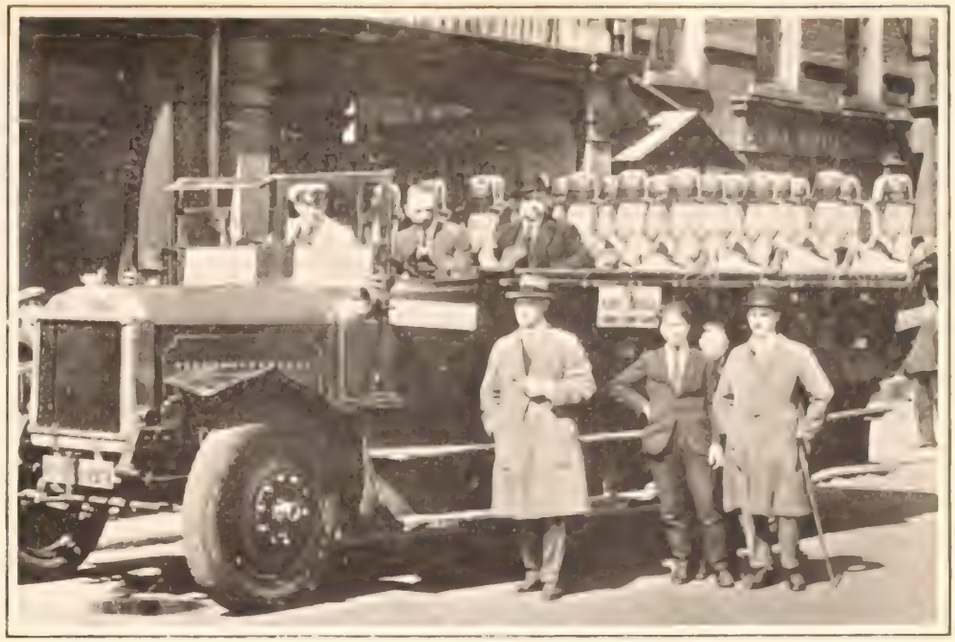
"Mr. Wu" Carried About Waco in Sedan Chair

Manager J. P. Harrison built a sedan chair to exploit Lon Chaney in "Mr. Wu" when that film played at the Hippodrome Theatre, Waco, Tex.

The chair was made of scrap beaver board. A figure to represent Mr. Wu was placed in the chair; the head being made of plaster of paris. A moustache was added and the figure was dressed in a black robe and a black Chinese hat.



This chair was carried all over the business district by two men, and they would stop at different places long enough to let the people see it and read the printing, which gave the title of picture, star, and name of theatre.

Grand Rapids Police Guard "Michael Strogoff" Film

Announcement that the print of "Michael Strogoff" to be used at the Temple theatre in Grand Rapids, Mich., was the most valuable piece of celluloid in the world, because the negative had been returned to France, scored as an exploitation stunt for the picture and theatre recently in that city. The print was taken in charge by the police department, through an arrangement made by the management of the theatre and a Universal exploiteer, and was escorted to the theatre by motorcycle cops. Though familiar through wide use in the past, the stunt worked well in the case of "Strogoff" in Grand Rapids.

Sold "McFadden's Flats" in Classified Columns

Advertisements in the classified ad columns of the Pueblo, Colo., papers were an effective feature of an exploitation campaign for "McFadden's Flats" at the Colorado theatre in that city. Manager C. Clare Woods offered "McFadden's Flats" for sale in these small ads, with information that further details could be obtained by calling a certain telephone number, the number of the theatre being given. The information about the picture was given to callers by the operator at the Colorado.

Exploits Lindbergh News Views in Tie-Up With Local Event

THE combination of a big news feature which showed scenes of Captain Lindbergh's take-off on his flight to Paris and a local event involving the arrival of Army bombing planes participating in the recent war maneuvers in Texas, supplied the material for a striking exploitation campaign for the ever popular but comparatively little advertised news reels in Augusta, Ga., recently.

The demonstration of clever exploitation for the news reel, which proved a profitable enterprise for the theatre, was given by Frank Miller, City Manager of the Publix theatres in Augusta.

Early Friday morning, May 29th, fourteen of the government bombers that had taken part in the war maneuvers in Texas, arrived in the City of Augusta. One of these aeroplanes was ordered to carry a gift from the City of Augusta to Mrs. Lindbergh, mother of the famous pilot.

Co-incident with the arrival of these giant planes in Augusta, and the current news about the successful flight of Captain Lindbergh, one can readily appreciate the local interest in Augusta. In addition to the fact that these exploits represented the major news item on the front page of every newspaper, the officer and pilots, who brought the planes from Texas, were extensively entertained.

Miller on Friday and Saturday was featuring his first showing of the new reel, picturing the start of Lindbergh's flight from New York. He issued a special invitation to the fourteen pilots from Texas to be his guests to see Lindbergh's take-off, and in addition, the news reel shots of the scenes of their own maneuvers in Texas.

Thus, the news reel and Mr. Miller's enterprises were tied in with every one of the front page stories above referred to, and he attributes the successful business which he enjoyed the two days in question, not to either of the feature films, but to his news tie-up with the aviators of Texas and the news reel featuring Lindbergh.

The start of a bicycle race between boys of Albany and Cornwallis, Ore., staged in the latter town as exploitation for the showing of "Michael Strogoff" (Universal) at the Whiteside theatre there. Each entrant wore on his back a banner on which was lettered the legend "Michael Strogoff—Secret Courier"

Code for Lovers Novelty Herald for "Lovers"

Wide circulation of little pamphlets with instructions for lovers, proved an effective herald for the showing of "Lovers" at the Tampa theatre, Tampa, Fla. The little booklet, containing several "don'ts" such as "Don't expect many good times and expensive presents when he is trying to save for a home," was gotten up by Assistant Manager Jack L. Hobby of the Tampa.

"The Crimson Flash"

(Patheserial-Pathe—Ten Chapters)

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

WHO stole the ruby? Who is "The Ghost"? Who is Operative K-17? After viewing the first three chapters we are unable to state who's who and, for that reason primarily, it is our opinion that those in your audience who hanker for this type of production will simply "eat-up" Pathe's newest continued-next-week opus. We thought we knew our serials, having seen part or all of most of them since "The Perils of Pauline," but this one will have us on the anxious seat until some one at the producer's office relieves the tension by 'fessing up; it might be they are no better informed than ourselves.

"The Crimson Flash" involves the theft of an internationally famed ruby and, to add to the mystery and suspense, some other mean person has purloined a valuable antique vase. So, with "The Ghost" and Operative K-17, the thrill-providers have more than enough material to work with in the unfolding of the twenty reels which constitute the footage of this release.

No time is lost in getting the story under way; the principals are introduced (all more or less familiar to the fans) and the action starts with the theft of the ruby and the battle between the good and evil forces for its recovery. A man is killed in the first chapter by a shot from a gun in the hand of an unknown, the second episode has for its highlight a hand-to-hand tussle and the third stanza provides an anti-climax when the "butler" and "maid" in the mansion housing the heroine are arrested for something or other. A good mystery story, excellent types, splendid production and action, action, action. That's all there is, there couldn't be any more.

George Arthur Grey wrote the story, Paul Fairfax Fuller prepared the scenario and Arch Heath directed. Cullen Landis and Eugenia Gilbert play the leads and other principals in the cast include Thomas Holding, J. Barney Sherry, Walter Lewis, Ivan Linow, Mary Gardner, Tony Hughes, Gus De Weil, Ed Roseman and Howard Carey. We hope next week's instalment won't be late.

"A Mid-Summer Night's Dream"

(Fox Imperial Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

EDDIE CLAYTON proves to be a real go-getter when it comes to the matter of transporting a troupe of bathing beauties to boost business at a theatre that is on the verge of bankruptcy. He gets them there alright, but has many adventures on the way—broken down taxis, deep mud and motorcycle cops not making things any easier. This one has a wide conglomeration of slapstick and some pretty good gags, and ought to please the fans. Mark Sandrich directed, and in the cast are: Eddie Clayton, Fred Spencer, Henry Armetta, W. T. McCulley, Sally Phipps, Virginia Whiting, Dorothy Dix, Betty Evans, Marcella Arnold and Lucille Miller.

"Crimson Colors"

(Collegians-Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

THE effervescent spirits of youth are much in evidence in this number of the second series of "The Collegians," which, as the title implies, deal with the social, and athletic life of the pupils at a co-ed school. One very pleasant reaction comes from the fact that the "heavy" of the story is not the traditional bad man but rather a spoiled boy who admits his guilt and asks forgiveness of the hero at the close of the tale; that, to our mind, is one of the series' best points.

One need not go into detail as regards the plot; suffice it to say that they cut up the usual antics and didoes popularly ascribed to college students by the novelists. In the cast are George Lewis, Churchill Ross, Dorothy Gulliver, Hayden Stevenson and Eddie Phillips. Nat Ross directed under supervision of Carl Laemmle, Jr

"Fluttering Hearts"

(Roach-Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

JUST why the Charley Chase comedies are not enlarged to feature length is hard to understand. He has a definite personality as unlike that of those comedians now seen in multiple reel productions as night and day and yet of the same appeal that resulted in their promotion. He has charm, been in the business long enough to know what it's all about, and puts his gags over in grand style. We have seen quite a number of comedies in which he has been featured or starred and it is our opinion that he hasn't failed to click with any of them.

The current number is no exception. Charley, with his director and gag men, has turned out a production that made the critics and reviewers laugh heartily throughout the unreeling though the film was shown "cold" in a projection room, which is an accomplishment. What matters the story except to say that the business in the first reel is transacted in a department store to which the heroine has dragged Charley and a policeman to aid her in procuring some bargains; to which the rest of the million or so hunters object. In the latter portion of the footage Charley plays around with a dummy lady in a cabaret as part of a plan to recover the "letters." He recovers them sooner than your patrons will, from excessive laughter.

Martha Sleeper, Oliver Hardy, William Burress and Eugene Pallette make up the supporting cast; James Parrott is the very capable director.

"Tie That Bull"

(Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

BOBBY VERNON'S latest effort will fill your comedy needs quite fully as both story and its picture telling by the cast are up to standard; and Bobby Vernon is a popular draw. The star plays the role of a cub reporter who is assigned to "cover" the police station. In the attempt to impress his sweetheart with his courage and bravery he strives single-handed to arrest and bring to jail a notorious bad man. He succeeds through an accident, but the b. m. escapes and Bobby's sweetheart calls on him to apprehend the villain once more. Through another series of flukes Bobby wins out a second time and a third time when, once more behind bars, the bad man again attains freedom. Of course, Bobby wins her.

The supporting cast includes Frances Lee, Bill Blaisdell and Cliff Lancaster. Robert Kerr directed.

"Died in the Wool"

(Fables-Pathe—One Reel)

PAUL TERRY uncovers a new method of sheep-rustling in the current issue of Aesop's Fables which consists of diverting the attention of the guardian by soft music and the spritely, nymph-like dancing of a woodland elf, or perhaps it was a mouse made-up for the role. The plot succeeded, but the black sheep proved he was "white" by effecting the rescue of the lambs and ewes, and peace once more reigned in the valley. —HAROLD FLAVIN.

"Samson at Calford"

(Collegians-Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

ANOTHER of the "Collegians" series which should prove very acceptable in the comedy spot on your program. In this number the students put on a burlesque version of "Samson and Delilah" and their impersonation of the various roles should provide your audience with a goodly quota of laughs. The producers have, wisely, kept intact the cast which appears in the series; wisely, because seeing the same players in the various issues of the series, is bound to build a personal fan interest.

George Lewis is starred and the supporting cast numbers Churchill Ross, Dorothy Gulliver, Hayden Stevenson and Eddie Phillips. Directed by Nat Ross under supervision of Carl Laemmle, Jr.

"Felix the Cat Ducks His Duty"

(Educational—One Reel)

ANOTHER of the highly humorous issues of the "Felix" series with a number of new bits of business and the always amusing facial expressions of the cartoon characters. This one treats of war—declared by the mice against their ancient enemies, the cats. Felix, one of the prime movers in the conflict develops "cold feet" while at the front and deserts. He falls in love with a fair maiden who, after marriage, develops shrewish tendencies of such a violent nature that friend Felix decides that while "War is hell," an unkind wife is an even more hellish proposition, so back to the field of valor he wends his way and likes it, though he arrives in the midst of a barrage projected by both armies.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"Her Husky Hero"

(Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

THIS proves rather funny despite the fact that it is built on a trite theme—the hen-pecked husband whose inlaws drop in on him for a long visit. Of course, brother Bill has to annoy poor old hen-peck with his funny stories and stunts and wife's little brother proves a sly pest. Day by day in every way hen-peck gets "madder and madder" until he emulates the worm who finally turned .

Johnny Arthur is starred, and the supporting cast includes Kathryn McGuire, Wallace Lupino, Al Thompson and Fay Holderness. Norman Taurog directed.

"Venders of the World"

(Fox Variety—One Reel)

THAT there are many different methods of selling goods is shown in this issue of Fox Variety—open air markets of the Montmartre, the flower marts of Vienna and the bird market of Paris. Then, a couple of attractive umbrella menders—diminutive but well versed in their trade. The reel ends with the aristocratic atmosphere of a Fifth avenue pearl shop. It's a good number.—E. G. JOHNSTON.

"Hard Cider"

(Fables-Pathe—One Reel)

HARD Cider, how it is "made" and "consumed" is the subject dealt with in this week's contribution from the studios of Paul Terry. It is funnier than the average incorporating a better story and more gags than are usually meted out in one issue. It should furnish many a giggle.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

The Heart of Salome

Melodrama Has Its Moments

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

SALOME emerges here in modern guise to obey the same impulse which characterized the daughter of Herod. In this melodrama she is the the confidante of a super-crook, who uses her for his nefarious trade. While she engages in her stealthy occupation she encounters romance in the form of a young American who is ignorant of her profession. The romantic scenes balance the melodramatic action and give it contrast, though it skips about quite a bit in establishing its sequences.

The plot pivots on the girl being scorned when the attracted youth discovers her dual character. Which is the moment for her to ask the scheming blackmailer to exterminate him. Hence the title.

The action develops quite a vigorous climax—one in which a duel is the dominant feature. It all spells a fairly entertaining hour—and clicks off sufficient action and suspense. The faults (none of them of any real consequence), are found in the unrealistic development of the story and the inability of the central figures to appear convincing.

The role is too much for Alma Rubens insofar as touching upon shading of characterization. A complex figure according to all the "dope," she makes it rather obvious. The film is satisfactorily mounted and is calculated to interest the majority of picturegoers.

The Cast: Alma Rubens, Holmes Herbert, Walter Pidgeon, Robert Agnew, Barry Norton, Virginia Madison, Walter Dugan. Director, Victor Schertzinger.

THEME: Romantic melodrama of girl who escapes crook's dominion and finds romance and peace with American youth.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The meeting of hero and heroine. The effort to follow commands of villain and be fair with youth. Scene of heroine committing her last crime. The moment when she becomes like Salome.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Tease the title. Bill as melodrama of a girl crook's regeneration, etc.

DRAWING POWER: Suitable for average trade everywhere. Title has drawing possibilities.

Produced and distributed by Fox.
Length, six reels. Released, June, 1927.

Simple Sis

Hokum Story: Okay for the Small Houses

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

OUT and out hokum but it will satisfy the sentimental masses especially the poor class as the story is one they can appreciate through experiencing somewhat the same humdrum existence as led by our heroine. It is not a cheerful story but the two principal characters inject sufficient comedy, though of a pathetic type, to offset the rather gloomy tale unfolded; a poor "woiking" girl without either physical or mental attraction for the opposite sex strives to secure a husband. A heart of gold but a rough exterior.

The producers evidently intended this as a comedy as indicated in their selection of players but, though there are a number of scenes which call forth laughter, the story in the main is depressing, the worst of it being that girls of the type of "Simple Sis" are not by any means restricted to moving pictures nor is their number small. The story missed in that what was intended as pure farce failed because of the overstressing of the tear-jerking part of the theme. Many of the comedy gags will go flat because of the undercurrent sympathy awakened in the spectator for the sorry plight of the hero and the heroine; only real burlesque telling this story could eliminate the sorrow which will be felt for Sis and her shy boy friend.

Louise Fazenda and Clyde Cook turn in capable performances.

The Cast: Louise Fazenda, Clyde Cook, Myrna Loy, William Demarest, Bill Kent Shaeffer and Cathleen Calhoun. Story by Melville Crosman, scenario by Al Kenyon, directed by Herman C. Raymaker and photography by Frank Kesson.

THEME: Comedy-melodrama. Poor girl longs for romance but, through physical and mental unattractiveness, has a hard time securing a life-partner. Finally meets "him" and, after many trials and tribulations they wed.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Acting of Miss Fazenda and Clyde Cook. The dance-hall and fire scenes. Buddy's performance; the park sequence.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up name of star and male lead in your billing as both are favorably known as comedians.

DRAWING POWER: Okay for small houses.

Produced and distributed by Warner Bros.
Length, six reels. Released June, 1927.

Tillie the Toiler

Amusing Film From Comic Strip

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

EVER since Marion Davies discovered that she possesses a flair for comedy, her pictures have been made with an eye upon their mirth-provoking possibilities. The latest film gives the sprightly star a chance to humanize Russ Westover's gum-chewing stenographer. Once again she demonstrates that she has a natural gift for clowning. She indulges and cavorts around in various monkey-shines though she plays the character in a life-like manner. The study suggests that the star is not far wrong in her approach to the modern temptress of the typewriter.

She doesn't make the figure that of a relentless, merciless little gold-digger. On the contrary the girl is played with modest restraint in keeping with the atmosphere of "big business," which permeates the office.

The piece is chock-full of bright incidents, some of its obvious, but the most of it chugging along in action which spells a surprise or two. Tillie gets her job and finishes by parking her gum under the typewriter and running away with the boss. She makes it plain that she is beautiful but dumb—a quality which never fails in conquering the susceptible sterner sex. It is a fluffy affair, well titled—and directed with an eye upon its comedy possibilities. Moreover, it is well acted.

The Cast: Marion Davies, Matt Moore, Harry Crocker, George Fawcett, George K. Arthur, Estelle Clark, Bert Roach, Gertrude Short, Arthur Hoyt, Claire McDowell. Directed by Hobart Henley.

THEME: Comedy-drama of stenographer who gets what she goes after by simply asserting her personality.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Heroine's incident in capturing her man. The comedy. The subtitles. The easy acting by star and entire company. The gags.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Stress source of story. Play up the star and her gift for comedy expression. Mention Matt Moore and George Fawcett. Make a play for office workers who work as secretaries and stenographers.

DRAWING POWER: Should do good business everywhere. O. K. for any house.

Produced by Cosmopolitan. Distributed by Metro-Goldwyn. Length, seven reels. Released, June, 1927.

Pleasure Before Business

Was Meant for Laughs and Gets 'Em

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THE sudden-riches theme always offers comic possibilities to a good director and a comparatively easy matter it is for the megaphone wielder to mould his sequences with an eye for responsive mirth when he has such a reliable trouper as Max Davidson to bear the brunt of the action and to aid in instilling pleasurable moments in this celluloid business proposition. For one thing the story supplied Mr. Strayer by William Branch was a suitable skeleton on which to build, and the director has hung his laughs where they best glisten among the hurrying events that ensue from the sudden inheritance of a fortune by a Jewish cigar merchant and his resultant lavishness in spending it. The reliable props of wise cracking titles to the pantomime stand steadfast and secure, although all of them are not of the natural and spontaneous kind, and some of them are so obviously manufactured. Of course, there is an Irish element here in Pat O'Malley, a young doctor, who loves the cigar merchant's daughter, but really these two are in the background, most of the attention being centered on Davidson and his sudden wealth. All in all, we think, laughter will be forthcoming from those audiences who view this little comedy-drama, mostly comedy. Columbia has a production that should please the majority.

The Cast: Pat O'Malley, Virginia Browne Faire, Max Davidson, Rosa Rosanova, Lester Bernard, Tom McGuire, Jack Raymond, Henri Menjou, Charles Meakin. Director, Frank Strayer.

THEME: Cigar merchant, in ill health, spends fortune he believes to have been left him by relative but in reality his daughter's dowry. Upon discovering this he bets his remaining dollars on horse race, thereby winning an amount much larger than the dowry.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Now the father is hoodwinked by his family and his spending activities. The horse race and restoration of fortune.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Appeal of Jewish-Irish stories which are ever popular attractions. Arrange tie-ups with cigar, golf and tailor stores. Mention Davidson as one-time member of stage play, "Abie's Irish Rose."

DRAWING POWER: Good.

Produced and distributed by Columbia Pictures. Length, 5,559 feet. Released, April, 1927.

The Tender Hour

Not Much To Be Said For It

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

PLACING a dashing American hero as the pivoting figure of a triangle cannot be considered as anything novel. The time the Yankee youth bobs up in Russia to complicate the marital fling which is being enjoyed by one of those irrespressible Grand Dukes. Almost all of the interest centers around the hero outwitting the titled Russian whose unwilling bride sees to it that her love for the one and her hatred for the other is given full expression.

Ben Lyon, who plays the American, goes Fairbanks and Dix. He flaunts his fists and his arms, though the latter are employed for the safe refuge of the pretty spouse. After much melodramatic goings on—which involves putting it over the Russian—the happy ending is tucked away.

The picture was directed by George Fitzmaurice, who gives considerable attention to reproducing settings the dimensions of which are comparable to the Grand Central Station. All of the expenditures might better have been employed in a more convincing story. This one seems artificial.

It is excellently mounted—and Billie Dove, Montagu Love and Ben Lyon extract everything possible from their respective roles.

The Cast: Billie Dove, Ben Lyon, Montagu Love, Constance Romanoff, Alec B. Francis, Laska Winter, T. Roy Barnes, Buddy Post. Director, George Fitzmaurice.

THEME: Romantic drama of an unhappy marriage — with bride finding real love when her detested husband is outwitted.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The tone and quality of settings. The hero's up-and-at-'em actions in regard to outwitting rival. The appeal of Billie Dove. The climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Bill as romantic drama, stressing beauty of star.

DRAWING POWER: Suitable for average and neighborhood houses.

Produced and distributed by First National Length, seven reels. Released, June, 1927.

Farce Comedy Has Entertaining Moments

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

QUITE a number of amusing situations are worked up in this farce comedy, which should provide an hour's pleasant diversion for your patrons. The story is of the usual type employed in productions of this category—a disregard of probabilities apparent in every sequence but with the acting of the star and supporting cast to offset the obvious inconsistencies in plot structure. The production, as a whole, is the equivalent of the legitimate attractions produced for the tired business man or the flapper and her boy-friend not caring to don the thinking-cap but wanting to be entertained.

The daughter of an almost bankrupt insurance agent poses as the wife of an explorer who is reported as having been killed in Africa; this with the object of meeting the explorer's friend and selling him a big policy in order to help out daddy. But many and amusing are the complications which arise when the girl moves into the explorer's apartment which is situated in the same building as the rooms occupied by the soon-to-be insured. And then, to make matters worse, the "dead" man returns from Africa and goes to his home. Ensues considerable running about, the girl trying to escape the man, he threshing about the rooms man-like, hunting for collar buttons, ties, etc., until our heroine is almost frantic. Of course everything turns out as it should but everyone in the play is considerably worn-out before the denouement.

Acting, direction and photography are very satisfactory.

The Cast: Laura La Plante, Tom Moore, Bryant Washburn, Jocelyn Lee, Arthur Hoyt, Nat Carr and Charles F. Smiles. Directed by Millard Webb.

THEME: Farce-comedy of girl who tries to help daddy in business and succeeds, in addition acquiring a husband.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Acting of star and supporting players. The scenes in the apartment house and the auto chase.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Popular players in cast. Tie-up with insurance companies.

DRAWING POWER: For any but the biggest houses.

Produced and distributed by Universal.
Length, 6,038 feet. Released, May, 1927.

Good As Gold

Another Good Buck Jones Western

SOME day, some big time exhibitor more daring than his neighbors, is going to recognize the refreshing qualities of the Western and offer one as a respite from the usual week in and out sexy run of pictures which are apparently considered a solid diet for the public. That is, some one will if directors like Scott Dunlap continue to improve this type of picture as much as in the past several months. Dunlap's former training on the comedy lots is evident in his knack of being able to always spring something new and interesting in each succeeding picture.

The foregoing brings us to just one criticism of this Buck Jones picture which hits the bull's eye as fair and square as any of its calibre. The very charm of the Western lies in its natural, healthy atmosphere, virility, action and honest-to-goodness backgrounds. Certainly that is granted. Why, then, was it necessary for the feminine lead, Francis Lee, to parade around her room in one scene in negligee when there was, in the opinion of this writer, absolutely no occasion for her doing so? This was incidental to the whole story and obviously shot to display some feminine underwear.

In this one Buck turns highwayman; but only for charitable purposes. In the daytime, he's a well meaning surveyor. He merely robs the payroll of a neighboring mine for the reason that it should have been his by inheritance. Of course, in the end matters are all straightened out. There are some fine shots. The cliff episode is excellently handled in the matter of suspense.

The Cast: Buck Jones, Frances Lee, Charles French, Carl Miller, Adele Watson, Arthur Ludwig, Micky Moore. Directed by Scott Dunlap.

THEME: Western melodrama. Rightful heir to mine finally gains same through series of adventures.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Descent of cliff, scenes in mine shaft, direction and work of cast.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Cut out the old Western ballyhoo for a change and play it up as a real out-of-doors romance of the Grand Canyon.

DRAWING POWER: Why not try lifting Westerns out of their usual channels?

Produced and Distributed by Fox Films.
Length, 4,545 feet. Released, June 12, 1927.

The Whirlwind of Youth

A Tidbit Of Romance—Fairly Well Done

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE is a gentle wisp of a story unfolding here—one which does not tax the imagination, though on the other hand it doesn't waft one away to sleep. The central figure is an adolescent girl who, upon suddenly realizing she is endowed with charm, proceeds to find romance and adventure—and find them in her own way. In order to lead her from the advances of a country swain she is lugged off to Paris where she cultivates the boulevard sophistication.

It is sheer romance most of the way—sprinkled here and there with adventure. Once the heroine meets the youth it is all over but the shouting. To effect a serious tone the boy is painted as a bit of a bounder. Which is the cue to introduce the war as making a man of him. He goes through the crucible and emerges a man, while the girl drives an ambulance. The youngsters are married before the front line trenches call him.

The piece is competently acted for the most part by Lois Moran, who gives to the heroine a grace and charm suggestive of considerable romance, Larry Kent and Donald Keith, though the latter hasn't much opportunity. It is adequately mounted and altogether should pass muster most anywhere.

The Cast: Lois Moran, Donald Keith, Larry Kent, Alice Mills, Vera Voronina, Gareth Hughes, Charles Lane. Director, Rowland V. Lee.

THEME: Romantic drama of an adolescent girl, who finds true romance after irresponsible youth develops character from the war.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The acting by principals. The scene behind the lines. The restrained and natural treatment of scenes. The atmosphere.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Bill Lois Moran as exceptionally appealing, stressing fact that her acting has matured since "Stella Dallas." Mention the war atmosphere. Play up Larry Kent—who is a comer.

DRAWING POWER: Satisfactory for average houses. Should please the romancers.

Produced and distributed by Paramount.
Length, six reels. Released, June, 1927.

Regional News from Correspondents

Atlanta

COVERING a period of three days, the sales convention of Arthur C. Bromberg Attractions, held in the home offices in Atlanta, came to a close Wednesday afternoon, immediately following which the branch managers and salesmen in attendance left for their respective territories.

Arthur C. Bromberg, president of Arthur C. Bromberg Attractions, attended all sessions of the convention and took an active part in the proceedings, which were presided over by John W. Mangham, Jr., manager of the Atlanta exchange.

In addition to Mr. Bromberg and Mr. Mangham, those attending were: H. H. Everett, manager Charlotte branch, with Salesmen George E. Ebersole and E. R. Rambonnet; Leo Seicshnaydre, manager New Orleans branch, with salesmen Charles R. Hatcher and Paul Sentell, and salesmen G. Y. Harrell and Alex Callen, of the Atlanta branch.

On Monday evening, the delegates and members of the office force of the Atlanta exchange were entertained at a barbecue and dance at Maddox Park by Mr. Bromberg.

Earl E. Griggs, exploiteer for Universal in the Southeast, returned last week from Florida.

Hank Hearn, Atlanta branch manager for Liberty-Specialty, accompanied by his salesmen, returned Thursday morning from Liberty's sales convention, which was held at Bay St. Louis, Miss.

C. R. Beacham, head of First National's Atlanta exchange, is back from his company's sales convention in Los Angeles.

Dan Michalove, general manager of Universal Chain Theatres, returned to his New York headquarters last Wednesday.

E. L. Cole, executive secretary of the Atlanta Film Board of Trade, is a member of the graduating class of the Atlanta Law School.

Adolph Gortatowsky, prime factor in the firm of Gortatowsky Brothers and operator of several theatres in South Georgia and Florida, spent last Friday in Atlanta.

Matt Whitham, of the Fox sales force, brings news of the marriage of Perry C. Walker, Amusu Theatre, Statesboro, Ga., to Miss Ethel Grace Odom of Savannah.

Mr. Frederic Liggett, manager of the Community Theatre in Hawkinsville, Ga., was married to Miss Myrtle Atkinson, of Hawkinsville. Mr. Liggett is the son of Mrs. F. L. Liggett, owner of the National Theatre Company, operating a chain of four theatres in Georgia.

C. E. Tandy, formerly general manager of S. A. Lynch Enterprises and for the past seven years in the real estate business in Florida, haos joined the Atlanta office of M-G-M as special field representative.

Jimmy Clarke has been transferred from the Oklahoma City branch of M-G-M to the Atlanta branch to do exploitation work.

Jack Elwell, manager of sales promotion department of the Atlanta M-G-M exchange, has been transferred to the company's Memphis branch.

Frank W. Salley, Universal salesman, was called to the bedside of his mother at Augusta, Ga., this week on reports that she was seriously ill.

In order that each salesman for P.D.C. will always have an opportunity of becoming a branch manager and since each salesman's results have a direct bearing upon this advancement, a national 100 Per Cent Club has been inaugurated by the company. Those standing at the top of the sales list will, of course, be first in line for advancement.

Frank Howard, branch manager of P.D.C. in Atlanta, and members of his sales force, have returned from the sales convention in New York.

George P. Montgomery, of the Wells Theatre, Anniston, Ala., was the first exhibitor in the Atlanta territory to sign a 100 per cent contract for the P.D.C. 1927-28 product.

George F. Lenehan, district manager of P.D.C., together with Frank Howard, branch manager, and W. H. Wassman, salesman of the Florida territory, left this week for a ten-day trip through Florida.

L. J. Duncan, salesman, again leads the salesmen in the Atlanta branch of P.D.C., by closing the first 100 per cent contract for the company's 1927-28 product. Mr. Duncan has recently won two of the national prizes offered by the company.

Salesman Van Derberg, of the Atlanta branch of P.D.C., while attending the sales convention in New York, was called to his home in Washington by the death of his mother.

William G. Minder, Southeastern manager for Tiffany, visited Memphis this week and, upon his return to the Atlanta office, will make a trip through the Carolinas on his way to New York, where he will visit the Home Office. He expects to be away about two weeks.

Louis Miller, who operates the Capitol Theatre at Tifton, Ga., was in Atlanta for several days this week.

Albany

G. A. WOODARD accepted the management of the Bond exchange in Albany last week, returning to the film business after an absence of over two years, during which time he has conducted a printing and advertising service. Mr. Woodward was formerly manager of the Fox exchange in Albany, and served also as a salesman.

William Smalley, of Cooperstown, paid one of his periodical vists to Albany last week and reported business as running ahead of last year at all of his houses.

Sidney Sampson, treasurer and general manager for Bond, and who makes his headquarters in Buffalo, was in town during the week.

Mrs. Dennis Regan, who runs the theatre in Greenwich, is recuperating from a recent illness. She will run her theatre three days a week during the summer months.

There was a fire at the booth of the Delaware Avenue theatre in Albany last week, but it was extinguished without any damage being done. There was also a fire during the week in a building adjoining the Colonial theatre.

William Benton, of Saratoga Springs, is reported to be negotiating for the Pember theatre in Granville.

Announcement was made last week of the engagement of Florence Goldberg, of Albany, to Leon Herman, a well-known Universal salesman in this city.

L. E. Avery, of Brandon, Vt., was als on film film row during the week. L. W. Goodman, of Utica, was also in town.

Jack Hutcheons, of Amsterdam, has the sympathy of central New York exhibitors in the death of his mother, which occurred last week.

J. J. McLaughlin, who runs "Jim's Theatre" at Poland, took a few days off last week and in a letter to one of the local exchanges, stated that he had caught a fine mess of trout.

Bill Shirley, long identified with theatres in Schenectady, has returned to town, and according to all reports will be connected with a motion picture theatre in the Capital District.

J. F. Wallace, manager of Proctor's Grand in Albany, was married last week at Philmont, and left on a motor trip westward.

Hezekiah Perkins, of Speculator, is dividing his time these days between his theatres and the training camp of Gene Tunney.

Claude Fish will be in Atlantic City next week, attending the Shriners' convention and marching with the Albany patrol. Mr. Fish took a day off this week and attended the State Convention of Elks in Troy.

Vincent Jannery has been made manager of the Albany theatre in Schenectady, which has reopened with second run double features at a lower admission price.

W. W. Farley announced last week that he had sold the Warburton theatre in Yonkers, to John Hayes, of that city, and Edward Dowling, an actor.

The Wedgeway theatre has closed in Schenectady for the summer and will reopen with burlesque and road shows in the fall.

William O'Brien, new manager of the Strand in Carthage, appeared on the stage of his theatre three nights last week, giving several song numbers.

Charles Travis, former operator at the Barcli theatre in Schenectady, who left that city several months ago to travel with "Beau Geste," is back home again.

Technical engineers are still busy mornings at the State theatre in Schenectady, in further protecting the Palophotophone.

James Roach, manager of the Farash houses in Schenectady, is back from his honeymoon, which included a visit to both Atlantic City and New York. His bride was a Saratoga Springs girl.

Helen Regan, who has been cashier at the State theatre in Schenectady, left this week on a five-months' trip, which will include Chicago, Seattle and California.

Frank Breymaier, manager of the Barcli in Schenectady, has decided to continue amateur nights throughout the summer.

Edward Hayes, Albany manager for Pathe, is back from the convention, and with his salesmen, immediately hopped out into the field.

Visitors along the row last week included: Mrs. Tom Thornton, of Saugerties, and her son; Mrs. Rusk and Mr. Andrews, of Haines Falls. Miss Rea Carmody, of the Pathe forces, spent Decoration Day at Astoria. Catherine Wenzel, of Hudson, has joined the Pathe forces in place of Miss May Connell.

Jake Rosenthal, of the Rose in Troy, featured in a small automobile accident last week.

Mrs. Clayton Eastman has returned to her desk in the Paramount exchange, after a honeymoon spent in the New England states.

New York and New Jersey

EXHIBITORS who have not yet made their reservations for the M. P. T. O. of New Jersey meet at the Berkeley-Carteret, Asbury Park, June 21-22-23, had best bear the matter in mind for according to report the affair promises to be exceptionally well attended. Thirty dollars will take care of the three days, so the placard reads.

Richard Gladhill, former Paramount salesman, then to Fox and Renown, is again reported back with the Fox exchange. Another change in the salesman's ranks is that of M. Bullwinkle, who is said to have gone with Paramount.

"Billy" Osborne will leave the Fabian forces and return to sales work, it is reported, and in all probability will resume his former position with P. D. C.

Harry Harris, theatre-chain owner of New York City, will close his Bluebird Theatre at 147th and Amsterdam avenue for all time. It is said that a store building will be erected on the property.

Once again the Seventh Avenue Playhouse, 52nd street and 7th avenue, Brooklyn, will be opened. This time, by S. Berkhoff of the B. & F. Photoplay Corp.

From all reports, Ben Harris, who operates the Hill Theatre, Newark, is an exceptionally busy exhibitor. He puts on two new "tab" shows every week, writes his own stuff, [illegible] all [illegible]. The Hill seats about 1,200 and a Fabian house across the street furnishes opposition. Mr. Harris doesn't have to stick to the theatre business but he is in it because he likes it. He is a Michigan graduate and has also studied law.

In line with their policy of expanding their theatre holdings to neighborhood sections of cities, it is reported that Publix will proceed with plans to build a large house at Pitkin avenue and Barrett street, East New York. It is said to be located but a few blocks away from the Premier, formerly owned by Lesselbaum, Rachmil and Rinsler, and later taken over by Loew Theatres, Inc.

Exhibitor Kleine has recently purchased the Hasbrouck Heights Theatre from former owner Curtis.

Lesser and Kessler are the new owners of the Lakeland Theatre, Brighton Beach road, Brooklyn.

Out in the Boro Park section of Brooklyn where Universal Theatres have the big atmospheric type theatre nearing completion, about two blocks away on the corner of 44th street and New Utrecht avenue stands the completed Elkton Theatre erected by builder Schwartz. Apparently all an exhibitor would have to do would be to open the doors and start a show —but for some good reason, of [illegible] composed of men in the New York [illegible] several exchange managers turning [illegible] recent communication is from David Brill, sales manager of Tiffany exchange, New York [illegible] the Public," says "Dave."

Incidentally, Jack Ellis, another member of the Salesman's editorial staff, is quite a poet. Read his stuff and make your own book.

The latest issue of the Salesman tells this part of the world that their most exalted chairman, Meyer Solomon, has promised the men the biggest OUTING in the history of the film industry in August, when dancing, boat rides, eats and prizes will be among the attractions offered. But there is a catch to all this: if the members don't procure enough ads for the annual ball, November 26, all may be off.

Joe Hornstein, of National Supply, is another contributor to the Salesman.

Rosenzweig's new Embassy Theatre is expected to open this week Thursday. The location is at Fulton and Concord avenues, the site of the old Concord.

Two other large theatres are fast nearing the stage of comple- [illegible] street, and the other, Lesselbaum's [illegible] reported to be well under way.

One more small theatre to give way to the pressure from the larger [illegible] the Wyandotte, 473 Marcy avenue, Brooklyn. It is reported [illegible].

Jack Weinstein, former Para- [illegible] exchange, is now with Commonwealth.

It is reported that Henry Siegel, owner of several theatres in Brooklyn and Queens, has also recently become associated with Levine Brothers' Coliseum Theatre, 4th avenue and 52nd street, Brooklyn.

B. Morrison is the new manager of the Armory Theatre, 14th street and 7th avenue, Brooklyn. Morrison was formerly at the Boro Hall.

The Linden Theatre, Linden, N. J., has recently been taken over by B. Sachs.

Lou Simon will manage Wilson's Endicott, 70th street and 13th avenue, Brooklyn.

Keith's Riviera, St. Johns Place, Brooklyn, has adopted its usual policy of closing for the summer months.

Southeast

W. H. EUBANKS, manager, Lyric theatre, Sumpter S. C., spent Sunday in Charlotte, with his family.

Tom Stallings, formerly manager of the Playhouse theatre, Statesville, N. C., left last Sunday for Elizabeth City, N. C., to arrange the opening of the new Carolina theatre which will be about June 1st.

M. E. Wiman, manager Liberty Specialty Film Distributing Corp., with D. Young and R. E. Kennedy, salesmen, left Charlotte Sunday to attend convention held at Bay St. Louis, Miss.

H. F. Kincey, general manager Publix-Saenger Theatres of North Carolina, announces that Eugene Street will have charge of the Capitol theatre, Salisbury, N. C. Mr. Street was formerly with the R. R. Wilby theatres in Alabama, and, until recently, manager of the Imperial and Alamo Theatres in Greensboro, N. C.

W. G. Enloe, formerly manager of the Lexington theatre, Lexington, N. C., and at present manager of the Capitol theatre, Raleigh, N. C., will take charge of the Imperial succeeding Mr. Street.

J. F. Miller, Pastime theatre, Hicorky, N. C., visited Charlotte's film row during the week.

F. D. Fowler, manager of the Rivoli theatre, Lincolnton, N. C., was married to Miss Gunn, Lincolnton, several days ago. While Mr. Fowler is away on his honeymoon, Mr. Herbert Masterman, general manager Carolina Theatres, Inc., has charge of this house.

B. L. Hall, owner Batesburg theatre, Batesburg, S. C., was in Charlotte Monday.

Phelps Sasseen, manager of the Concord theatre, Concord, N. C., was seen on film row in Charlotte Wednesday.

O. S. Scarborough, Palace theatre, Winnsboro, S. C., was a visitor on film row last week.

Cauley K. Lusk has taken over the Playhouse theatre at Justell, Ky.

Guy Stanbury, manager of the Crystal theatre, Bardstown, Ky., spent the holiday in Louisville.

Lee L. Goldberg, of Big Feature Rights Corp., is back on the job after being away for over a month. Mr. and Mrs. Goldberg attended the Educational Convention in California.

Maurice White, of First National exchange, has returned from California, where he attended the First National convention.

It was with deep regret that friends of V. W. Castleberry, First National booker, learned of the sudden death of his brother in Atlanta last week.

Seattle

EXHIBITORS of Seattle and neighboring territories were very enjoyably entertained one evening last week by the Universal Film Company, through the courtesy of Publicity Director McBride of the Universal studios; Manager Matt Aparton of the local exchange, and the latter's staff of sales representatives. The party consisted of a preview of Universal's new product. Following the show, held at the Ridgmont theatre, he party adjourned to the Gowman Hotel, where a delightful dinner was served.

Frank Edwards, former manager of the Winter Garden theatre, is reported to be concluding arrangements with Jack Lannon, head of the Greater Features exchange in this city, whereby Mr. Edwards will assume the direction of sales for that organization.

Mel Winstock, known by many exhibitors as one of Seattle's most popular film salesman, last week made his bow as a theatre manager. He has just been appointed manager of the Mission theatre, a local suburban house owned and operated by Universal as one of the eleven Northwest Theatrical Enterprise houses in this territory.

Rex Thompson, former booker at Manager Art Huot's local Film Booking Office exchange, and more recently on the road in the Denver and Butte territory for Manager Mat Aparton's Universal office, returned to Seattle this week for a brief visit, prior to a resumption of his sales trip.

C. H. George, of Port Angeles, Mrs. Stein, of Marysville, and Fred Mercy and Fred, Jr., of Walla Walla, were among the visitors seen on film row last week.

"Ollie" Wallace, formerly Oliver G. Wallace, who made a national reputation as a concert organist in Seattle, San Francisco and other large centers, played his farewell week as orchestra director of the Fifth Avenue Theatre last week, and has returned to Tacoma as head of music at the new Broadway theatre.

John Hamrick, head of the Hamrick's theatres in Seattle, Portland and Tacoma, returned last week from New York City, and reports very successful conferences with the Warner brothers relative to Warner pictures and Vitaphone subjects for his Blue Mouse theatres in Seattle and Portland for the coming season.

This week's theatre robbery in Seattle was held one night last week at Universal's Ridgmont theatre, 7720 Greenwood Avenue. Thieves who entered the house through an exit door during the wee small hours succeeded in forcing the box office door, opening the safe and escaping with $800. The sum represented a part of the week-end receipts of the Ridgmont, Arabian and Woodland theatres, all operated by Universal.

Waldo Ives, progressive, young exhibitor of Mount Vernon and neighboring territory, built up box office receipts for the entire district a few weeks ago by his "Go-To-Theatre-Week" in Skagit County. He put the event over with the co-operation of Dad Abbott, O. O. Ruth, and G. A. Anderson, all exhibitors of the county, and all houses offered slightly reduced prices and added film and stage attractions for the week.

George Rotsky, managing director of the Palace Theatre, Montreal, Can. Mr. Rotsky was recently elected President of the Montreal Theatre Managers' Ass'n, and has held the office of Vice-President for three years.

Following a picture's two weeks' run at the Strand theatre at fifty cent admission prices, John Danz, operating the house on a lease from Pacific Northwest Theatres, has returned to a twenty-five cent second run policy, and plans two changes weekly, except on the big second run attractions. The house is being operated non-union, similar to Danz's other theatres in the downtown district.

F. C. Weskil, theatre operator of Colfax and Sand Point, Washington, has recuperated rapidly from his recent appendix operation performed here at Providence Hospital, and was around last week greeting his friends on Film Row prior to his departure for home and business again.

Mitchell Sutherland, former motion picture editor of the Seattle Times, and more recently connected with the Pacific Northwest Theatres and the Harold Horne Enterprises, was scheduled to leave this city early in June to accept a position with one of the producing companies in Los Angeles. He has recently been acting as manager of the Society theatre, a former Horne enterprise, but resigned that position to make the move to Southern California. His successor has not yet been selected.

Canada

J. M. ROBERTSON, manager of the Dominion Theatre, Victoria, B. C., received the prize complaint from a patron when the latter, complained to him that "Casey at the Bat" was an old picture. The customer was assured that the feature was one of the latest productions, whereupon the critical patron declared: "You can't fool me; why, the costumes they wear in it are at least 40 years old. The picture must be old."

Walter F. Davis, energetic manager of the Metropolitan Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, has returned to the Manitoba Capital after a visit to his old home in Alabama where his aged mother is enjoying excellent health.

J. A. Stewart, manager of the Capitol Theatre, Guelph, Ontario, recently conducted a special show in the dining hall of the Ontario Reformatory at Guelph, one of the largest penal institutions in Canada.

Head office officials of Regal Films, Limited, Toronto, and managers of the six Regal branches in the Dominion, have returned from the annual convention of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sales force which was held at Hollywood.

Three changes in Canadian branch managers have been announced by Educational Film Exchanges, Inc. Harold L. Pfaff has been placed in charge of the Toronto exchange, taking the place of L. J. Charlie Michaels returned from an auto trip to Oregon as far as Portland. He was accompanied by Mrs. Michaels and the kiddies.

Manager Charles Muehlman, branch manager of First National, together with his personnel of salesmen and several of the local office, attended the convention held in Hollywood May 18th.

George Mann has purchased a site for a new theatre in Fort Bragg. Construction of a 700-seat house will commence soon.

Pete Kyprios and associates have opened their new Strand Theatre at Sunnyvale. The old theatre was closed at once.

Making his first territorial trip over a part of the San Francisco zone, Manager W. G. Seib of Pathe returned recently from the Central and Sacramento districts.

E. C. Lane, popular manager of Loews Warfield theatre, was recently told by some women of certain local women's clubs that they Sidney M. Nutt, prominent exhibitor of Hot Springs, Ark.

[illegible] and ushers and usherettes were always very accommodating. Speaking of this Lane said: "I have found that pleasing ushers are as valuable, almost, as pleasing pictures."

[illegible] over the North Sacramento Theatre, plans to remodel same at once. The roof will be raised and the theatre completely refitted and altered throughout.

The Robt. Morgan Organ Company are now represented officially by M. J. Munjar, whom J. A. G. Schiller is introducing to be in charge of the Western Division, with his headquarters at the San Francisco offices, 168 Golden Gate Ave.

Mel Mosher, assistant booker at the local Fox exchange, has been promoted to the sales department, working out of the Sale Lake exchange. Mosher will have exclusive charge of the Montana territory served from the Salt Lake exchange.

W. C. "Bill" Wheeler, former branch exchange manager of Vita[illegible] B. O. sales force. When Warner Bros. acquired the Vitagraph Company and exchanges, Wheeler retired and [illegible] Theatre at Willits, which he still controls and will continue to operate.

The "New Burlingame" was started on its way recently when ground was broken for a new 1000-seat theatre. It is being built by the Vission Realty Corporation of San Francisco, and will cost $100,000. Edward A. Ames is the architect. B. R. Wolf Electrical Company have the contract for installation of lighting and other electrical effects, including an elaborate mammoth sign. The Arctic Nu-Air Company are to place a complete ventilating and heating control service for the owners. The lessee or operator of the enterprise has not been announced.

W. G. Preddey reflector lamps were installed in the Strand at Sunnyvale; two lamps for the Grand Lake Theatre in Oakland and eight lamps by the George Mann interests in and about Eureka.

St. Louis

FIRST a success as a prescription clerk, then branching out into business for himself as builder, owner and operator of the first modern motion picture theatre house of Hot Springs National Park, Arkansas, taking on an automobile agency as a practical side line and then organizing a life insurance company in which he made a fortune, Sidney M. Nutt has just purchased the Princess and Lyric theatres from Sam Blumensteil and John C. Wolf for a half million dollars and he still owns his first buy—the Central theatre—and will continue to operate all three. The Lyric, with a seating capacity of 700, will be run as a combination vaudeville and picture house; the Princess, 1,000 capacity, offering big features with prologues and special music and the Central will continue its first run features. This house has a seating capacity of 800.

Charles P. Skouras, general manager of Skouras Brothers Enterprises, operators of the Ambassador, Missouri, Grand Central, West End Lyric and the houses of the St. Louis Amusement Company group, has returned from the Pacific Coast where he attended the annual First National Convention.

G. Kehias of Pana, Ill., has retained the architectural firm of Aschauer & Waggoner of Decatur, Ill., to design a new theatre and store building to be erected in Pana. Details are not yet available.

Barney Dubinsky of Jefferson City has announced that upwards of $10,000 will be expended on improvements to the Miller and Jefferson theatres in Jefferson City during the Summer season.

Roland Siegel of the Community Theatre, Pine Bluff, Ark., has awarded the contract for the construction of his new theatre on West Sixth avenue to T. J. Jones. The new house will be 40 by 90 feet and cost upwards of $12,500. Siegel recently purchased a theatre in Stuttgardt, Ark.

St. Louis film stocks closed June 4 as follows: Skouras A $40 asked, and St. Louis Amusement A $45 asked. One year ago these stocks were held at $47 a share each.

Joseph Erber, head of the Western Vaudeville Managers Association in St. Louis and a syndicate of St. Louisiana, has purchased the 47-acre Lake Hill Park in Valley Park, Mo., for approximately $200,000.

Erber at one time owned the Lyric and Avenue theatres in East St. Louis and prior to that managed the Majestic Theatre in that city. He also operated the Washington Theatre in Belleville, Ill., several years ago.

Lake Hill is a popular recreational resort for St. Louis and St. Louis County, being located at the Barrett Station road and the Missouri Pacific and Frisco Railroads.

Funeral services of Leopold Silberberg, 88 years old, of 5914 Bartmer avenue, St. Louis, Mo., father of Jules F. Silberberg, assistant orchestra conductor at the Missouri Theatre, were held on May 31. Interment was in Mount Olive Cemetery.

Portland, Ore.,

J. J. FRANKLIN arrived in Portland this week to take charge of the Portland division for West Coast and Pacific Northwest Theatres, Inc. Franklin will make his headquarters at the Liberty Theatre. His brother, Harold Franklin, is expected to arrive in the city within a short time on a tour of inspection.

Bob Bender drove down from Seattle Tuesday to look over affairs at the Columbia. At present the house is without a manager, but an announcement is expected daily regarding who will be placed in charge of the house.

L. M. Cobbs, branch manager, Fred Normand and Ted Johnson, salesmen, left last week for the Los Angeles Pathe convention. H. L. Percy, branch manager, A. W. Adamson, salesman, and H. L. Merian, district representative for P. D. S., are leaving today for Los Angeles to aatend their convention.

George Jackson, local maanger for Universal is out in the territory using high-powered sales language on the exhibitors.

Louis Amacher, L. E. Tillman and S. B. Tewksbury are back from the M-G-M convention. Manager Fish and his sales force from Seattle stopped off in Portland for a day en route home from the conclave. Wm. R. Ferguson, manager of exploiteers from the N. Y. office of M-G-M, and George Fecke, head of the radio department, also tarried a day here on their way back to New York.

George Guthrie, proprietor of several Salem theatres, returned to Portland from San Francisco yesterday. George sat in on several of the Paramount meetings during their convention.

Harry Eagles, special representative for Paramount, arrived in Portland last night for a brief visit before returning to his home in Seattle. Harry is nursing a broken finger, which he incurred while defending himself from an attack in Oakland last week. Eagles' assailant is now reposing peacefully in the Oakland cooler.

Frank Bligh, of Salem, and Guy Matlock, of Pendleton, were Portland callers during the week.

The option which the Western Film Co. hold on the Saxe theatres here (New Grand, Princess, Nob Hill and American), expires today. It has not yet been learned what will develop.

Milwaukee

FRIENDS must part some time. Charles D. Koehler who holds the time record for service in the film business in Milwaukee, after two and one-half years with Progress, has become booker at the Celebrated office. Winnie DeLorenzo, who has been booker in the Celebrated office for the past seven years, has been appointed salesman for that company. Mr. Koehler assumed his new duties on June 6th.

The Pathe office is being brightened with a new coat of white paint on its walls.

L. L. Ballard, United Artists' Representative, spent the Memorial Day holidays in Chicago. He returned with a sprained ankle.

Ed. Mertz is installing a new Kilgen organ in the New Zenith theatre of which he is manager.

Raymond Pfeiffer, manager of the Princess theatre at Chilton, was a recent film row visitor.

Ralph Eunson was recently designated as manager of the Grand theatre at Wausau in these columns, which error we wish to correct. Mr. Eunson is representative of the Kilgen organ company. Frank Welter is still managing the Grand.

Art Desormeaux, manager of the Strand at Madison, is what is generally known as an enterprising manager. Pictures of Lindbergh's arrival in Paris were rushed to Milwaukee in record time, and Mr. Desormeaux smashed some more records by chartering a plane to bring the pictures to Madison. Then he with Herman Wolfgram, Pathe salesman, went up in the plane and scattered dodgers over the city announcing the arrival of the pictures. Incidentally, this was Mr. Wolfgram's first air trip.

The Paramount Pep Club party, held May 28th at the Terrace Gardens, was declared one of the peppiest ever held by all who attended. Guests included Mr. Ross, district manager; Mr. Agnew, manager of the Chicago branch; Mr. Goldberg, manager of the Peoria branch, and other members of the Peoria and Chicago offices. J. G. Frackman, manager of the local Progress office, and F. G. Sliter, manager of the Fox exchange, also attended the party. However, Mr. Sliter, driving his new Chrysler sedan, was unable to follow the lead car out and got lost, but eventually found his way out to the party, and soon made up for lost time.

Park Waterbury, manager of the Idle Hour at Jefferson, has joined the P. D. C. staff as salesman for the Western territory.

P. D. C. has also added Ray Winn, formerly of Indianapolis, to the sales staff. He has been assigned to the Northern territory.

Jack Yeo, manager of the Opera House, and Rex at Berlin and the Odeon and Davison at Beaver Dam, was in the city on Wednesday to line up bookings for his houses.

L. L. Ballard's newly decorated desk has been further embellished by the addition of a beautifully-painted owl on one side of the desk.

Walter Bauman is now traveling the territory for Mid-West exchange. Mr. Bauman is a former secretary of Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin.

Another ball game is scheduled for Sunday morning at Franklin Square. Games have been rather scarce due to the inclement weather. The next game will be an interesting one, for games now stand two each for Film Board and Saxe teams.

Jack Schumow returned from the M-G-M convention a sick man, and has been in bed for several days.

Ralph Mosiman, of the Rex theatre at Oshkosh, was in the city for a few hours on Tuesday, while he visited the exchanges.

Steve Bauer, new owner of the Elite theatre, is closing the theatre for extensive remodeling.

Arthur Richter, manager of the Paris theatre, has joined the ranks of proud papas—a new baby daughter.

Ben Brown, manager of the Temple theatre at Viroqua, was in the city last week with his son. Mr. Brown had charge of the Viroqua high school band at the recent contest.

Joe Rosenfield has been transferred from the Chicago office to join the sales force of the Milwaukee office. He has been assigned to Northern territory.

B. J. Kemp, manager of the Community theatre at Gladstone, Michigan, was among out-of-town exhibitors in the city during the week.

The Red Seal Film Exchanges will establish a Milwaukee office in the very near future, according to C. R. Lundgren, manager of the Chicago office.

Miss Lillian Rosenburg left her position in the Warner exchange to be married on June 5th.

O. V. Kelly, manager of the Badger theatre at Reedsburg, spent Wednesday in the local exchanges.

Dan Kelliher, of the Princess, Elkhorn, and Majestic at Lake Geneva, was a recent visitor at the exchanges.

F. F. Nine, salesman on the Warner staff is back on the job after an illness of five weeks.

E. Pelletteri sold his theatre at Plymouth to M. Gilman, a former Mosinee exhibitor. Mr. Pelletteri is at the present time in California.

Des Moines

JAMES B. CONNELLY, recently appointed manager of the Orpheum Theatre, Clinton, Iowa, writes us that we made an error in these columns in a recent issue. The paragraph stated that Mr. Connelly had recently been promoted to the management of the Orpheum at Waterloo, Ia. As it is, James B. Connelly, formerly manager of the Rialto Theatre at Waterloo, Ia., one of the Frank Amusement Company, Inc., chain of theatres, has been appointed manager of the Orpheum Theatre at Clinton, Ia., succeeding Harry Herman, who goes to the Majestic Theatre at Cedar Rapids, another of the same chain houses. Mr. Connelly has been with the Frank Amusement Co., for the past two and a half years. He was formerly an advance agent. His family will join him at Clinton where he will be permanently located.

Officials of the P. D. C. office returned from the convention in Chicago. Les Phillips, manager of the branch office here, was accompanied by his sales staff of Rube Wagel, Frank J. Swiercinsky and Sam Sosra.

A Blizzard cooling system was added to the equipment at the Iowa Theatre at Winterset, owned by Mr. Pettit.

J. M. Beatty, postal clerk for First National office, is now taking charge of the booker's duties.

A representative of Fox who attended the convention in San Francisco was B. B. Reingold, manager of the Des Moines office.

Charles Stephson, shipper for the Des Moines office of Universal, has been transferred to the St. Louis office where he wins a very nice promotion to the office of booker.

M. O. Barr of the Idle Hour at Kumme has closed his house for the summer season. Two other houses which are closing for the temporary hot weather season are the Opera House at Bennett and the Palace Theatre at Adair.

Mrs. Georgia Glinn of the Plaza Theatre, Fort Dodge, was in Des-Moines last week.

Visitors on film row this week were Mr. Dickson of Mt. Pleasant, Mr. Enyert of Eldon, J. G. Fair and his wife from Lorenz.

Rube Wagel of the P. D. C. office bought himself a new Ford coupe.

The theatre at Fonda, Iowa, owned by Edward Recknagel, is now but the first step in his chain. He recently purchased the Scenic Theatre at Holstein, which is close to Fonda.

The Princess Theatre at Sanborn was completely destroyed by fire. Origin of the blaze is unknown.

A. H. Blank denies the newspaper account in which it was stated that he would plan sites for American picture houses while on his trip to European cities this summer. Mr. Blank has sailed from New York with his sons Raymond and Myron for several weeks on the Continent and in England. Mr. Blank is said to be planning to start into the producing field within the next year or so.

Mr. Terhune who was assistant to Harry Watts as manager of the Rialto Theatre in Omaha has been given charge of the Columbia Theatre at Davenport, recently become one of the Blank chain of theatres.

Superiority guarded thirty-eight years

In 1889 Eastman film made movies practicable. And today the famous Kodak Research Laboratories still safeguard the superiority that has always marked Eastman Negative and Positive.

Superiority in film includes higher screen quality. High screen quality insures satisfaction to the public. And constant satisfaction is needed to maintain and increase box-office receipts.

Always specify prints on Eastman Positive, and look for the words "Eastman —Kodak" in the transparent margin.

Effect Lighting in Theatres

By J. H. Kurlander
Brenkert Light Projection Company

(Paper Presented Before the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, Norfolk, Va., April 25-28, 1927)

PART TWO

Color Effects

COLOR effects, as projected from a special "spot booth" or from the projection room proper, are used in prologue work, special numbers, organ solos and even in the showing of motion pictures.

The principal control, in the case of simple colored lighting effects, consists in changing the colors themselves, or in changing the shape of the projected floods or spots.

Thus, a round, square, rectangular, or any odd-shaped colored spot or flood may be projected singly or in combination with one or more spots or floods of special shape to obtain a blending* or dissolving color action on the stage.

When the standard, double-optic, system type of effect projector is used, two different colored beams, of any desired shape, as, for instance, square, may be dissolved back and forth to obtain colors other than those represented by the gelatines used in the projectors. Or a square flood may be placed around the organ and the organist "head-spotted" with either a clear or colored round "spot." Combinations in this respect are quite numerous.

Some typical masks, cutouts and special lantern slides

A very pretty effect, and one which is often used in title and border work while motion pictures are being shown, is found in the use of special glass design plates which are sharply imaged on the screen (or around the picture area), after which a special color wheel, consisting of narrow widths of various colored gelatines, is placed in front of the projection lens so that the colors, as they pass before the lens, are caused to weave across the imaged design on the screen; a peculiar blending and fading in-and-out-effect being obtained.

As used in connection with film title work, this color effect serves as a prelude to the principal title and is operated in the following manner: A blank leader, of a length consistent with the period of time it is desired to show the colored effect, is spliced between the last reel of one subject and the first reel of the next succeeding subject so as to make a complete 2,000-ft. reel.

The projectionist, taking a cue from the end of the last reel as it passes through the projector, is stationed at the effect projector and when the cue is received he gradually opens a pair of vertical framing shutters which causes the blending colors effect to be seen on the otherwise dark screen as if appearing from behind a pair of slowly opening draw curtains.

This effect is allowed to stand on the picture screen while the blank leader is being run through the projector and even after the title is projected onto the screen, the colored effect then serving as an animated field. Just before the picture comes on, the projectionist slowly closes the framing shutters, thus making the effect apparently disappear behind the closing curtains, leaving the motion pictures to follow closely on its heels.

By means of a special mask, provided for the purpose, the same effect can be projected around the border of the motion picture and left there until that particular subject is finished; or else a new design may be dissolved upon it to take its place, thus constantly changing the effect obtained.

By far the greatest number of original effects are obtained by the use of simple masks, stencils and, in special instances, lantern slides. It is here that the ingenuity of the projectionist finds its greatest field and many, indeed, have become quite proficient in this work.

Stencils of flowers, ships, hearts, vases, crosses, and many other objects are legitimate prey for such effects and are eagerly seized upon by projectionists in their quest for novel and original. One man in St. Louis has made a stencil of every conceivable kind of flower, including a few that possibly never grew; another in Englewood, N. J., has a penchant for ships and on the slightest provocation will project a figure of a vessel of some kind upon the titles of all marine films.

Coming still closer to home, one of our own projectionist-members, will, without warning to anyone, sit down and make a pair of lantern slides consisting of a positive and negative of some odd design and then dissolve them in colors back and forth upon the screen.

This work is unique and never becomes tiresome except for the physical exertion required, since an illustrative point in the current feature picture can be made to serve as the subject.

Some simple forms of stencils, a positive and a negative lantern slide, and a special mask, used in obtaining such effects, are shown in Fig. 8. Feature pictures, prologues, skits and special acts may serve as the inspiration for projecting novel and original effects.

In its simplest form, an effect projector

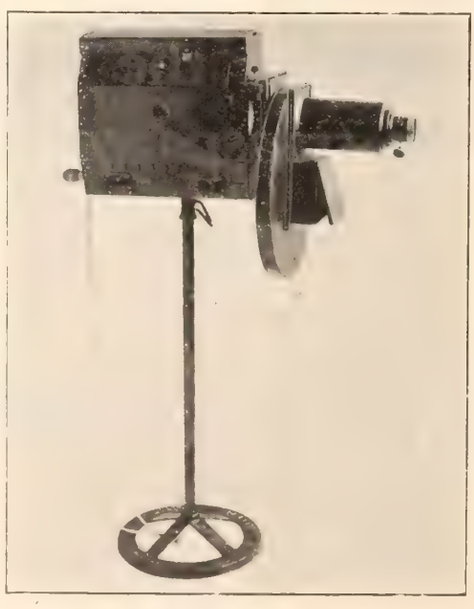

Fig. 9
Assembly view of spotlight effect projector

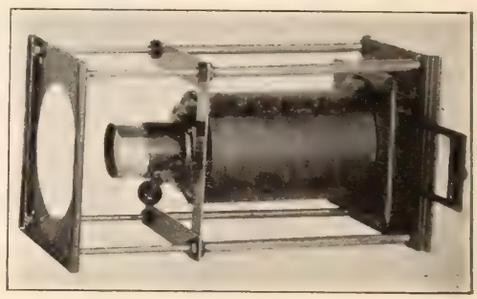

Fig. 10
A special effect holder for use with two-element effects as projected by the spotlamp effect projector is nothing more than a spotlamp to which have been added an extra condensing lens for converging the light to make it pass through an effect (attached to the lens holder plate) and then on to a projection lens (attached, in turn, to the effect casing).

The complete assembly appears as in Figure 9. A special effect holder for projecting two-element effects with such an outfit is shown in Figure 10.

This simple device was designed, primarily, for use "back-stage," where it is particularly effective in that it can readily cover a large area on a short projection distance; can be easily moved about; occupies little space; and can be stripped of its accessories and impressed into spotlamp duty when required.

Its adaptability to short focal length lenses for covering large areas at limited distances really acts as a powerful deterrent to its use in the projection room where, because of the greatly increased projection distance, long focal length lenses are required. There are no ordinary means for rigidity supporting such lenses on this unit; and, indeed, even if there were, the device would be quite cumbersome and difficult to handle with ease and rapidity.

Furthermore, it can project only single effects so that the use of double effects would require two such units and two operators.

Modern practice in Motion picture theatres only served to accentuate the inconvenience of such limitations and it was early realized that for this service a special unit, particularly designed to meet the conditions in picture theatres, was essential for

Proctor's New Playhouse

Is Latest Addition to New York's Array of Palatial Neighborhood Theatres

F. F. PROCTOR added another link to his already impressive chain of playhouses with the opening of his magnificent new threatre at 86th Street and Lexington Avenue, New York City, on Monday, May 16. The new Proctor house was designed by Thomas W. Lamb, architect. It has a seating capacity of 3,500.

Front stage and back stage the theatre represents the peak of modern design and equipment. Comfort and luxury for patron and for artist combined, with all manner of ingenious devices in the way of heating and lighting and ventilation make it a truly model edifice.

The auditorium is particularly beautiful. Its domed ceiling is cream white with delicate relief work in gold. Suspending from it are exquisite crystal chandeliers, their hundreds of prisms sparkling like diamonds. The walls are panelled in a rich brocade, rose red patterned in gold. The boxes and the proscenium arch are draped in gold colored brocade, the seats are in reality individual overstuffed chairs upholstered in the rose red color which is featured in the wall paneling. The boxes are ingeniously built upon two levels permitting an excellent view of the stag from the back row of box seats as well as the front.

One reaches the auditorium through a splendid main lobby carried out in the same color scheme as the auditorium. At either side of it is a graceful curving stairway of white marble with an elaborate and particularly lovely scroll railing of gold leading to the mezzanine promenade. Here the walls are hung with fine paintings; here there are comfortable tapestried chairs, a soft carpet underfoot; in fact the promenade amounts to a small but beautiful art gallery.

Opening from it upon one side is a charming suite, rest room, cosmetic room, smoking room and bath, for ladies. Upon the other is a handsomely wood panelled lounge, smoking room and bath for gentlemen.

Service Features

There are other such suites upon the main floor of the theatre at either side of the auditorium. Each room in such suites is decorated in an individual manner, each complete and replete with comfort and beauty. There is also on the main floor, an emergency room adequately supplied with first aid materials, with a nurse on duty.

No alley entrance for actors and actresses at the 86th Street Theatre. The entrance is directly upon the street. There is, first of all, a charming "Green Room" in which the performers may gather or meet their friends. There is a nursery for children of artists, there is a billiard room, there is a kitchen, a laundry, about everything one would find in a well-run hotel!

The dressing rooms, named after the various cities in the United States in which there are Proctor Theatres, are unusually large-sized light and airy. Each one has its private bath, two individual vanity tables, a chaise longue, and spacious closet room.

It will follow a popular policy, continual performances presenting Keith-Albee vaudeville and feature pictures, bills changed weekly.

proper effect projection.

It is true that efforts were made, and for that matter still are being made, to apply the spotlamp effect projector to projection room operation but a single demonstration, wherein rain drops appear of balloon proportions and snow flakes take on the appearance of a bombardment of snowballs, serves to convince the economical aspirant of the futility of his efforts.

The spotlamp type of effect projector, therefore, is definitely limited to back-stage service.

The peculiar nature of the motion picture program—peculiar, that is, only in that it differs greatly from the heretofore accepted form of popular entertainment—revealed the need for a projection device especially adapted to producing those lighting effects which seem to find ever-increasing favor among theatre patrons.

It was only natural, therefore, that such a device, as illustrated in Fig. 11, should find a place in projection rooms. This is the now accepted standard double effect projector which first made its appearance some four or five years ago.

The advantages it holds over the spotlamp type of effect projector are as listed below:

1. Higher operating efficiency.
2. Produces effects which can be obtained by no other means.
3. Propects dissolving lantern slides.
4. Greater flexibility in operating
5. Requires but one attendant for multiple effects.
6. Easy to operate.

Aside from these, there are certain advantages which result from its placement in the projection room, since in this location it comes under the supervision of the projectionist who is, or at least should be, more skilled in handling such projection devices, than are other employees about the theatre.

Conn to Delay No Longer on Providence House

Jacob Conn, Providence theatre owner who has been holding plans for a new theatre in abeyance for four years, declares that work will start immediately on a new theatre costing $750,000 at Broad and Chestnut streets, Providence, R. I. Mr. Conn says that he has waited for the city to take some action relating to a proposed street widening in Chestnut street but that he will wait no longer.

Plans are already prepared and are similar to those of his Olympia Theatre at Olneyville, R. I., except on a much larger scale. Thomas J. H. Pierce of Providence drew the plans. A large garage for 300 cars will be attached to the project.

The building will take about 18 months to complete and will cover some 60,000 square feet of land. In connection with the theatre will be a block of stores above which will be hotel suites. The theatre will seat 3,000.

"Give Your Screen Proper Care," Says Schoening

"No screen will last forever, and a new screen every once in a while means appreciative audiences," says W. L. Schoening, president of the Minusa Cine Screen Co.; however, it is astonishing what a certain amount of care will do toward keeping one in good condition over a considerable period.

"The average life of a good cine screen is from three to five years eliminating accidents. But this does not mean that a screen should not be looked after throughout this period of time. Our company has always stressed this point and have gone so far as to perfect a soft goat hair brush with ferrule for inserting a long pole so the screen can be cleaned without the use of ladders. This brush is supplied at cost. Furthermore—It is well to examine your screen and have it refinished when necessary. The Minusa Cine Screen Company issue cards every Spring to users of their screens, advising them to have their screens attended to. Many exhibitors heed this friendly admonition, and send their screens to be carefully examined, and properly refinished, and this work is done also at the exact cost of labor and material. During this operation, of course, they are provided, free of charge, with a substitute screen to be used until their regular one is returned in its rejuvenated condition."

New Suburban Theatre for Seattle, Wash.

A new suburban theatre to be built by the Western Building and Leasing Company at Fifteenth Avenue and Fiftieth Street, Seattle, Wash., was reported last week, and is now said to be available for leasing by a theatre operating group or individual. Erection of the house will begin within a month, it is reported.

New Theatre for Mansfield, Mass.

E. L. and H. L. White have awarded contracts for the erection of a theatre on Main street, Mansfield, Mass., from plans by John E. Kelley of Randolph, Mass. The theatre will seat about 1,000 and will be ready for opening about the first of next year.

Studio Briefs

William Collier, Jr., has been cast as the juvenile in Irene Rich's next picture for Warner Bros. which Michael Curtiz is directing. "The Outpost" is the working title of the Rich vehicle in which William Russell will also have a promising part. It is the first Irene Rich film for the new season.

With the signing of Hampton Del Ruth, director, scenarist, novelist and playwright, as the latest member of his scenario staff, Monty Banks has renewed an alliance of nearly ten years ago when Del Ruth supervised several comedy units at Sennett's when Banks made his first bow as a comedian. Del Ruth was connected with the American Film Company both as a writer and a director after leaving Mack Sennett. Del Ruth is collaborating with Charles Horan and Banks on the scenario for the comedian's next feature to follow "A Perfect Gentleman."

Production work was begun last week by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer on "Terror," the new film which will star Lon Chaney. Benjamin Christensen, Scandinavian director, is directing from an original story by Stig Esbern. Barbara Bedford has the feminine lead in the new picture. Charles Puffy and Emily Fitzroy joined the cast last week. Other roles are being played by Ricardo Cortez and Johnny Jack Brown.

Noah Beery, the Sergeant Lejaune of "Beau Geste," will play one of the outstanding parts in "Beau Sabreur," the Paramount special.

Warner Bros. are shooting three of their pictures for the coming season and completing one of the concluding pictures for this year. Alan Crosland is making "The Jazz Singer," from Al Cohn's script based on the stage play by Samson Raphaelson. This production will be the first production to be filmed with Vitaphone sound incorporated in its dramatic action and will mark the screen debut of Al Jolson. Besides the Jolson songs there will be several numbers by Cantor Rosenblatt. May McAvoy, Warner Oland and Otto Lederer are in the cast.

Also before the cameras now at the Warner Bros.' studio are the Monte Blue and Dolores Costello units making "The Bush Leaguer" and "The Heart of Maryland," and "The Outpost," the tentative title of Irene Rich's new picture. Howard Bretherton is directing Monte Blue, Lloyd Bacon, Dolores Costello, and Michael Curtiz, Irene Rich.

After a transcontinental trip from Hollywood to Rome City, Indiana, the location of "The Harvester," F. B. O.'s forthcoming Gene Stratton-Porter film, Director Leo Meehan took the first scenes of the picture late last week. The company of 40 people was headed by Natalie Kingston and Orville Caldwell, co-stars. An entire hotel has been engaged by the production unit on the shore of Sylvan Lake about two miles distant from the farm—the property described in the book by the late author. Two carloads of supplies and equipment, besides the staff of technical experts, were also brought to the Indiana location by the director.

Initial scenes for two Warner Bros. productions were taken last week and preliminary arrangements were made on another of the company's coming releases. Roy Del Ruth has started the extended run production, "Ham and Eggs at the Front," a comedy special written by Darryl Francis Zanuck and adapted by Robert Dillon and James Starr. Michael Curtiz, director "The Outpost," starring Irene Rich with William Russell and William Collier, Jr., has left the company's studio for a location trip to the Arizona desert to last about three weeks. John Miljan and Jack Ackeroyd are also supporting Miss Rich. Additions have been made to the cast of "The Bush Leaguer," Monte Blue's starring picture, in William Demarest, Richard Tucket and Bud Marshall. The director is Howard Bretherton.

William R. Walling, who spent 30 years on the stage and who has been on the screen for the past seven years, is rendering a characterization in "The Harvester," an F. B. O. film. He has but recently finished a role in "The Devil's Saddle," starring Ken Maynard. Another well known actor in the picturization of the Stratton-Porter tale is Jay Hunt. The unit making "The Harvester" will return to Hollywood from the Indiana location after three weeks of shooting exteriors. Interior settings are now being erected by the studio force at the F. B. O. Hollywood plant.

No permanent staff of continuity writers will be employed in the preparation of screen stories for the coming series of twelve Gotham productions. Each story will be turned over to a story specialist. Sam Sax made the first assignment this week when he turned over "The Rose of Kildare," a story by the late Gerald Beaumont, to Harold Shumate for scenario and continuity. Upon the completion of the script the picture will at once be placed into work and will be ready for release in the early fall, Gotham promises. Mae Bush is the featured player.

"The Clown," a Columbia picture of circus life scheduled for the present season, was completed last week and Director William James Craft, who directed it, is now busy on the film's cutting and editing. The picture boasts a stampede of fifty elephants and the complete cast of performers of the Al G. Barnes circus as well as a replica of the first Ringling show. William V. Mong is the clown and Johnnie Walker and Dorothy Revier the juvenile leads. John Miljan plays the heavy.

The leading feminine role opposite Tom Tyler in his next Western for F. B. O. entitled "Tom's Gang" will be Sharon Lynn. The young actress' most recent appearance in an F. B. O. picture was "Clancy's Kosher Wedding," soon to be released. The other members of the cast of "Tom's Gang" will be announced soon.

Two more players were added last week to the cast of "For Ladies Only," a comedy of modern business life in America, when Harry Cohn, vice-president of Columbia Pictures in charge of production, signed Edna Marion and Ben Hall for principal roles in the picture. Several directors are now under consideration for the megaphone work on the story.

[illegible] and the Woman," Universal's production for next season which is taken from the play "The Counsel for the Defense," are: Francis X. Bushman, who with Anna Q. Nilsson heads the cast, Walter Pidgeon, Martha Mattox, George Siegemann, Fred Kelsey, Sidney Bracy and Sailor Sharley. Charles A. Logue wrote the script from the Henry Irving Dodge play. Edward Laemmle, the director, will give the signal for the start of camerawork within a few days.

Paramount's "Shanghai Bound," starring Richard Dix, will be directed by Luther Reed. Edward S. (Tex) O'Reilly, short story writer, is the author of the production's story.

Barbara Bennett will be leading woman to Buck Jones in the latter's newest Western for Fox Films, "Blackjack." Orville Dull is directing a cast which includes George Berrell, Harry Cording, William Caress, Buck Moulton, Theodore Lorch, Sam Allen, Murdock MacQuarrie, Frank Laning and Mark Hamilton.

Arteless Pictures is planning a series of eight three-reel features, screen versions of the most popular of the Grimm fairy tales. The first of the series, "Mother Goose," has been completed and "Snow White," the second, is already in production.

"On to Rome," a story about divorcees by Joseph Jackson, has been appointed by Metropolitan Pictures as a starring vehicle for Marie Prevost.

Mack Swain has joined the supporting cast to Lon Chaney in "Terror," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture which Benjamin Christensen is directing from an original story by Stig Esbern.

Charles K. French is one of Wally Wales' principal supporting players, in "The Meddlin' Stranger," a Western drama which is a picturization of Christopher B. Booth's story which was published in Western Story Magazine under the title of "Lucky Star's Secret."

Seven new pictures were assigned to Paramount directors this week thereby launching the mid-summer production drive. "Hula" was given Victor Fleming, "Barbed Wire" to Roland V. Lee, a new Emil Jannings vehicle to Mauritz Stiller, "Shanghai Bound" to Luther Reed, "Tell It to Sweeney" to Gregory La Cava, a new Adolphe Menjou film to Josef von Sternberg, and Florence Vidor's next picture to Frank Tuttle. Now in production are: "We're All Gamblers," "Nevada," "Fireman, Save My Child," "Man Power," "Last Outlaw," "Service for Ladies," "Rolled Stockings," "Underworld," "Time to Love," and "The Big Sneeze."

Keeping Pace

Motion Picture Theatres today must provide a quality of entertainment that was undreamed of ten years ago.

Millions of dollars are invested annually in producing pictures that will meet with public approval.

Millions more are invested in building and equipping theatres so that the art and skill recorded may be fittingly reproduced.

Progressive exhibitors know the importance of adequate projection equipment. They know that the cost of all necessary equipment is a trifle compared to its value. They have learned in particular that it is poor economy to try to make two projectors do the work of three.

Profit from their experience. If you need an extra projector do not hesitate to install one. It will pay you in many ways.

'CHICAGO' WILL BE DE MILLE FILM

HOLLYWOOD, May 22 — De Mille Pictures has added another big production to its program by the acquisition rights to Maurice Watkins' sensational stage melodrama "Chicago." The details of the transaction are not at present obtainable, but are said to establish a record for the acquisition of a production of this nature.

The purchase of "Chicago" rights by De Mille assures Phyllis Haver a chance to realize the ambitions of her career as the celebrated title role of "Roxie Hart" which was created on the stage by Francine Larrimore.

It is understood that the picture will be put into production as soon as details can be arranged and will be one of the important box-office products included in P.D.C.'s release schedule.

"CHICAGO"... the most coveted piece of theatrical property of the current season secured by CECIL B. DE MILLE to be produced on an elaborate scale... Just a sample of what you can expect on the DE MILLE PROGRAM 1927-28... Just one of a sensational group of pictures that is destined to make new box-office history.

The same thing as

BOX OFFICE INSURANCE

At its extremely low cost, on its easy payment terms, with its unreserved guarantee of satisfaction, the quiet Lakeside is the same thing as box office insurance for the exhibitor. It means that you don't have to make a damp chilly ice box out of your theatre in order to make it the most delightful summer spot in town. It means that you don't have to sink your money into a cooling system that's good for nothing the rest of the year. The same quiet Lakeside that circulates cooling refreshing comfort through your house all summer will keep the air clear and healthful in zero weather too—at negligible operating cost and at an investment cost so low no other system can compete with it. Read all the facts on these pages. Then send coupon for information particularly pertaining to your theatre's special requirements.

This offers an improved and different ventilating service to every exhibitor with a summer attendance problem on his hands. A ventilating service of utmost economy!

It tells about the amazing ventilating invention—the quiet Lakeside—quickly installed in any theatre on short notice—most inexpensive to buy and to operate.

It invites you to give the quiet Lakeside just 30 days in which to prove its case—in which to convince you that quiet Lakeside ventilation will reduce the temperature inside your theatre to a pleasant comfortable degree of coolness and thereby produce a substantial improvement in your box office receipts during the sultriest weather.

Other exhibitors report that the quiet Lakeside makes a seat in their theatres 1000 per cent more attractive than any motor car or open porch. Will you allow us to prove that you can say the same thing of your theatre this summer—this month!

It puts the free, fresh air to work

The quiet Lakeside takes the free fresh air of the outdoors and compels it to cool and freshen the theatre because of a new ventilating principle exclusive to the quiet Lakeside.

So engineers endorse the quiet Lakeside highly. All metal and compact, it has G. E. low speed motor, S K F ball bearings, Tex-rope drive and other costly features that insure efficient operation and long life—that make its dollar for dollar value by long odds the highest in the ventilating field. Yet its price, ready for easy installation, is the lowest known in this business.

The quiet Lakeside circulates more fresh air and distributes it better. It runs for years with no more attention than occasional greasing of the Tex-rope drive. But we want you to have the quiet Lakeside itself prove its advantages in actual service in your theatre. So mail coupon.

because It keeps them COOL

For quick action— use coupon

We could never hope to make all the quiet Lakesides that exhibitors would want this summer if every exhibitor knew what a winner and a wonder the quiet Lakeside is. So, at present, we are limiting reservations strictly to inquiries received from our advertising in this and similar publications. Thus, for you to mail the coupon to us is simply your protection. It does not obligate you in the slightest. It only puts you on our "preference" list—assuring that you will get a quiet Lakeside should you decide you want one.

No sum which you might invest in a ventilator could get you anything better than the quiet Lakeside. It easily pays for itself in a year. As simple protection of your business, therefore, we advise that you fill out the coupon and mail it now.

Personalities, Titles, Vanities

By William A. Johnston

ONE of the foremost executives in the business replies at length to last week's editorial on—Mergers, Economy Gestures and Pictures.

His letter, I believe, should be published. But he writes it not for this purpose; rather it is, by all signs, an honest and spontaneous expression from a man facing a big problem and earnestly seeking a solution.

* * * *

However, we can at least repeat the points he makes.

He says that a great drive for econmy is on. It may be real or not. Probably it will be overdone; the reform pendulum always swings too far. But eventually there will be real economy. Economic forces, grinding slowly but surely, will bring it about, regardless of personalities, titles and vanities.

* * * *

He is right. The one sure thing about business, the one bet you can safely put all your money on is economic law. It works as simply and surely—if not as quickly—as the law of gravity.

Of course, we'd like to have it work more quickly.

And right here bobs up — personalities, titles and vanities.

The present extravagances are the result of personalities, titles and vanities—just these!

Put your finger on this one point and you put it on the seat of trouble. You give the direct answer to the query, which the investing public will continue to ask about this business until their whispers will become a tumult, namely—why does so great an invested capital yield the smallest return in the industrial world?

Personalities, titles and vanities are responsible, I repeat, for the present situation within this business.

And the present situation won't be corrected until this trinity is given a swift, sure and successful kick in the pants.

When you speak of personalities, titles, vanities, you can always add another factor,—salaries.

Swollen salaries.

If the absurd salaries paid in this business were reduced to the level of those paid in other—and similar—businesses, a good dividend could be paid on invested capital.

In other businesses a man is said to get what he is worth: in this business we say a man is worth it if he gets it.

If someone will tell us why a minor executive in this field, a man for whom it is often difficult to pick a non-conflicting title, should get a salary as large, or even twice as large as the President of the Pennsylvania Railroad, we in turn will tell the world how to shave a lot of millions off the motion picture overhead.

Then there are bonuses, commissions, percentages—in addition to salaries!

What is it all about?

There are personalities—and personalities.

We deal, it is commonly said, in personalities.

Sure we do.

At the box-office!

Anything we can sell at the box-office is a commodity. And the price paid for a commodity is a matter of supply and demand. We'll pay what it's worth.

So we cannot quarrel with box-office names.

But what about the names that don't sell at the box-office?

We've got an awful lot of them. And an awful lot of them get awful salaries.

We are open to reason where genuine productive ability is concerned. The few men who, in every industry, do big things are worth big money. Often they are really underpaid. But just what is, what can be, the super ability in our own industry that draws so many super salaries?

* * * *

It's time to be frank.

Frank and honest and sincere.

And the fact is this: at a time when the competition in the making of pictures — good, salable pictures — should be far keener than it has ever been, we are competing about personalities, titles, vanities — and salaries.

That's the trouble with the motion picture business.

WILLIAM A. JOHNSTON.

The Week in Review

Comment on Passing Affairs

HALSEY, Stuart and Company of Chicago has published a new booklet which outlines to the public the merits of motion picture stock in highly complimentary terms.

The booklet first traces the development of the "living picture" idea from the earliest times up to the invention of the motion picture camera by Thomas A. Edison in 1888, and the perfection, by George Eastman, of a flexible film the same year, which would feed rapidly both through the camera and an exhibition machine. It points out that a remarkable coincidence is that neither of these men knew of the work of the other, yet, within a few months, their contributions had been joined in the production of the first moving picture on modern principles. The title of the booklet is "The Motion Picture Industry as a Basis for Bond Financing." The introduction reads in part as follows:

"It is time that the American people, who know and appreciate their 'Movies' so well, as investors, become better acquainted with the Motion Picture Industry, its tremendous proportions, its financial structure, its prospects. And as the investor goes back-stage, literally 'behind the screens', to examine this vibrant new industry which makes possible his favorite form of recreation and education, he will not only find an industry of much larger dimensions than he anticipated, but one which is much more efficient, much better integrated, and more thoroughly seasoned than he could have imagined."

In a chapter "Looking Ahead In The Industry," the booklet shows very clearly that there are tremendous possibilities for the motion picture in the future, not only in its present form of an entertainment for people, but also in the fields of education and industry. The booklet says:

"There are vast unchartered opportunities ahead for the expansion of motion pictures into industrial, governmental, religious, and health work. American export manufacturers, as well as foreign competitors, have been amazed by the tremendous business-building potency of the foreign showing of American pictures. What the people of the world see their screen heroes wear, and eat, and use, they want for themselves. They demand these things at their stores. Business follows the film much more dependably than it follows the flag. Hence the government and industrial leaders are bound to use motion pictures on vastly larger scale, both for advertising purposes at home, and to carry American goods abroad."

The booklet is concluded with a discussion of the sound basis for financing which the industry affords and a brief description of Paramount Famous-Lasky Corporation, Fox Film Corporation, Fox Theatres Corporation, Loew's, Incorporated, Universal Pictures Company, Inc., and Universal Chain Theatres, Inc.

UNDER the caption of "Is the War Overdone?" Kinematograph Weekly has the following to say regarding the British production plans which contain a 25 per cent quota of war films:

"Are we making too many war films? A fine picture in any setting will attract widely. Whether British producers are relying too much on war subjects is another matter.

"In our long list of new home productions on another page about 25% are war stories, and there is a risk that the public may tire of the eternal battle footage, however well done. A more serious handicap is the attitude of Whitehall, which is still reluctant to grant service facilities except for frankly patriotic pictures of a semi-historical type. Officialdom has still to appreciate that story and personality appeal are the best clothing for national propaganda."

JUST as we are going to press we hear an amusing anecdote concerning Col. Lindbergh, which shows very well the absence of any change in his natural modesty—and also something of the extent of the fame which the motion picture, through the newsreel, has been widely instrumental in bringing about.

A benefit for the mothers of Nungesser and Coli was held at the Roxy theatre on Wednesday night, with Lindbergh as the stellar attraction. Roxy, who had met Lindbergh at the Press Club affair in Washington, was chatting and joking with him, and said:

"Lindy, if you could have any one wish you wanted to make gratified, what would you wish for?"

Without hesitation the young colonel replied:

"I'd just like to drop down in my ship in some little town somewhere, where I was absolutely unknown, so that I could get a little rest."

Fox Nine Leads Movie League

FOX FILMS, baseball nine, motion picture champions of 1926, forged to the front in this year's race on Saturday when they defeated United Artists by an 18 to 15 score. Pathe dropped back to a triple tie for second position with First National, Warner Bros., each team having won two out of three games.

The Fox victory against U. A. was achieved with a team composed practically of reserves, 15 young Foxites getting their chance to play in a league game. Heavy hitters were Manager Ed. Freedman of Fox with 4 timely singles, while the rival twirlers—Klein of Fox and Carson of U. A., each hit safely five times. Weiner, Kizis and Furst collected three singles apiece. A lively double play was made by Klein, Kizis and Owens of Fox.

Features of the Warner-Pathe game which Warner won 14-6, were the homers by Morris of Warners and Isaac of Pathe.

Witwer Returns to Hollywood

H. C. WITWER, the well known novelist and humorist, returned to Hollywood this week after a three weeks' sojourn in New York.

The famous author's brief visit to the city was not a particularly happy one, insomuch as he was confined to his bed for the greater part of the time with a bad cold and an ulcerated tooth.

Witwer has authored several features and the majority of the short subjects produced and released by F. B. O., among them "Her Father Said No," starring Mary Brian, "The Telephone Girl," "Fighting Blood," "Bill Grimm's Prog-

A Stellar Extra

"WANT to make seven dollars and a half?'' asked Henry King of Rod LaRocque.

''Why not!'' answered Rod.

''I need more people in this scene,'' King explained, pointing to a set used in making 'The Magic Flame' for Samuel Goldwyn. All you have to do is stand back there in the crowd and watch Ronald Colman drive away in his automobile.''

All went off smoothly. The camera was grinding, the motor was started, and Ronald Colman started to shift gears.

And then Cecil B. DeMille walked on the set. Having Vilma Banky's fiance under an exclusive contract, Mr. DeMille was amazed, to say the least, to see Rod working in someone else's picture.

LaRocque got $7.50; and Samuel Goldwyn and Ronald Colman agreed that in DeMille's next LaRocque picture, Ronald Colman will appear as ''mob stuff'' for $7.50.

Another Convention

MORE than a score of cameramen who comprise the foreign staff of the Paramount News recently held a banquet at Drouant, France. These men were brought to Paris by the Paramount News to formulate plans for the issuance of the Paramount News. The meeting served the same purpose abroad as the convention held by the American representatives who convened at the Hotel Roosevelt recently.

Many distinguished guests attended the dinner which was presided over by S. R. Sozio, head of the Paramount News European staff. Other noted guests were Adolph Zukor, President of Paramount; Albert A. Kaufman, manager of the Paramount theatres in Europe; Ike Blumenthal, Paramount manager in Central Europe and Adolph Osso, Paris manager.

This is how the remarkable scenes showing Chico and Diane ascending the stairs in "Seventh Heaven" (Fox Films) were made. The unique effect attracted a great deal of comment at the New York opening

Wanda's Narrow Escape

LAST Thursday morning Wanda Wiley, motion picture actress, narrowly escaped death in Dallas, Texas, when she was saved from a flame swept sleeping porch by B. C. Hilton, a disabled fireman, who carried Miss Wiley to safety despite the fact that the flames had already burned through a partition within a few feet of her bed. Mr. Hilton was offered a movie contract, which he refused to accept the appointment of Fire Captain in the City of Dallas.

Texas "Steers"

ALL Hollywood is laughing these days over the first of Will Rogers' titles preliminary to his being starred in ''A Texas Steer,'' the Sam E. Rork special feature production for First National Pictures, based on the old Charles H. Hoyt stage success.

The titles were used in a trailer shown at the recent First National sales convention in Hollywood, and were intended to give the sales officials some idea of what to expect from ''A Texas Steer.'' Rogers, incidentally, will do the titles for ''A Texas Steer,'' too.

Here are some of the titles:

''Sam E. Rork nominates WILL ROGERS for Congress in 'A Texas Steer.'

''Boys, meet Will Rogers, HIMSELF'' (Closeup of Will Rogers).

''Hello, folks . . . (Long shot of Rogers) . . . sorry I'm not with you tonight, but I'm headin' this way to go to work.

''Sam picked ME because all Hollywood's leading men have got morality clauses in their contracts . . . and are afraid to act like Congressmen.

''Richard Wallace is my director. If 'A Texas Steer' is as good as his 'McFadden's Flats,' the country'll be safe for Democracy—because Congress will die laughing.'

''Sam's got REAL troupers for the acting parts; I'm just the Follies' graduate—with sex appeal.

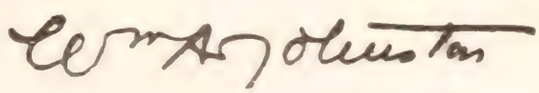
''Anyhow, it looks like a great picture . . . and it ought to clean up everything—except politics . . . s'long, have a good time, boys.''

Production of ''A Texas Steer'' starts in Washington, D. C., about August 1.

Short Feature Service Guide

Newsreel Number

THIS issue of the Short Feature Service Guide is largely devoted to newsreels, for the reason that the events of the past few weeks have brought the topical film very much to the fore. The heroic exploit of a modest youth named Lindbergh is not only the greatest news story of the age but the greatest newsreel subject, and it has given a prominence to the news film such as not even the World War lent it.



Many exhibitors at the Columbus convention stated that they had made more money on the newsreels of Lindbergh's arrival in Europe than on any feature within their recollection, and that never had their patrons shown such intense interest in any film. Exchanges report that for the first time in their history exhibitors were calling up for a newsreel.

Not less than $100,000, and perhaps a good bit more, was spent by the four newsreel organizations in filming Colonel Lindbergh and in distributing special releases—a sum considerably greater than they are likely to get back.

This brings us to a curious situation. No branch of the motion picture industry works more zealously or with a more lavish hand than the newsreel companies — yet newsreels are not money-making propositions. The actual profit last year, we happen to know, of one of the two most financially successful newsreels was just 4½ per cent. on the gross business—a pitifully meagre return for the energy and effort put forth. A Broadway house which pays $8,000 for its feature each week recently offered $50 a week for a leading newsreel.

It is probably true that the average run of newsreels do not have the direct box-office value of some other subjects, but it is also mighty important to satisfy your patrons after you get them in, and we know of nothing that will contribute to that more consistently and dependably than a good newsreel.

Now, with two new newsreels entering the field, there is a danger evident of cut-throat, price-cutting competition. A lowering of the scale of rentals would mean a temporary benefit to exhibitors, but if it brings the lowering of quality and service which usually follows such a war, it will mean a serious loss to exhibitors and public alike. When you buy a newsreel, you are buying the services of a world-wide organization—and a good newsreel is worth a live and let live price.

World's Fastest Moving Laboratory

How International Newsreel and the Pennsylvania Railroad Broke a World's Speed Record to tell the World About Lindbergh

ANOTHER world's speed record was shattered on Saturday, June 11, when a special train over the Pennsylvania Railroad operated for International Newsreel covered the 226 miles from Washington to New York in 187 minutes, or three hours and seven-sixtieths. The previous record was three hours and forty-one minutes.

The specially brought International Newsreel's pictures of Lindbergh's reception in Washington, which were developed, printed, edited and cut in a specially equipped laboratory in a baggage car, and delivered to the leading Broadway theatres and shown ten minutes after they reached Pennsylvania station. The record-breaking train left Washington 1:14 P. M. daylight-saving time, and reached the Pennsylvania Station in New York at 4:21 P. M.

The International Newsreel special made the trip without a stop, except at Manhattan Transfer to change to an electric engine. The fastest mile on the record-making trip was made just east of Baltimore when a mile was covered in the amazing time of 33 seconds. The train was in charge of L. J. Ahern, conductor. The engineer was Harry Andrews and the fireman A. L. Hayden.

For more than a week William Pedrick, Jr., General Passenger Agent of the Pennsylvania Railroad and Sam Reiter, District Passenger Agent, worked out the elaborate plans for the record-breaking run. It meant clearing the tracks of all other traffic and securing special dispensations from half a dozen counties—Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania and New Jersey—in which speed limits for railroads are rigidly maintained.

The laboratory car was fitted up by International Newsreel in the Sunnyside yards, and sent to Washington on Thursday night. The train, which consisted of the engine, laboratory car and a day coach as ballast, was made up on Saturday morning and held in readiness at Pennsylvania Station at Washington for the motion pictures of the great Lindbergh reception, which were made by a staff of fourteen International Newsreel cameramen. It included: J. C. Brown and George Dorsey of the Washington Bureau; Norman Alley of the Chicago Bureau; Nelson Edwards of the Baltimore Bureau and the following members of the New York staff: Herman Stockhoff, John Bockhorst, Jerry Fraenkel, Jack Lieb, William Hearfield, Jack Whipple, Clarence Albers, Charles Fetter and Charles Mack.

As soon as the special pulled out at 1:14 o'clock a staff of four developers and printers under Charles Tronclone, took the great quantity of negative which, when developed and printed, was edited and cut by four members of International Newsreel's editorial staff, S. T. Moore, C. R. Collins, Leonard Mitchell and Norman Reinhart.

The Newsreel Story of the Age

How the Lindbergh Saga Appeared to the Head of a Topical Organization, as Told to L. C. Moen

By Ray Hall
(Editor, Pathe News)

THE epic flight of Col. Lindbergh has been called the greatest story of this age—from a literary as well as a news viewpoint—and rightly so. During the days when he was preparing for the flight, he remarked to a young mechanic with whom he had become friendly: "Kid, if the newspapers print anything about this hop of mine, will you save me a clipping?" The day following his return to New York, six papers alone in one day printed the staggering total of 81 pages of type and photos about this still modest youth.

But if the newspapers extended themselves, the newsreel organizations were not behind. The cold facts are that Pathe News spent upwards of $35,000 in special effort to cover and distribute the story; that airplanes delivering prints of his arrival in Paris traveled three times the distance flown by Col. Lindbergh; that the total amount of film devoted to him was roughly 7,430,000 feet of sensitized celluloid—something like two million feet more than has ever been used on the much photographed Prince of Wales.

There is a more colorful side to the affair than this, however. Suppose we follow the story from day to day as it grew under the eye of a newsreel editor.

When Byrd and Chamberlin announced their definite intentions of attempting the Paris flight, the Pathe News "death watch" took up its stand at Mitchel and Roosevelt fields, which meant that every hour out of the twenty-four cameramen were at the fields awaiting action. Bit by bit the stage was being set for the Lindbergh saga. Davis and Wooster were killed during a trial flight, bringing home to the public the danger involved in flying such a ship—an impression deepened by the less serious Byrd accident.

Then the brave Nungesser-Coli attempt, with the days of suspense and mystery which followed, planting in the public mind the dangers of storm and sleet which faced a pilot over the cold Atlantic.

The public began to be impatient of its American entrants, hampered by restrictions, litigation, controversy and such delays. The public wanted action, not injunctions. The stage was set.

When Lindbergh hopped off in San Diego, not a camera whirred. His clean-cut flight to St. Louis won a little newspaper space—but to the public "Lindbergh" was still just a name (frequently mispronounced "Lindenbergh"). Just an unheard of air mail pilot who was foolish enough to think he could compete with $100,000 expeditions. The christening of his now immortal plane "The Spirit of St. Louis" was photographed by Pathe News and released "for St. Louis only." Before this was showing he had hopped off for New York.

The death watch at Mitchel field good-naturedly photographed the arrival of this pleasant-faced youth. After all, he might. . . .

A few more days, and while the other pilots continued to delay Lindbergh calmly prepared to fly. He won the newspaper men, weary of bickerings, at once, and they began broadcasting their impressions of his likeable personality. The public began cheering quietly for him to win. Pathe News cameramen photographed his preparations, his ship, his mother.

Then, one Friday morning, an alarm clock rang, Lindbergh arose after two hours' sleep, the plane was towed to Roosevelt field—and the time for action by the death watch had come. Even in the take-off perfect drama prevailed. Once the ship left the ground—back it [illegible] and [illegible] again, the [illegible] and [illegible]—finally that fliers on the field turned away rather than witness the tragedy. But up and up he went—and soon audiences were seeing in Pathe News the next chapter in the story. Followed thirty-three and a half hours of the most tense waiting and suspense the world has even known. Pathe News prepared and rushed to all exchanges a 30-foot bulletin announcing his safe arrival, and held it for the A. P. flash that Lindbergh had arrived—and the world began breathing again.

Following that came the most feverish period ever gone through by the newsreel organizations. The landing in Paris and the events which followed were filmed by Pathe men—missed the Cedric—caught the Majestic—were raced from the Battery to the laboratory—came in first on Broadway—and were rushed to all corners of the country by airplane (at a cost of nearly $6,000). Another group of scenes in Paris—then the departure for home—getting a Pathe News man on the Memphis after straightening out complications—the arrival and ceremonies in Washington, flown to New York by plane at 135 miles an hour—and finally that unforgettable day in Manhattan when Lindbergh received the greatest welcome ever given any individual in the history of the world, cheered by three million frantically enthusiastic men, women and children as he moved up the island—with 24 Pathe News men fighting with the crowd to photograph it and him.

Probably the newsreel organizations hope that no especially big stories break for a week or so, at least. They need too badly to catch up on sleep, and get a nice long rest.

Will Movie Houses Show Movies Again?

Will Stage Acts Wane With New Short Subject Competition

FOR two or three years the large theatres of the country have been moving steadily away from motion pictures and toward vaudeville in the guise of presentations. One Broadway house last week barely mentioned the feature in its advertising, and in its publicity frankly stated that it was the least important item on the bill. That situation has resulted in a greatly lessened use of short subjects in first run houses, to the detriment of short feature producers.

Will that situation change? Will intense short feature competition this year, with two theatre-owning distributors embarking on short subject seas, result in more "shorts" and fewer stage acts in these houses? There are signs that it will, that motion picture houses will return one of these days to featuring motion pictures.

The Metropolitan theatre, the only downtown Stanley-Crandall house in Washington, D. C., last January dropped presentations entirely and reverted to a straight-picture policy, with a lowered admission scale.

The company stated that so many of its patrons had disapproved of stage pres-

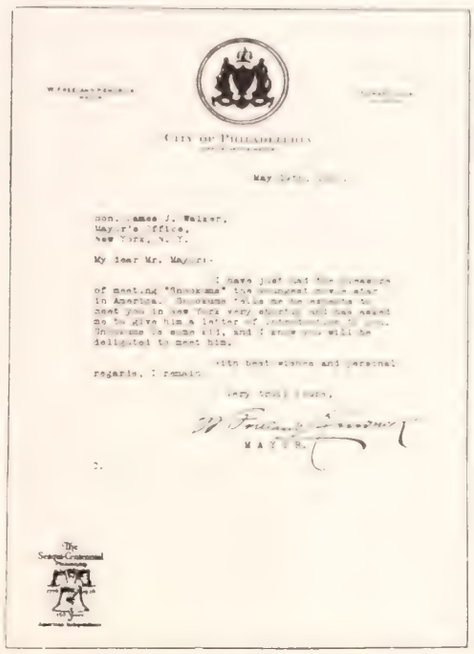
Pictorial Record of How "Snookums," Stern Starlet, Was Received on Tour

The Newlyweds and Their Exploitation

Coast-to-Coast Tour of "Snookums" McKeen Proves of Genuine and Unexpected Value as Short Feature Promotion Campaign



THE personal appearance tour of the Stern Brothers baby star, Lawrence McKeen, better known as Snookums of "The Newlyweds and Their Baby" comedies, may be regarded as one of the most remarkable exploitation campaigns ever put over on behalf of a short feature personage. Not only by reason of the extraordinary amount of newspaper and other publicity achieved, but also by the general public interest in the baby and the reaction upon the demand for comedies featuring the baby, has the tour been outstanding.

It is estimated by Abe Stern, vice-president of Stern Film Corporation, that the tour has more than doubled the demand for these comedies, taking the country as a whole, as a reflex from the country-wide publicity the baby has received. In the principal cities in which he made personal appearances, the demand has more than trebled. This demand starts right with the public, whose interest has been aroused by the numerous stunts and cute tricks the baby has demonstrated during the tour. In other words, the tour has had the highly desired result of "selling" the young star to the public in no uncertain way and of creating a real box-office value.

The baby was brought East in the first instance with the sole idea of having him meet the Universal salesmen and exchange managers, assembled in convention in Chicago this spring. The city of Chicago appropriated the baby, however, and received him with all the ceremony ordinarily reserved for royal guests. The papers gave liberally of their front pages to chronicle his doings.

This extraordinary reception opened the eyes of all concerned, and an extensive Middle Western and Eastern tour for the baby was projected. From Chicago the youngster visited the following cities: Milwaukee, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Detroit, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Washington, Atlantic City, Bridgeport, Newark and New York. On his return trip to the Coast he will stop in St. Louis, Kansas City and Denver. In many of these cities he made personal appearances in important theatres.

The outstanding event of the tour, and the one which netted the youngster the most publicity, was his visit to the White House to see and meet President Coolidge. It was an unique occasion, in which the President unbent and romped a bit with the frolicsome youngster, while cameras clicked and newsreels rolled. Pictures of the unusual party appeared in almost all of the newsreels and in rotogravures and on front pages from Coast to Coast. It was perhaps the most effective single incident ever tied-up with a screen star.

CITY OF PHILADELPHIA

May 24th, 1927.

Hon. James J. Walker,
Mayor's Office,
New York, N. Y.

My dear Mr. Mayor:-

I have just had the pleasure of meeting "Snookums" the youngest movie star in America. Snookums tells me he is going to visit you in New York very shortly and has asked me to give him a letter of introduction to you. Inasmuch as such is the case, I am very delighted to grant him.

With best wishes and personal regards, I remain,

Very truly yours,

W. Freeland Kendrick
MAYOR.

"Letter of introduction" to Mayor Walker of New York given "Snookums" by the Mayor of Philadelphia

In almost every city, the baby was escorted in style to the Mayor's office and extended the courtesies of the City. He visited newspaper offices, joined the various newspaper "Kiddie Clubs," was feted in leading department stores and held receptions in various places. Thousands of people crowded to see him at every point. His arrival in New York, and the parade of autos from the station to the Universal home office, alone was witnessed by more than 50,000 people who crowded the side-walks and windows along the route, almost mobbing the car in which the baby stood waving and throwing kisses to the crowd.

The starlet was presented from several broadcasting stations, including KDKA in Pittsburgh, and "took the air" himself for a few minutes of baby talk and kid stunts. His stage appearances had all the pep and appeal of a good vaudeville act, the baby going through a series of stunts with his father, L. D. McKeen of Los Angeles, that never failed to bring down the house.

The most remarkable phases of the tour were the continued good humor of the youngster and his readiness to pose for pictures, to "do his stuff" and to smile at those crowding around him. Of course, his health was carefully guarded and his parents saw to it that he got a certain number of hours' rest every day, including his afternoon nap. Much of the smoothness of the tour was due to the work of Charles Lachenbruch, veteran exploiter, who managed the trip.

Snookums is now on his way West. After several stops, he will arrive in Los Angeles, where, after a short rest, work will start on the new series of "The Newlyweds and Their Baby" comedies, to be released next season as Universal Junior Jewel pictures.

Movies in Theatres

entations that the requests could not be ignored. Short subjects are again being featured at the house. Shortly after this move was announced, the Stanley-Crandall company issued this statement:

"Never in its history has an announcement of a proposed action on the part of the Stanley-Crandall organization elicited so immediate and enthusiastic a response from the public as the statement of the change in policy and reduction of prices at the Metropolitan theatre. Commendatory messages poured in upon the management of the Metropolitan and the company's executives throughout the week, indicating a strong public preference for the straight picture policy upon which the fame and popularity of the Metropolitan were builded."

Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld, in announcing the policy which he will carry out at the Colony theatre in New York, when he takes over its management for Universal on September 1, said:

"I am going to be a true servant of the motion picture. The picture shall be first, last and all the time. In presentations, everything else will be only a temporary means of catching the eye or the attention of the audience and of getting them into the theatre and of supplying a musical and colorful or emotional frame for the motion picture itself.

"For instance, I don't want to give opera in the Colony unless it lends itself to the feature of the moment. With some pictures, bits of opera or operatic music will fit perfectly into place.

"No nation in the world is so hungry for sensations, or so fickle in taste. America lives at a quick pace, and its taste changes just as quickly. Thus, I shall devote a great deal of time to the discovery of novelties, both in pictures as well as in presentation. I am going to Europe soon to spend the summer. Naturally I will seek novelties over there for use at the Colony next fall.

"I am also going to pay great attention to Short Stories, and give them every encouragement. Their presentation will be handled with the same care as features. Why not? The short subject producer

Wise Theatre Managers Exploit Their Short Features, Too

The Madrid Theatre, Kansas City, Mo., one of the largest and finest theatres in the Midwest, played a Pathe All Comedy Circus program, consisting of twelve reels of laugh-films recently and scored heavily. The pictures presented were: "Atta Boy," starring Monty Banks; "Never Weaken" with Harold Lloyd; "Hubby's Quiet Little Game," a Mack Sennett comedy, and an Aesop's Film Fable. A concrete example of the effective results that may be obtained through the exhibitor's application of the sure-fire exploitation suggestions supplied in the Pathe All Comedy Circus book, was shown by Manager Tunney of the Madrid, whose entire campaign embraced ideas presented in this helpful volume. The main feature of the Madrid's exploitation of this Pathe All Comedy Circus, was the attractive manner in which the theatre front, lobby and foyer were dressed during the showing. Every one of the ideas used was derived from the Pathe Circus Book. Lending themselves admirably to extensive displays, the large theatre front and marquee were decorated with cutouts of clowns, special circus cutouts and lobby frames containing stills from the various comedies, in all giving the theatre a flashy carnival appearance. The lights on the marquee read: "Our First Big Comedy Circus Featuring Harold Lloyd, Monty Banks and others." Atop the marquee a gigantic head of Harold Lloyd was posted. In the spacious outside lobby of the Madrid over the three entrances, barrels were placed with circus colors draped behind them, in two of which Harold Lloyd cutouts stood. The barrels carried the Lettering, Pathe All Comedy Circus, and Barrels of Fun. Against the walls three large cutouts appeared, two of Harold Lloyd, and one of a circus clown. Arranged for the foyer was a novel display which included two standing cutouts representing circus performers

How Lindbergh Put Newsreels Over

Unusually Fair Analysis of What All Services Did for Exhibitors and Public, By Fox News Director-in-Chief,

Truman Talley

IF anything were needed to directly focus the attention of the general public, and particularly the exhibitors, upon the importance and indispensibility of newsreels, the trans Atlantic flights have supplied that need.

The past three weeks have witnessed probably the greatest display of newsreel energy and enterprise in the history of the industry, all to one purpose—that the exhibitors of the nation might be able to show their public as quickly as possible and as completely as possible the living scenes portraying probably the greatest, and certainly the most dramatic, news events in modern history.

Rival claims of the various newsreels are dimmed by the greater significance of the joint service rendered to exhibitors and to the public by all the newsreels. On some phases of the Lindbergh-Chamberlin-Byrd expeditions, some newsreels were first to the screen; on other phases, other newsreels were first. The essential fact remains that each and every newsreel did its utmost to render service, each reel utilizing the services of virtually every member of its staff and each newsreel sparing no expense to transmit the pictures to the screen in the shortest possible time.

So far as Fox News is concerned, suffice it to say that we have been flooded with so many telegrams and letters of congratulation from exhibitors on the different newsreel subjects issued on the different phases of this one great story that it has been virtually impossible to attempt to reproduce or publicize in full all this comment—and this week we are expressing our appreciation for all this comment through the medium of an ad-advertisement in the trade papers. Added to such messages from exhibitors, we have received press clippings totalling thousands of words on the arrival and reception of our Lindbergh subjects in different parts of the country.

One key center exhibitor frankly stated in a telegram that the pictures of Lindbergh's arrival in Paris, which constituted an entire issue of Fox News, "stocked my theatre to capacity for every performance." The greatest feature picture ever made could do no more.

The point is obvious. The day is past when an exhibitor can safely ignore or minimize the necessity and importance of the newsreel. It is of course physically impossible to estimate with any accuracy the amount of money the Lindbergh newsreel pictures meant to exhibitors as a whole throughout the country, but it is safe to say that literally millions of people were drawn to the motion picture theatres in the last two or three weeks because of their expectation of seeing Lindbergh in Paris, in London, in Washington or in New York.

The underlying reason, of course, for the tremendous public interest in these pictures was Lindbergh's feat itself—yet by what other means than the newsreel can the stirring news of the day be brought within the range of vision of everyone? Any student of the motion picture industry knows that the last few years have witnessed tremendous strides not only in the production of newsreels but in the popularity and public appreciation of newsreels. The Lindbergh story proves this, not only to the close student but to any casual observer.

Above and beyond the presentation of such stirring news events as Lindbergh's flight through the medium of newsreels as we know them today, the significance of the "talking newsreel" gained tremendous impetus through the same news event. Fox News' presentation through Movietone of the Lindbergh and Chamberlin take-offs, the review of West Point Cadets and other subjects, startling as they were when presented in the Roxy and Harris Theatres in New York, was completely over-shadowed by the talking pictures of President Coolidge welcoming Lindbergh home and decorating him with the Distinguished Flying Cross. An adequate description of this sensation is difficult, because there are no known standards for comparison. In the parlance of the business, it "knocked them over," and at various high points of the Coolidge address and the Lindbergh re-

[illegible] the applause of the audience was so certain that the reproduction of the sound was drowned. The theatre-going public is not accustomed to such a thrill. It will take a long time for them to become accustomed to such gripping and emotion-producing pictures.

I think it is fair to say that Fox News, having recently learned to talk, is the most talked about newsreel. Speculation is rife as to what it is going to do with its new found tongue. As far as Fox News' editorial staff is concerned, the time for wonderment is past. We have welcomed the Movietone tongue and we are using it as another means for us to report more completely the new and interesting in the world about us to the vast motion picture theatre audiences.

In other words, Fox News will "talk" when it has something to say. Whenever anything occurs that can be photographed which will be more interesting and entertaining when accompanied by sound, we will spare no effort to see that it is done. We are working and planning for many things and the time is not far distant when every issue of Fox News will have one or more subjects with sound accompaniment.

There are many exciting moments in store for the patrons of theatres equipped to project Movietone Fox News. From the sporting world we can safely promise thrill after thrill; from the mouths of statesmen and diplomats Fox News will bring messages of import to every theatre audience; from the White House and Capitol Hill, from the seat of the League of Nations and the World Court, voice and picture will be brought to the motion picture theatre.

Movies in Theatres

has put as much care and thought into his 500- or 1,000-foot subject as the feature producer has put, proportionately, into his 8,000-foot picture.

"I do not expect to go in for elaborate spectacles. They are rarely in tune with the feature picture, which must always be borne in mind as the main reason for the show, and, in fact for the very theatre itself and for the audience. I hope to develop new artists, instrumental and otherwise.

"In brief, I mean to make the Colony theatre a mecca for those New Yorkers who want to see excellent pictures presented under the most favorable conditions."

Paramount News Is On the Way

At right: Emanuel Cohen, head of Paramount News and short feature production; below: Paramount News cameramen at their recent convention in New York City, showing some of the new equipment.

ALTHOUGH it will not start releasing until July 31, the Paramount News organization is already functioning as efficiently and speedily and comprehensively as though its newsreel were being rushed out to the theatres of the world twice weekly. A visit to the office of Emanuel Cohen, editor of Paramount News, this week revealed the fact that during the past two months of "silent operation" its cameramen have covered more than one thousand news stories, each of which has been developed, printed, edited, titled and filed away. The Lindbergh story was covered thoroughly and, while the interviewer was seated in Mr. Cohen's office, word came that the Olympic was bringing 400 feet of Chamberlin and Levine in Kottbus. A Paramount News man was on the Memphis with Lindbergh.

Much of this film will be of value as "library," but more than that, Mr. Cohen wants to be absolutely sure that when Paramount News starts releasing the organization will be already working smoothly and at top speed. His men are stationed in all corners of the globe, each equipped with a new Debrie "Parvo" camera outfit, with an unusual complement of lenses. The department has a large number of Akeleys and slow motion cameras. Two conventions of newsreel photographers have been held, one in New York and one in Paris, for the first time.

Although Mr. Cohen is not ready to make announcement of it, it may be stated authoritatively that Paramount News will be tied up with the vast Associated Press organization, furnishing stills to the A. P. and receiving from it "tips" on news stories and other important co-operation.

The News Reel Speaks Again

Movietone and Phonofilm Record Lindbergh Episodes

IT is not often that a prediction is fulfilled within a few weeks. In last month's Short Feature section, in an article "The Eye-and-Ear Newsreel" by L. C. Moen, the development of the talking newsreel and its popularity was predicted and the synopsis of a hypothetical reel given. Among the subjects predicted were the take-off of a trans-Atlantic flight and a public reception. Almost before the ink was dry the Lindbergh take-off had been recorded by Movietone and shown at the Roxy to audiences who cheered themselves hoarse, and as this is being written the Roxy is showing the presentation of the Congressional Medal to Lindbergh by President Coolidge in Washington, recorded by Fox Case Movietone, while the Capitol is showing a similar subject made by De Forest Phonofilm.

Perhaps it would be interesting to follow the steps used in filming the latter event by the "Movietone Truck," or portable outfit, in charge of E. I. Sponable, technical director of Movietone.

The microphones for gathering the records were strung on the large frame containing other microphones for radio broadcasting, which was immediately in front of the speakers on the President's stand at the Washington Monument. From the two microphones, placed one at either end of this frame, wires led through a conduit underneath the speaker's stand to the camera stand at some distance away. This conduit was laid underground in order to insure safety and to prevent interference through accidental causes.

The amplifying chambers were set in a specially constructed small house directly beneath the elevated stand erected for the exclusive use of the cameramen. The Movietone camera and operator held a foremost position on the platform.

Specialization the Key to Success

By Jack White

Jack White, head of comedy production for Educational, who sees in specialization the answer to success in the making of short feature product, and believes a brilliant year is ahead.

SPECIALIZATION will always produce a better product than generalization. Specialization and concentration have always produced a superior article, whether the product was shoes, soap, tractors or motion pictures.

Add experience to specialization and concentration and the product is unbeatable.

Educational Studios, the largest and finest in the world devoted exclusively to the production of Short Features, we believe, are humming again with activity, concentrating on Short Features, specializing on Short Features, thinking, talking and making Short Features.

The first productions of Educational Studios for the fall releases on the Educational program are finished. The results of concentration, specialization and experience are more evident in them than in any product we have ever turned out, we feel.

One of the finest compliments ever paid to Short Features in recent years is the tacit acknowledgment by the multiple reel feature producing companies of the entertainment value of the idea contained in two-reel comedies. The appearance on the market within the past six months of several feature length comedies, which are, in effect, two-reel comedies stretched to feature length, seems to prove that the Short Feature producers were on the right road to entertainment value several years before the multiple reel feature producers.

But specialization and concentration have enabled the Short Feature producers to get this same entertainment value in the shorter pictures.

The value of a comedy, whether it is in two reels or in seven, is in the number of laughs it contains. A given number of laughs stretched out over six or seven reels, is weak medicine when compared to a Short Feature which packs the same number in less than a third of the screen running time. Specialization has enabled the Short Feature producers to make a concentrated product, packed with laughs, built on feature scale in everything but length, which gives the observer the same number of—and in many instances more—laughs than are contained in the six or seven thousand feet of a feature length comedy.

This year the product of Educational will be a little bit better, a little bit faster and a little bit funnier than that of any preceding year, is our promise. It may be hard to improve a product that has always been of consistent highest quality, but experience will tell in comedy producing as it always has told in every other business.

Short Feature Competition

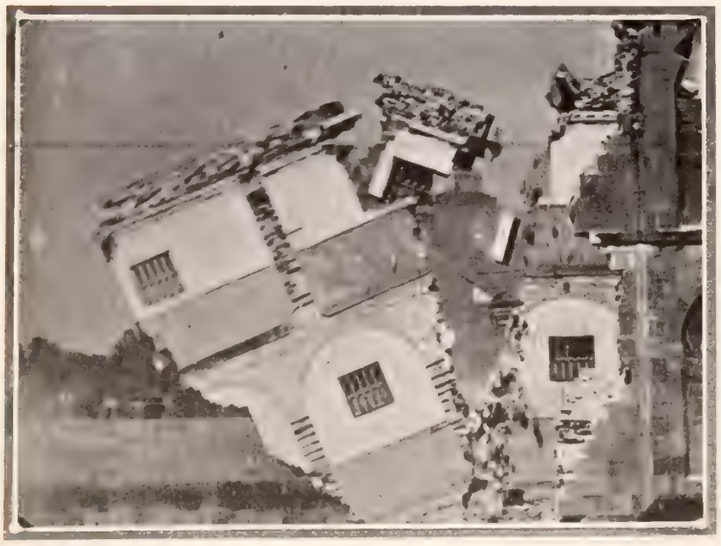
The Field as Viewed by the New Short Sales Manager of Fox

By E. T. Gomersall

BACKED by many years of expensive experimentation and a thorough understanding of the public's desires, Fox Films welcomes its new competitors in the one- and two-reel field, for they will serve as an added incentive to the production of superior short subjects. It has taken many years and a tremendous amount of money to bring together the forces now operating under the Fox banner, concentrating on the making of comedies, newsreels and Varieties, and we believe that the years of experience are evidenced in each subject released.

Particularly does it take a mighty long time to construct a successful newsreel organization. Fox News is an established institution that has for years paved the way for the others to follow. With its augmented force of cameramen and editorial specialists, the new season should mark its highest peak of achievement.

With George E. Marshall as the supervising director of the Fox comedy lot, working directly under the personal instruction of W. R. Sheehan, exhibitors are assured of the finest two-reel subjects the screen has to offer.



With Edwin C. Hill, recognized as one of America's foremost newspaper men, at the helm of Fox Varieties, this novel single reel, which is released every other week, is destined to continue its popularity. Daring and efficient cameramen are now located in the most out-of-the-way points of the earth.

Fox News, edited under the direction of Truman H. Talley, led all other newsreels along Entertainment Street during 1926-27, we believe, in the number of subjects used in the composite reels of the greatest theatres in America. Every effort will be made to surpass this marvelous performance during the coming year with the added lever of Movietone, making possible the most complete reporting of all great events.

As we said before, it takes a mighty long time, a tremendous amount of experimentation and an appalling expenditure to produce successful box office short subjects. That's why Fox one- and and two-reel pictures will again lead the field during 1927-28.

A Humorist Looks at the Movies

THE name "H. C. Witwer" is virtually synonymous with "F B O Short Subjects." For years the breezy two-reel series based on stories from his facile, if slangy, typewriter have been the backbone of the F B O short subject schedule. He did "The Leather Pushers," one of the most successful series ever made, for another company, and a feature, "The Great White Way," but the majority of his stories have gone out under the F B O label.

"The Fighting Bloods," "The Telephone Girl," "The Wisecrackers" and many others, and now the "Beauty Parlor" series, have been handled by this organization. On this year's schedule, in addition to two-reelers, are two features, "A Legionnaire in Paris" and another tentatively called "Sweet Adeline." He recently did another feature, "Her Father Said No." In all, he has had 15 two-reel series and two features filmed.

Professional humorists are, according to tradition, as solemn as the grave. Not so Mr. Witwer. His eyes are deep-set and serious, but his smile is frequent and engaging and his conversation teems with wit and humor. He does not have to go far afield and drag in stories he once heard to win a laugh, either. Every subject that comes up provides him with material for a "wisecrack" that comes spontaneously.

We found him particularly elated over a new contract with a leading national magazine which will bring him 75 cents a word.

"Just think," he said, "I write 'Hello, Kid!' There's a dollar and a half."

In striking contrast to that is his first story, sold to Snappy Stories 12 years ago for $5—and he says he spent $150 buying out that month's issue to send copies to all his friends.

Much of the vitality of his stories is due to the fact that he draws them directly from life, so far as characterizations go. During the writing of his most recent series, the "Beauty Parlor" stories, he had his wife pay frequent visits to such an establishment and report to him minutely the characters she observed and the conversation she heard.

Mr. Witwer does not believe that royalty contracts for film authors are practical. He tried it once, and says he received leters such as this: "Your royalties this month, $1,400. Your share of advertising expense, $500. Your share of exploitation, $500. (Etc., etc., etc.) Balance due us, $1.40. Please remit."

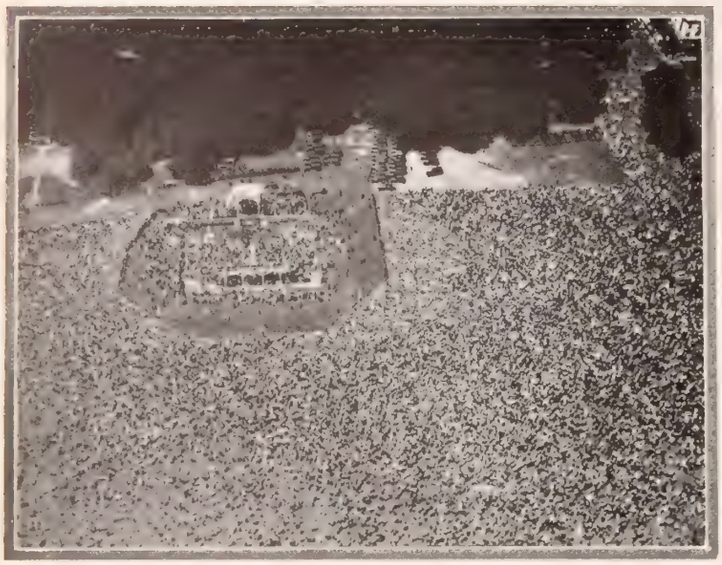
"No more royalty contracts for me," he concluded. "I can't afford them."

The Newsreel From the Sky

How Kinograms Used Baby Parachutes to Land Lindbergh Negative

KINOGRAMS, the news reel released by Educational, combined ingenuity with daring in rushing first pictures of the home coming of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh to New York City for showing in theatres on Broadway Saturday night and for the quickest possible service to the rest of the country. As soon as President Coolidge had pinned the Distinguished Flying Cross on Col. Lindbergh, the undeveloped negative showing this event and all preceding scenes of Lindbergh in Washington was grabbed by Fred Fordham, New York staff cameraman for Kinograms, and rushed to an airplane which was waiting with Casey Jones, famous stunt flier, in the pilot seat.

After a record flight from Washington to New York, Casey Jones and Fordham flew direct to Long Island City, where, without making a landing, Fordham dropped the negatives by means of a baby parachute. The unfinished negatives had been packed in excelsior in a large sack so that they would not be injured in the drop.



It required daring and skill on the part of Casey Jones to effect a perfect landing of the negatives. A vacant lot adjoining the Consolidated Film Laboratories at Long Island City was marked off by covering a part of the black square with a tarpaulin which had been white washed. Guided by this and by smoke pots which were burning on the roof of the laboratories, Jones swooped down in his plane dangerously near the vacant lot despite the close proximity of the buildings. Then the parachute bearing the negatives was let loose.

These negatives were taken to the Consolidated Laboratories where they were immediately developed, printed, edited and titled. Then the Kinograms pictures were rushed by special messenger to first run houses in New York City, New Jersey, Philadelphia, and parts of New England for Saturday night shows.

This procedure eliminated the loss of an hour to ninety minutes in getting the negative from Staten Island or some other landing field to the laboratories.

This first Kinograms special included views of the Memphis, carrying Lindbergh as it glided up the Potomac, his landing at the navy yard, his welcome in Washington and march in a military parade to the Washington Monument grounds and other incidents of the celebration up to the award of his medal by President Coolidge. In addition to the several cameramen stationed on the ground, two flew in airplanes—one to get pictures of his boat as it neared Washington and the other to shoot the festivities over the national capital. Kinograms had several New York staff men on hand in addition to the regular Washington cameramen.

Pictures of the latter part of the celebration in Washington were rushed to New York in another plane piloted by Charles Merrill, accompanied by James Lyons, a staff cameraman. The same procedure of landing the negatives by parachute in Long Island City was repeated later in the day by this other party.

Highlights of recent Fox Varieties, including "Glory That Was"

"Varieties" and Program Balance

The Story Back of the Making of These Diversified Novelties, Told By the Assistant Production Manager of Fox Varieties

Mary Pawling

EVERY year 20 Fox Varieties are produced to meet the steadily increasing demands of exhibitors for motion picture entertainment which will offer a contrast to the rest of their programs. Given a heavy dramatic feature, a hilarious two reel comedy and an especially exciting newsreel, you need a one-reeler that will offer entertainment of a quieter type, to send out the audience refreshed rather than tired. Or, given a long comedy feature, a two reeler and the newsreel and the program needs a little novelty subject or a beautiful scenic touched with human interest. Here are some of the many places where Fox Varieties completely fill the bill. They add a relief note with the something different that is so hard to find in short subjects, but which is always present in Varieties. They always have fine photography, good prints, and the titling is apt.

Varieties is now working on a series of "Know Your Own State" pictures, several of which have been released. These are justly very popular. The States like them for the splendid advertising value they have; they promote good will of exhibitors in the state and elsewhere. "My Own California," "Maryland My Maryland" are names which appeal to audiences for their familiar, sentimental value, and they await the picture eagerly, associating it with something which belongs to them, an intimacy, in fact—an "old home" appeal.

"The Arkansas Traveler" is the latest to be made in this series, and has this same appeal. The catchy old tune which supplies the name of the picture should be used with it. The reel opens with very good action material showing some of the early Arkansas travelers. It keeps up this action throughout. Variety is given by sequences on the best known industrial developments and natural resources, all very interesting and different. There are beautiful scenic bits scattered through the reel. Shots of an old fiddler in his native haunts playing for some children supplies a little sentimental comedy. Photography is invariably of highest quality, and the camera angles are exceptionally interesting. The picture is not in the least a sketch, but gives a complete picture of Arkansas, of good entertainment value, with good short titles blending in with the material.

(Editor's Note: Although she modestly refrains from saying so, Miss Pawling is herself the maker of many of the best of the Fox Varieties, and returned but recently from Arkansas where she made "The Arkansas Traveller" referred to in the preceding article.

After a subject is decided upon by Fox Films executives and Edwin C. Hill, director of Varieties, it is assigned to Miss Pawling if it is to be made within a reasonable radius of New York. She then communicates with various civic, municipal and commercial organizations in the state to which she is going and informs them of the plan to make a "Know Your Own State" film in their community.

Then, in company with her camera staff she proceeds to the statae in question and looks over the ground. The various regions to be filmed are mapped out and plans laid. The filming then proceeds as expeditiously as weather will permit, after which the unit returns to New York. Miss Pawling then edits and titles the material into its final shape—and another Varieties has been born.

Among the outstanding Fox Varieties releases which have been completed or which are near to completion from negative in the cutting rooms are:

"The Desert Blooms"—A beautiful photographic study of the one time desert, which has been made to bloom like the rose—the great Imperial Valley of the American Southwest.

"Whale Hunting"—A little pictorial epic of the life of the whale hunters of the storm tossed north Pacific.

"The Land of Evangeline"—Camera impressions of the quaint and picturesque country, wherein Longfellow placed the story of his memorable poem—Creole Land as it is to-day.

"Over the Andes"—Looking down from the roof of a continent with the llama and the condor.

"Colorful Italy"—Capri and the Bay of Naples [illegible] of the world's most beautiful playgrounds.

"[illegible] the beautiful—gypsies, clinking castanets, and dark eyes sparkling under mantillas.

"Under Colorado Skies"—The magnificent scenery of the Rocky Mountains of Colorado—the backbone of the American continent.

"Lights and Shadows of Sicily"—Camera adventures in the beautiful isle at the toe of Italy's boot.

"My Old Kentucky Home"—Kentucky today—a charming film story of the Bluegrass state, the land of fine horses and beautiful women.)

Handy Biographies for Use of Theatre Managers and Publicity Men In Newspaper Copy and House Programs

Lorraine Eason

LORRAINE EASON, who is now playing the feminine lead in F. B. O.'s two-reel comedy series, "The Wisecrackers," was born in Norfolk, Va., August 27, 1904. Her father, a noted mining engineer, was called to South America a few months after the event, and brought his family to Buenos Aires, where the future star received her first education.

Subsequently Mr. Eason lived in a number of South American cities, and until she was eleven years old, his daughter spent most of her time in convents in Bogota, Santiago, Panama and Valparaiso, although often accompanying her father on various inspection trips into the Andes.

In 1915 Miss Eason returned to Norfolk and entered a private school, later finishing her education in New York City. Her first public appearance was on the New York stage under Charles Dillingham, and then she went under the Ziegfeld banner, but eventually decided to try her luck in pictures, and came to Hollywood in 1924.

Starting in the humble role of an "extra," her ability and personality soon brought her advancement, first for "bit" parts and then as leading woman in several small western productions. From this she graduated to playing leading roles for Fox and Universal, and was with Mack Sennett for six months, when she received a flattering offer to return to the East and the legitimate stage.

While in New York, however, the call of the silversheet persuaded her to come back to Hollywood for the leading feminine role in "We're in the Navy Now" for Paramount, and following this she played in two productions with Charles Chase for Hal Roach. She was then signed by F. B. O. to a long term contract, and will be seen in many of that company's future productions.

Allene Ray

ALLENE RAY, Pathe's blonde serial star, was born in San Antonio, Texas, and spent her childhood with her four sisters and two brothers on her father's cattle ranch. There she led an active out-of-door life, which is in great part responsible for her athletic prowess and her supple and graceful figure.

When she was only three, Allene was lifted to the back of a horse, and before she left high school she was recognized as one of the most daring riders in the San Antonio district. Accordingly when Harry Myers came to San Antonio to make a series of two-reel western pictures and inquired about the town for a girl to appear in them, who was not only camera beautiful but a daring rider, everybody pointed to little Miss Ray.

Myers called at her home, while she was away at school and explained his mission to her mother. After looking over a bunch of snapshots showing Allene doing stunts on her pony, and indulging in basketball, and other strenuous games, he decided this pretty, athletic girl was the very one he needed. Accordingly Allene made her first appearance before the movie camera in her home town. And she registered so well that when Motion Picture Magazine announced a Fame and Fortune Contest, she sent in her pictures and became one of the winners who received a regular movie contract.

Because of her beauty, intelligence, acting ability and horsemanship George B. Seitz selected her to star in serials for Pathe. She took the place left vacant by the departure for Europe of Pearl White whom she resembles in athletic build and blonde coloring.

She is 5 feet three, with golden hair and large hazel eyes. In addition to her skill with horses, she is a crack swimmer, golfer and tennis player.

Her most recent pictures are "The House Without a Key," "Melting Millions" and "The Hawk of the Hills."

Lloyd Hamilton

LLOYD HAMILTON, star comedian of the Educational-Hamilton Comedies, made his first stage appearance in Oakland, Calif. This initial experience on the stage consisted of "suping" in a stock company production for some six months. This was just a beginning for Hamilton because he rose rapidly, and soon was leading man with the Elleford Stock company which played repertoire up and down the Pacific coast. Then he played an extended engagement with James K. Hackett, famous dramatic star of that day. After this, Hamilton spent several seasons in musical comedy.

Marshall Neilan gave Hamilton his first job in motion pictures. It was in 1914, but it was not long before Lloyd Hamilton had developed a real comedy character, and for three years he appeared in a popular series of one-reelers. Then he made some comedies for Fox, and shortly afterwards formed his own production company, releasing two-reel comedies through Educational Film Exchanges, Inc. Previous to this, he studied to become a motion picture director, only to return to the acting field.

Hamilton admits only one hobby—that of journeying to Oakland to see his mother after the completion of each comedy.

Paramount Studio Club Formed

ONE of the first clubs in the world to begin existence with a full treasury was launched this week by the 1,800 employees of the Paramount studio.

The club has no name, but it has a substantial check, presented by the Paramount organization through B. F. Schulberg, associate producer, to insure an active career.

The purpose of the club, as outlined by Dr. Emanuel Stern, medical director of the corporation, is to promote a complete co-operative spirit among all the employees of the studio.

L. H. Buell, head of the purchasing department, was named as temporary chairman of the organization. Buell will immediately begin work to put the wheels into motion for the club's perfection.

This club, it is thought, is the first studio organization of its kind in the film industry. Already the first motion picture corporation to introduce a company bonus savings plan, and to install a completely equipped gymnasium for the benefit of all the employees, this new movement is declared to be another step towards the closer relationship between officials of the studio and its workers.

The entire personnel of the studio, numbering approxi-

Student Managers Visit Fables

VISITING the studios of the Fables Pictures, Inc., where the Pathe Aesop's Film Fables are made, on the afternoon of Friday, April 29th, the student body of the Publix Theatre Managers' Training School met Paul Terry, cartoonist and creator of Aesop's Fables.

Mr. Terry explained in detail the art and mystery of animated cartoons, enlightening the class on the process of animation, the subject matter and the systematized procedure from the conception of the scenario to the photography of the finished drawings.

Taking advantage of the proximity of the Topics of the Day studio—on the same floor with the Fables studio—the Publix Managers' class next visited Editor-in-Chief Charles McDonald, who outlined the procedure and care necessary in producing a weekly issue of Topics, and later enjoyed a completed reel of this short feature in the Topics' projection room.

Just because these youngsters are playing in Fox Films is no reason for neglecting their education—and to see that it isn't, Fox has built this special schoolhouse at the West Coast studios. C. A. Ferrell is principal and Mrs. Mary Sparks his assistant. Olive Borden, Fox star, was a visitor the day this was taken

Billy Dooley, star in Billy Dooley-Educational comedies, visits the Atlantic fleet in the Hudson, off New York, and comes to grief in absent-mindedly walking off with a couple of loaves down the gangplank

Maude Fulton, stage and vaudeville star and playright, will play her first screen role in "The Gingham Girl," a David Kirkland production for FBO. With her are Lois Wilson, the star, and Director Kirkland Hope Hampton and little Nancy Kelly in a scene filmed in Bermuda for "The Call of the Sea," a technicolor picture directed by Harold R. Hall for the Colorart Picture Corp., to be released in the early fall.

Excellent Pictures has used great care in casting "The Nest," surrounding Pauline Frederick with players who, both by type and ability, are well fitted to appear with her in this emotional story; left, Miss Frederick, Reginald Sheffield and Holmes Herbert; centre, Miss Frederick and Thomas Holding; right, Miss Frederick and Ruth Dwyer

Paramount has picked five of its young players to groom for stardom, and will give them every advantage during the coming year in giving them numerous opportunities to develop; the five, left to right, are: Nancy Phillips, James Hall, Louise Brooks, Richard Arlen and Sally Blane

Announcement of Quarterly Dividend by "U"

A QUARTERLY dividend of 2 per per cent per share will be paid July 1st, on the outstanding First Preferred stock of the Universal Pictures Corporation, it is announced by E. H. Goldstein, treasurer. The dividend was voted at a recent meeting of the Board of Directors of the corporation and applies to all first preferred stock-holders of record as shown by the books June 20th.

To Elect New Roxy Theatre Directors

Another step in the readjustment of the management of the Roxy Theatre Corporation, following the acquisition of its control by the Fox Theatres Corporation on March 25, 1927, will be taken today, when the nominations of three new directors, replacing three who resigned, will be confirmed at a special meeting of stockholders. The three new directors are Edward H. Schwab, President of the Splitdorf-Electricral Company; Harry L. Jones, Chairman of the Jones Brothers Tea Company, and Marck L. Tooker, of the Stock Exchange firm of Tooker & Co. They replace Frederick Pope, C. E. Richardson and Harold Roberts, who resigned.

The nominations were made by Bennett, Bolster & Coghill, who distributed about three-fourths of the 125,000 shares of Roxy Theatre Corporation Class A stock, at the request of the three resigning members. The nominees represent a large ownership of Class A stock, it is reported, and their presence on the board will be in the interest of holders of that stock. It is also reported that William Fox, President of the Fox Theatres Corporation, and White, Weld & Co., which holds 176,000 of the 350,000 shares of common stocks, have approved the nominations and for that reason no objection to their election is expected today.

Advises Building Changes in Detroit Theatres

Construction changes in ten of the older downtown Detroit theatres were recommended to the Council and the Board of Fire Commissioners in a report of an investigation made at the order of the board by Gabriel S. Goldwater, fire marshal, and John M. Bischoff, commissioner of buildings and safety engineering.

The investigation was ordered March 8 after a complaint had been received concerning the fire risk in a downtown theatre. In most instances, exit facilities were reported inadequate.

Paramount Signs Gertrude Ederle for Picture

Gertrude Ederle, first woman to swim the English Channel, signed a contract in New York this Wednesday to appear in a motion picture production at the Paramount studios.

It is also understood that Paramount is negotiating for the services of George Young, Canadian youth who conquered the Catalina Channel.

W. W. Ely, Manager of the Hippodrome, Portland, Ore., whose efforts in connection with the benefit show "Dixie" for flood victims, brought such splendid results

Theatres in Boston Locale Donate $23,275.95

A preliminary report from the Boston Film Board of Trade concerning the many benefit performances given by motion picture houses for the relief of the Mississippi Flood sufferers shows that a total of $23,-275.95 has thus far been raised as contributions to the fund of the Red Cross. A detailed report follows:

Martin L. Semon Manager New Capitol in Atlanta

Willard C. Patterson, Southern district manager of Universal theatres, announced the appointment of Martin L. Semon to the managership of the new Capitol Theatre in Atlanta, Georgia, scheduled to open June 27.

Mr. Semon is a graduate of the late Jake Wells' theatre organization, having been stationed in Birmingham as manager of the Bijou, the Lyric, the Majestic, the Orpheum, and other Wells' houses in Birmingham. When the S. A. Lynch Enterprises bought out the Wells theatres in Atlanta eight years ago, Dan Michalove, now with Universal theatres, but at that time director of theatres for Lynch, turned the Lyric in Atlanta into a vaudeville house and chose Mr. Semon as manager.

Param't Board Directors Declares Dividend

THE Board of Directors of Paramount Famous-Lasky Corporation at its meeting held on June 13th, 1927, declared an extra dividend of $2 per share on the common stock, payable in common stock at a valuation of $100 per share. The stock dividend is payable on September 20th, 1927, to stockholders of record at the close of business on July 28th, 1927. There was also declared at this meeting the usual quarterly cash dividend of $2 per share on the preferred stock payable August 1st, 1927, to stockholders of record at the close of business on July 15th, 1927.

Explosion Wrecks Film Plant at Ridgefield, N. J.

An explosion of 40 tons of celluloid film being reclaimed in the Plastaloid Film Company, Inc., on Broad Avenue, Ridgefield, N. J., resulted Wednesday of this week following soon after a fire which broke out in the plant. One of four workmen in the plant was seriously burned. The reclamation building, a one-story-and-basement structure of concrete, and two dwellings were destroyed with damage estimated at $150,000. Firemen from seven municipalities fought the fire an hour before it was under control. The fire burst from the front of the structure for more than a hundred feet across a nearby road.

Firemen centered thier efforts on preventing an explosion of five 500,gallon gasoline tanks underground in front of a neighboring gas station.

Samuel A. Jacobson of New York was named as the owner of the plant.

Motion Picture Club Is Launched in N. Y.

INITIAL steps leading toward the organization of a motion picture club were taken at a meeting on Thursday at the Astor, attended by 54 leading members of the New York film colony. The name is to be selected later. The group met at a luncheon tendered by Al Lichtman, as the outcome of a suggestion made at the last film golf tournament.

S. L. Rothafel, Al Lichtman and Jack Alicoate were appointed a committee to tender the presidency to Marcus Loew. The board of governors will include the most prominent men in the industry.

The organization committee includes: Wm. A. Johnston, chairman, E. A. Eschmann, Walter Moore, David Chatkin, William Brandt, Victor Shapiro and Jerome Beatty; membership committee: Arthur Loew, chairman, Sam Dembow, Fred Rothenberg, Lee A. Ochs, Harry Goetz, Sime Silverman and Jules Levy; publicity committee: Paul Gulick, chairman, Howard Dietz, Frank Pope, Paul Lazarus, Jack Alicoate and Jerome Beatty. G. B. Gallup was appointed temporary secretary and Arthur W. Stebbins temporary treasurer.

Retrenchment Period in Industry

All Companies Start Reduction of Overhead; Home Office and Studio Executives Salaries Probably Cut

THE motion picture industry is in for a period of retrenchment and economy. This is the ultimatum that has gone forth from the offices of practically every large company in the business and it is a known fact that what is to happen is to be more than a gesture.

The motion picture business is going in for reform and that reform is to extend from the front offices where high salaried executives hold forth to the lowliest studio employee. From now on, so it is said, people in the industry will be expected to earn their money.

News of the campaign to reduce overheads all along the line comes as no surprise.

When Jesse L. Lasky speaking at the Paramount Convention criticized his own company and himself for past misdeeds and mistakes and took a fling at the salaries paid to stars and directors, it was construed in local circles to mean that some changes in policy were in prospect.

But the real storm broke less than a week ago and according to the best opinions both in New York and on the Coast, it is just a beginning rather than the end.

Wall Street is said not to have been greatly pleased with the record of net profits that some of the film companies have shown in their last annual statements. Picture stocks have been on the toboggan for some time and last week some new low levels were reached on some of the best offerings that the industry affords.

Paramount reached 102½ the lowest price it has touched in two years and Loew Inc. went down to 53 flat. Just how much of this decline is bear operations and how much is Wall Street's final realization that the picture business was getting in deep water is not for this office to determine. The facts remain.

The industry's effort to reform has brought forth some definite action that while details are some what lacking, leads to suppositions that have placed employes, big and little in both New York and Los Angeles on the anxious seat, both as regards to their jobs and the salaries they are to be paid.

A number of the executives of the several major producing and distributing companies met last Thursday and it is said came to some general agreements. In this conference, the main topics of discussion were salaries, not only of stars and directors but also of department heads and the lesser fry who generally have been earning more than they could in any other line of endeavor. These men are said to have agreed to cut their own salaries, although the skeptical hail this is a gesture and are supposed to be inviting lesser lights in their respective organizations to do likewise, the inference being of course that a lesser wage is better than no pay at all.

At a cabinet meeting of the department heads of Paramount, held Monday, the program for economy was frankly announced and those alleged to be on the inside, say that there will be a big cut in the personel of this organization at the home office and that the trimming of sails is to go all down the line, except possibly the branch office end.

Out at the Coast the first evidence of dissatisfaction over present conditions came when Irving Thalberg called the writers on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot together and announced that according to his superiors opinion they weren't earning the twenty-eight thousand a week they were, collectively, being paid. The result of the conference, if it can be called such, was recriminations on the part of some of the writers, apologies by others and a general feeling that some jobs were in jeopardy. So far nothing has happened but all Hollywood is keeping its ear to the ground hoping that its fears are unfounded.

At the Paramount studio and at the home office in New York announcement is made that the bonus plan in operation several years is being discontinued. It was stated at Hollywood also that salaries to all employes not under contract would be cut twenty-five per cent.

So far this is the only known economy measures that have gone into effect, although other companies are expected to take such action daily, both on the Coast and in New York.

According to dope those who will cut their overhead with similar measures are Fox, Universal, First National and United Artists.

Montreal Theatres' Tax Returns $379,589.60

THE moving picture theatres of Montreal, Quebec, must be doing fairly well, judging by the official report of the city treasurer regarding civic revenues, which was presented June 9.

This report shows that the net revenue to the city from the theatre ticket tax during 1926 amounted to $379,589.60. This was a considerable increase over the net ticket tax returns for 1925, which totalled $336,725.35.

Butte Theatres Closed When Musicians Join Striking Stage Hands, Operators

ALL theatres in Butte, Montana, are closed as a result of a strike of stage hands and projectionists and a sympathetic walk-out of musicians effective Saturday of this week. Every motion picture house and vaudeville theatre is closed. The strike has been on since June first but the walk-out of the musicians closed the only remaining open theatres.

C. P. Scates, manager of the Rialto theatre, has operated his own projector and kept the house open but it is scheduled to close up on Saturday. The theatre managers contend that the wage scale must remain the same and no increase will be endorsed by the theatres.

Clarke Talks on Films Produced in Japan

First National Far East Representative Tells A.M.P.A. Pictures Not Suited for This Country

DOUBT that Japanese producers will ever make pictures that can be successfully presented to audiences in this country was expressed by Horace Clarke, Far Eastern representative for First National Pictures, with headquarters at Kobe, Japan, in an address before the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, at a luncheon in the Hofbrau Haus, New York, last Thursday, June 9th.

Other A. M. P. A. honor guests at this luncheon were Esther Ralston, the screen star, and her husband, George Webb; Howard Dietz and Morris Ryskind, A. M. P. A. members who were congratulated on their achievement as co-authors of the current Broadway stage production of "Merry-Go-Round." Walter Eberhardt, president of the A. M. P. A., presided and did the introducing.

Mr. Clarke, in his speech, pointed out that seven hundred motion pictures are produced in Japan every year. He said none of these Japanese-made productions is suitable for American audiences. The Japanese, he said, make some very beautiful pictures for their own audiences, but they are absolutely out of place when they try to make pictures the new world.

"A comparatively small percentage of American pictures," declared Mr. Clarke, "are adaptable for showing in the Far East and a good deal depends on how the titles are gotten over. This is usually done in the Japanese houses by a reader, who interprets the titles to the audience, and the success of the picture depends in a large measure on how capable he is. Kissing scenes, anything showing revolution, defiance of the law or the use of deadly weapons are taboo."

On account of the present revolution, conditions in China are very bad, according to Mr. Clarke.

Theatre Combine in Penn

Affiliated Theatrical Utilities Corporation Formed; Corporation Controls Hundred Houses in Four States

ANNOUNCEMENT was made in Johnstown, Pa., on June 10, by George Panagotacos, head of the Grand Amusement Company, controlling the new million-dollar State Theatre, and also the Nemo and Grand theatres, in that city, of the organization of the Affiliated Theatrical Utilities Corporation, of which he has been elected a vice-president. He said that the corporation, with holdings of more than $7,500,000, will control 58 theatres in Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia. He adds that the company will also have an interest in Theatrical Theatre Utilities Corporation of New York, which controls 42 theatres in Western New York state. He said the negotiations had been under way for six months.

In addition to Mr. Panagotacos, the members of the board of the Affiliated Theatrical Utilities Corporation are: Nititas Dipson, Batavia, N. Y.; A. G. Constant, Steubenville, Ohio; Mike Manos, Greensburg, Pa.; Peter Antonopoulos, East Pittsburgh, Pa.; Fred M. Zimmerman, Buffalo, N. Y.; and John R. Osborne, Batavia, N. Y.

The New York Corporation has theatres in the following cities and towns: Albion, Buffalo, Batavia, Olean, Jamestown, Wellsville, Hornell, Fredonia, Media, Towanda, Westfield, Lackawana, Brockport, Leroy, Springville, Franklynville, Elmira and Rochester. Cities linked in the Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia chain at present are: Johnstown, Greensburg, Mt. Pleasant, Connellsville, Monessen, Glassport, McKeesport, East Pittsburgh, Butler, New Castle, Farrell, Oil City, Apollo, all in Pennsylvania; Wheeling, Mansville, and Follansbee, West Virginia, and Bridgeport, Salem and Toronto, Ohio.

The Affiliated Theatrical Utilities Corporation was incorporated under the laws of New York. Two hundred shares of preferred and 200 shares of common stock have been issued, according to Mr. Panangotacos.

Germany Used Less Films During 1926

Germany's consumption of feature films during the period from 1923 to 1926 is placed at 1,985, according to a statistical report released by the German Department of Foreign Commerce from Trade Commissioner George R. Canty, Paris, France. Of this number, 871 were produced in Germany. Considering the 417 features shown in Germany in 1923 as a basis, the other years' figures indicate that Germany's consumption increased 27½ per cent in 1924, dropped 7½ the following year, and showed a further decrease of 5½ per cent in 1926. Germany's production share of its total consumption of features was 60 per cent in 1923, slightly over 39 per cent in 1924, 41 per cent in 1925 and 38 per cent in 1926. United States contributed 218 of the 304 foreign films used during 1926.

Germany consumed during the four years 1,269 shorts, 36 per cent less than the total number of features. The censors passed 245 of these shorts in 1923. The year following showed a decline of 6½ per cent, 1926 a decrease of 18½ per cent. Differing materially from its share of features consumed is Germany's share in the production of these shorts. During 1923 Germany had about 38 per cent of the total of shorts censored. Dropping to slightly over 22 per cent in 1924, a much greater decrease occurred in 1925 with a share of 3½ per cent. But the low point was reached in 1926, when German shorts passed by the censors amounted to but slightly over 1 per cent of the total. Foreign make shorts completely dominated the German market in 1926, only 4 of the 357 films shown being German made.

Buckley, U. A. Official, Touring Mid-West

Harry D. Buckley, vice-president of United Artists, left New York Thursday, June 9th, for Cincinnati and St. Louis, on a brief tour of inspection of exchanges in those cities. He returns Tuesday, June 14th.

Dept. of Justice Probes Eastman Case

POSSIBLE violation of the anti-trust laws by the Eastman Kodak Company in the acquisition of its film-finishing laboratories is being investigated by the Department of Justice.

The inquiry of the department, it is understood, is in line with the suggestion of the United States Supreme Court in its decision of May 31, holding that the Federal Trade Commission was without authority to require the company to dispose of the laboratories. At that time the court pointed out that if violation of the law was believed to have occurred in connection with the acquisition of the properties, the proper procedure was through court action. Such action would have to be brought through the Department of Justice.

If investigation discloses that the Eastman company may have violated the anti-trust laws in acquiring the properties which the commission sought to make it dispose of, it is indicated that suit will be brought by the Government.

In and Out of Town

THREE of the Warner Bros. sales executives are visiting the company's branches throughout the country at the present time. Morris Safier, sales manager of the extended run department, has arrived in Los Angeles to attend meetings along the Coast, the gatherings to be held by Harry Lustig, West Coast manager. Arthur Abeles and Claude Ezell, Eastern and Western sales managers respectively, are also off on sales trips, the former in the Middle West and the latter in the South.

NED E. DEPINET, general sales manager of First National, and Stanley W. Hatch, Western sales manager, returned to the home office in New York Friday of last week from Los Angeles, where they attended the sales convention.

A. S. SMITH, JR., Eastern sales manager of First National, and Martin Keleher, New Haven branch manager, attending the opening of Vuono's new Palace Theatre in Stamford, Conn., last week.

WILLIAM CALLAHAN of the Eastman Theatre, Rochester, N. Y., was in New York the latter part of the week working on plans for the coming season. He was a visitor at the First National offices there.

PAUL GULICK, of New York, associated with Universal for years, recently spent a busy day in St. John, N. B., at the invitation of W. A. Sault, manager of the St. John office of Canadian Universal.

M. H. HOFFMAN, vice-president of Tiffany Productions, Inc., accompanied by Ed J. Smith, general sales manager, William D. Shapiro of Boston and A. L. Selig, in charge of the advertising and publicity department, left recently for Columbus, Ohio, to attend the convention of theatre owners.

GENERAL SALES MANAGER ED. J. SMITH has recently returned from a ten day's trip of Tiffany exchanges in the Middle West. While in Buffalo, New York, Mr. Smith was present at the opening of the new Fox Great Lake Theatre in Buffalo on Decoration Day.

J. L. Clifton to Post in Ohio State Education Dept.

John L. Clifton, of Columbus, chairman of the appointment office of the College of Education, Ohio State University, is slated by Governor Donahey to fill the position vacated by Vernon Riegel, state educational director and head of the state censorship board, who has announced to the governor his intention of resigning next month.

Other candidates for the post are: George C. Dietrich, Piqua, B. O. Skinner, Marietta, and C. B. Ulrey, Columbus.

Detroit to Have New 2,500 Seat M. P. Theatre

The Grand River section near Meyers Road will soon have another theatre when work starts on the new 2,500-seat house to be built by Tom Lancaster, Gustav and Henry Funk. The building will be constructed of stone, terra cotta and brick in Spanish style of architecture with similar treatment for the interior.

Federal Trade Commission-West Coast Theatres Case Heard Soon, is Belief

INDICATIONS that the taking of testimony in the West Coast Theatres Case will shortly begin, are seen in the acknowledgment by officials of the Federal Trade Commission that a member of its legal staff is now engaged in investigational work on the West Coast, according to advises from Washington, D. C.

The case involves two complaints issued May 29, 1925, naming the West Coast Theatres, Inc., and others and charging conspiracy in eliminating competition and other methods declared unfair. The taking of testimony was started more than a year ago, but after one day was discontinued in order that a stipulation might be filed.

The stipulation, filed June 7, 1926, and followed by exceptions and briefs, was practically thrown into the wastebasket by the commission after arguments upon the facts on November 8, it being criticised as being worse than useless.

The taking of testimony was ordered November 20, last, since which time the legal staff of the commission has been engaged in preparing the groundwork. It is believed that the presence of the legal aid on the West Coast represents the final work in this respect and that a date for the hearing of testimony will shortly be set.

Hays Calls Conference for "We Americans"

Americanization Experts Discuss Screen Treatment of Universal Production With Director

THIRTY-FIVE men and women, all of whom are interested in some branch of Americanization and immigration discussed this week with Edward Sloman the treatment to be accorded "We Americans," a story recently purchased for picturization by Universal in line with the recently instituted efforts of Will H. Hays to assist in the more rapid Americanization of immigrants to this country. The consultants met Mr. Sloman, who will direct the production for Universal, at a luncheon on Monday at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, New York City. The story has for its theme the amalgamation of the second generation of immigrants to our shores into the body politic of citizenry.

The luncheon was under the chairmanship of Carl E. Milliken, former Governor of Maine, Secretary of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., who stated the aims of the Universal Pictures Corporation in producing "We Americans" and the opportunity which it presented for the expression of the real meaning of Americanism and the possibility it afforded for interesting a much wider circle of people in the problem of second generation Americans.

Speeches were made by John H. Finley, President of the Council for Adult Education of the Foreign Born, Benjamin Day, Commissioner of Immigration, Dr. Robert Hill, Executive Secretary, Council for Adult Education of the Foreign Born; Henry D. Walbridge, Trustee of the Council and Head of the Americanization Committee, Merchants Association; Lee F. Hanmer, Sage Foundation and Playground Recreation Association; Gustave Kirby, the Pocono School; Seymour Barnard of the Brooklyn Peoples Institute; Wilton A. Barrett, Secretary of the National Board of Review; Mrs. Emrich, Federal Council of Churches; and Mrs. Thomas A. McGoldrick, Chairman, Motion Picture Bureau International Federation of Catholic Alumnae.

Edward Sloman was then called upon to give the gathering an idea of the story he had in mind. He explained the frame-work of the story—the parents from Russia, who had failed to be assimilated into the well-known American melting pot, who had retained their language, their customs, their occupations almost as though they were still in Russia, as contrasted with the up-to-date high-school educated children who because of the unprogressiveness of their parents, threaten the integrity of their modest little home, and the agency of the night school, by which the two were brought into fuller understanding. The meeting then developed into a round table discussion.

Among those present were Commissioner of Immigration Benjamin Day, John H. Finley, Henry D. Walbridge, Lee F. Hanmer, Fred B. Smith, Chairman of the World Alliance for International Friendship Through the Churches; Mrs. John D. Moffett, Chairman of the Division of Immigration, New York City Federation of Women's Clubs; Miss Larner of the International Immigration Service; Miss Anna Kempshall, Charity Organization Society; Mrs. Walter Willard, Chairman, Division of Motion Pictures, State Federation of Pennsylvania Women, Mrs. Harry Lilly, vice president New York State Federation of Women's Clubs; Jerome Beatty, Arthur De Bra, Major F. L. Herron, and Maurice McKenzie of the Hays office, together with Paul Gulick, Nat Rothstein, Len Fields and Joe Weil of Universal.

Mr. Sloman starts directing the preliminary scenes on the liner George Washington this week and at Ellis Island next week.

Three New Houses for Broadway Are Among Latest Theatre Rumors

ADDITION of three large first run houses to the present Broadway lineup is rumored in New York. One is a large Publix house, seating 6,000 or over, to be erected on the present site of the Criterion and Loew's New York. The Loew lease has anothr year to run. This would probably be called the Publix.

The second is one which it is said Universal will build in the upper Fifties on Broadway, and the third is said to be projected by an unnamed group on the site of the old postal station on Fifty-first street, across from the Capitol.

N. Car. M. P. T. O. Convenes

Meets at Wrightsville Beach June 27-28; Film Arbitration One of Topics Discussed

THE mid-summer convention of the Theatre Owners' Association of North Carolina will convene at Wrightsville Beach, N. C., in the Oceanic Hotel, on June 27 and 28.

Having started with eight paid up members, the organization will meet this year with more than one hundred and fifty paid up members, the largest paid up membership ever in the history of the association.

The officers have the assurance that several prominent men will attend, including the president of the national organization and P. S. Harrison, of Harrison's Reports.

The main business session of the convention will be held on the morning and afternoon of June 27, with the banquet at 8 o'clock that evening. Unfinished business of the convention will be completed on the morning of June 28. The morning sessions will begin at 10 o'clock and the afternoon sesion at 2:30 o'clock.

It is expected that film arbitration will, perhaps, be the main topic considered, with various other prominent questions up for discussion.

President Picquet has appointed the following committees which will function during the convention:

Registration—Phelps Sasseen, of Salisbury, chairman; J. F. White, of Asheboro, and Chase White, of Gastonia.

Reception—R. T. Wade, of Morehead City, chairman; A. B. Huff, of High Point, and Charles Arrington, of Rocky Mount.

Entertainment—P. W. Wells, of Wilmington, chairman; and George Bailey, of Wilmington.

A. F. Sams, Sr., U. K. Rice and A. F. Moses, of Winston-Salem, have been appointed on the committee empowered to draw up rules ana regulations governing arbitration, these rules and regulations to conform to and work in conjunction with those now in force.

Officer of the Theatre Owners' Association of North Carolina are: Charles W. Picquet, president; U. K. Rice, first vice-president; W. E. Stewart, second vice-president, and N. L. Royster, secretary-treasurer.

The board of directors is composed of H. F. Kincey, of Greensboro; A. F. Sams, Jr., of Winston-Salem; A. B. Huff, of High Point, S. C.; S. S. Stevenson, ef Henderson; Charles Arrington, of Rocky Mount; Ed. G. Turner, of Asheville; P. W. Wells, of Wilmington, and W. E. Stewart, of Charlotte.

B & K to Buy For Combine

Booking Arrangement With Gregory and Bernasek and Fitzpatrick-McElroy; Ownership Unchanged

BALABAN & KATZ Midwest Theatres, Inc., has within the past few days extended its operations by the closing of deals to take over the buying for the entire Gregory and Bernasek circuit, considered one of Chicago's largest suburban theatre organizations, and to buy pictures for fifteen of Fitzpatrick & McElroy houses located in northern Indiana and at points near to Chicago.

The Gregory houses involved in the new deal include the Gayety and Illinois Theatres at Ottawa, the new Palace, Cicero; the Parthenon, Berwyn; the LaGrange, La Grange and the Milo, Chicago.

When it is recalled that Midwest already was buying pictures for Lubliner & Trinz circuit and had recently taken over the Asher Brothers' string in addition to the houses which Midwest has been buying for during the past two years, it is seen what an important figure this organization now is in the Chicago picture market.

According to General Manager Floyd Brockell of Midwest there is no change of ownership involved in either of the deals.

New Kalamazoo Theatre to Open During July

W. S. Butterfield, President of W. S. Butterfield Theatres, Inc., announces that the new State Theatre at Kalamazoo will be entirely completed and ready for the formal opening on Thursday, July 7th. Construction is of thenew atmospheric type, and the theatre will be one of the finest in Michigan.

Montreal Investigation to Include Morality of Films

A decision to extend the scope of the inquiry into the Laurier Palace Theatre disaster in Montreal last January so as to include the moral side of motion pictures has been made by Premier L. A. Taschereau of the Province of Quebec and imparted to the Royal Commission conducting the investigation in an official statement the premiere expressed the wish that the inquiry be as complete as possible. The investigation has for several days resolved itself into a wrangle between churchmen, exhibitors and others regarding Sunday shows. The Montreal tragedy occurred on a Sunday.

Many exhibitors have given evidence before the commission as to the importance of Sunday performances from a business viewpoint. Various contentions were offered by the exhibitors, one claiming that Sunday receipts were equal to the revenue of three week days, another that Sunday crowds represented 38 or 45 per cent of the week's total attendance, and a third that as many patrons attended a theatre on a Sunday as attended during the entire week.

Announce New Theatre for Sheffield, Ala.

With negotiations for a site practically consummated, it is definitely announced that Sheffield is to have a new motion picture theatre to cost approximately $100,000 and which will seat 1,200. The house will be one of the Muscle Shoals Theatres chain, of which Tony Sudekum, of Nashville, is the head.

For some time negotiations for a lot on which to locate the new theatre have been pending between J. Spielberger and the Muscle Shoals Theatres, of which Louis Rosenbaum is general manager. And, since Mr. Sudekum's return from abroad, he and Mr. Rosenbaum have conferred regarding the plans for the new house.

Brown Resigns as Head of De Forest Board

CLARENCE BROWN, president of the De Forest Phonofilm Corporation and a member of the De Forest Board of Directors, has resigned his position with the De Forest Company. Benjamin Fisher succeeds him as president. The resignation is said to be a result of the deal recently proposed by Pat Powers that control of De Forest be passed over to him. This deal was accepted and ratified by Brown and as a result when the proposition was brought before the board of directors, the court appointees or commission which controls the voting power of the five or six thousand De Forest stockholders turned it down as "impossible" and unfair to the stockholders.

The Powers proposition included that the De Forest firm, while passing over to him the control, should remain liable for all damage suits now pending, including the $100,000 action taken by William Fox.

The court committee appointed three new members on the board of directors at the meeting held last week.

Carl Freund to Use New Film on Picture Here

Our Berlin correspondent, H. Fraenkel, writes that Carl Freund, the famous German cameraman ("Variety," "The Last Laugh," "Metropolis," etc.), is going to use a new hypersensitized film in the first production of his own company, which he has just started with Hanns Winter. The sensitiveness of the new film is six times that of ordinary film. It must be used, however, within 24 hours after having been hypersensitized.

The tests of the new stock are excellent. It is quite possible to get very good effects in an ordinarily lighted drawing room without any lamps or spots at all. All the interiors of the new picture will be photographed right on Broadway. The picture, according to a report from our correspondent, will probably be called "Times Square," the story dealing with the adventures of an elderly bank clerk who has defrauded a large sum of money and who is taking in 24 hours on Broadway all the pleasures which life can offer. Freund and Winter are going to start for New York in June.

Week Sees More Firms Incorporate at Albany

Obnoxious Bills Untouched by Fla. Legislature

The 1927 session of the Florida Legislature expired, with the press of the State practically unanimous in the expression that it was the worst in the history of the State. However, nothing was done to injure the motion picture industry, though there were several bills introduced that would have worked a hardship, such as a 10 per cent tax on all theatre tickets, the proceeds to go to the schools; a "Blue Law" bill that would have prohibited all Sunday shows, and an additional tax on all amusements. None of these bills ever got to the Governor, however, and the industry can rest easy now for two more years.

M. P. T. O. of New Jersey Convenes June 21-23 at Asbury Park

THE Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association of New Jersey is holding its seventh annual convention this week at the Berkeley-Carteret Hotel, Asbury Park, New Jersey. The sessions continue for three days, the twenty-first to the twenty-third, and an elaborate program of enetrtainment is in store for the visitors outside of the business meetings. One of the important events of the convention is the Carnival at the Casino on Wednesday, June twenty-second, which is open to the general public.

Provisions have been made for the use of two large rooms at the Hotel to be used for exhibits of the various film and equipment companies; there are thirty-five booths, most of which have been contracted for. The committee, of which Judge Henry P. Nelson of the Capitol Theatre, Elizabeth, is chairman, comprises Louis Rosenthal, E. Thornton Kelly, B. Harris, L. Newberry, J. Keil, Louis Gold, Charles Hildinger, J. Warren, Joseph Seider, Sidney Samuelson, I. Hirshblond, Ben Schindler and S. Steiffel.

M.P.T.O. Kansas-Mo. Meet

R. R. Biechele Re-Elected President with Pledge of Cooperation of Organization; Meet Semi-Annually

R. R. BIECHELE was re-elected president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association of Kansas and Missouri at the annual convention of that group held June first and second at the Hotel Kansan, Topeka, Kansas. A highlight of the convention was the decision of the body to convene twice yearly instead of the annual meet which was decided upon at the get-to-gether last year.

It was resolved to obtain this year more members for the organization. Senator Capper, Kansas, and Attorney General William Smith were speakers at a banquet on the first night of the meet. During the course of the evening Governor Paulen presented to President Biechele a gold watch the gift of the members of the theatre organization.

Other business transacted was the appointment of a committee on new members which will meet in Kansas City, June 14, to consider ways and means. At an open session it was decided to consider the possibility of establishing a filing fee for all arbitration cases which fee would be used to pay the expenses of out-of-town persons summoned as special witnesses in arbitration cases. The joint board of arbitration at Kansas City has no method of providing for such expenses under the present by-laws, it was pointed out. The matter will be discussed at a future date.

Other officers elected to serve with Mr. Biechele are: Chas. Burkey, Kansas City, 1st vice president; A. F. Baker, 2nd vice president; Ben Levy, 3rd vice president; Chas McVey. Directors were S. F. Wilhoit, Springfield, Mo.; C. R. Wilson, Liberty; T. D. Block, Odessa; S. K. Duncan, Kansas City; Mr. Rhoden, Kansas City; L. M. Miller, Wichita; F. E. Frazier, Pittsburgh; G. L. Hooper, Topeka; Lawrence Breuninger, Topeka; Glen Dickinson, Lawrence. Kansas.

"U" Takes Over Six Theatres in Virginia

THE closing of negotiations for the Winberg-Sachs Circuit in Virginia was announced this week by Dan Michalove, general manager of Universal Chain Theatrical Enterprises, Inc. The acquisition of the chain brings the following six theatres in the Universal group: The Virginia in Harrisonburg, seating 1200 and recently remodelled; Masonic Theatre, Clifton Forg, seating 800; Strand, new theatre in Staunton, costing over $200,000 and containing 1100 seats; the Lyric in Lexington with about 800 seats, and the New, an 850 seat house in Lexington of the most modern type; finally the New theatre in Staunton, recently opened. Road shows are a feature at this house which has a 70 foot stage with modern scenic and lighting devices.

Weinberg recently bought out the Sachs interest in the chain, after which Universal took over a three-quarter interest in the entire holdings. A new subsidiary company has been formed to handle the string of houses and further extension of Universal activities will soon be realized, according to Mr. Michalove.

New Theatres for Grand Haven and Bay City

Plans have been completed and contracts let for the construction of Grand Haven's new $150,000 theatre to be leased by the W. S. Butterfield Theatres, Inc., Detroit.

Evacuation and construction are expected to start immediately with the idea of completing the theatre for the opening performance before September 1. The site for the new building fronts on Washington street, Grand Haven's main thoroughfare, being at the East end of the block adjoining the water front and the docks in the Grand river. Harry I. Sanford, former head of the Beacon Drug company of Grand Rapids, is chief executive of the syndicate behind the project.

Arrangements have been completed for the construction of a modern theatre at Bay City which the Butterfield interests purchasd some time ago, according to advices from their office. John Eberson of Chicago is the architect. Seating has been planned for 2,000 people.

Charlotte Exhibitor Drops Charge

THE action of H. J. Paradis, Charlotte, N. C., exhibitor against leading motion picture distributors in which he charged that the distributors were conducting a monopoly in restraint of trade, has been dismissed by consent of counsel for all parties.

Mr. Paradis filed his suits after the Charlotte Arbitration Board had decided against him claims totaling $1,000. Mr. Paradis answered this decision with his suit, claiming the awards were made upon his default in appearance, although he had received due notice upon three different occasions to appear. He has now agreed to appear before the Charlotte Board of Arbitration and to abide by any award that may be made.

New Million Dollar House to be Erected in Portland

Announcement was made Sunday of a new $1,000,000 theatre building to be erected on a downtown side in Portland, Ore., for the Washington Theatre Enterprises, Inc., Sherwood D. Ford is the architect. The exterior of the building will be faced in white tile. It will occupy a site approximately 200 x 300 feet, and will have a seating capacity of 3,000. Officers of the Washington Theatre Enterprises, Inc., say the new theatre will be ready to open within nine months. The exact location, said to have been definitely secured, has not yet been made public. This company also announced the early erection, in one of Portland's suburban districts, of a new theatre with a seating capacity of 2,200. They are now building theatres in Astoria and Seattle, and are planning to extend a chain through other cities.

Prominent Canadian Exhibitor Passes Away

Moving picture circles in Canada have been shocked once more through the death of a prominent representative of the business in the sudden passing of N. K. Miller, manager of the Pantages Theatre, Toronto, and one of the outstanding exhibitors in the Dominion.

Ned Miller collapsed with heart trouble and passed away in St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto, on June 10. He was in his early forties but he had been the manager of the largest theatre in Canada since it was built in 1920. He was born in Indiana but went to Toronto at the invitation of N. L. Nathanson, managing director of Famous Players Canadian Corp., to take charge of the Pantages. His wife survives him.

A funeral service was held at Toronto on Sunday, June 12, which was attended by many representatives of the moving picture business and others.

Robert P. Matthews

Matthews in Executive Post of Morton Co.

The appointment of R. P. Matthews to the offices of general manager and chief operating executive of the Robert Morton Organ Company adds another to the list of long distance commuters in the motion picture's allied industries.

For, from now on, Matthews will divide his time and energies between the Pacific Coast plant and offices of the Robert Morton Company and its Eastern branches.

Matthew's entire career with his company has been a history of steady advancement. Joining the old American Photo-Player Company, in 1910, as manager of that concern's New York territory, he was the sole executive retained when the company was re-organized, in 1923, as the Robert Morton Organ Company.

Opening of New Indiana Theatre to Be Gala Event

The inaugural performance at the new Indiana theatre, $1,500,000 Indianapolis Publix house, on the evening of June 18 promises to be a gala affair according to Ace Berry, managing director of the new house.

Adolph Zukor and Jesse Lasky, Sam Katz, Harry Marks, A. M. Botsford, Nathaniel Finston, Sam Dembow, Barney Balaban, Sidney R. Kent, F. L. Metzler and M. J. Sullivan are expected.

Charles Skouras, St. Louis Magnate, who opened their Ambassador theatre last year, is expected to be present and Publix presentation department will send John Murray Anderson, Boris Petroff and Frank Cambria. Robert Lieber chairman of First national board will be host to the visitors.

Allen S. Glenn, of First National's New York office, is new manager of the Circle, succeeding Berry. Berry is managing director of the Circle Theatre Company which built the new Indiana.

Schines Acquire Interest in Berinstein Chain

THE most important deal in many months in Albany's motion picture theatre field, and affecting other cities as well, was consummated last week when the Schine Brothers of Gloversille, N. Y., owning and operating a total of 106 theatres in New York state and Ohio, bought a financial interest in the Berinstein chain of 11 houses, including four in Elmira, two in Dunkirk and with the others in Albany and Troy. The week before, the Berinstein Brothers had secured an interest in the Pine Hills theatre in Albany, as well as the Arbor Hill theatre, so that the later deal with the Schine Brothers also gives the two brothers an interest in these houses.

The second deal of importance in the Albany district that took place last week resulted in the Farash Theatres, Inc., of Schenectady, which is headed by W. W. Farley, of Albany, taking over the Cameo and Capitol theatres, as well as a house under construction, all three having been owned by George Dwore.

Winners in Columbus Golf Tournament

Emerging victorious in the handicap golf tournament held at the Elk's Country Club, Columbus, Ohio, on June 6, 1927, and winning the trophies offered by the various motion picture trade journals, the prize winners and their respective winnings are as follows: Motion Picture News Cup—Nick Shuler, Elwood City, Pa.; Exhibitors Herald Cup—W. Invents Device to Prevent Projection Fire Hazards

Invention of a new device designed to prevent fire in motion picture projection machines has been announced by John C. Pfeil, chief electrician of the Grand Amusement Company, controlling three large theatres in Johnstown, Pa., and, according to Mr. Pfeil, has been approved by the State of Pennsylvania. A patent has been applied for the device, which is an automatic arrangement which has been declared practical and efficient, and is expected by the inventor to reduce greatly the fire hazard in the operator's booth in the modern picture theatre.

Earle Williams Left $180,000 Investigation Reveals

As a result of the investigation into the affairs of Earle R. Williams, deceased motion picture actor, it is revealed that he left an estate valued at $180,000, although at the time Mrs. Williams applied for letters of administration the estate was appraised at $50,000. No will was discovered, and examination of Mr. Williams' bank vault disclosed an additional $130,000 in bonds.

At the court hearing in Los Angeles Superior Judge Charles S. Crail required Mrs. Williams to post a bond of $360,000 before granting administration papers.

Rumor of Universal-Vocafilm Deal Denied by "U"

In order to give an accurate representation of the facts supposed to have been contained in a story published in a trade paper under the head "Universal Hooks on to Vocafilm." Lou B. Metzger, general sales manager of the Laemmle organization, has issued a statement in which he says that Universal is in no way interested in the Vocafilm and that the only negotiation entered into with Vocafilm were in relation to the rental of the Longacre Theatre which Universal wanted for the showing of "Les Miserables." Upon being advised that the theatre was under lease to the Vocafilm company, Universal discontinued the negotiations. The proposed rental referred to was purely a distributor-exhibitor matter involving nothing more than the licensing of the film for exhibition purposes.

The above statement was issued, Mr. Metzger said, not as a reflection upon Vocafilm but as a correct presentation of the facts and a refutation of the false impression conveyed by the misstatement in the rumor.

Projector Demolished in Small Town Mix-Up

Failure to respond to the movie sermons of Rev. Leo Hooper, pastor of a church located in Franklin, four miles west of Birmingham, Michigan, resulted this week in the destruction by a hammer wielded by the 30 year old minister of the two motion picture projectors belonging to his congregation. The minister demolished the apparatus before the operator could interfere and before the feature, "Let It Rain," had progressed beyond the opening reel. When the stir occurred the picture's leading man had lost some of his garments. The Women's auxilliary of the church had been showing films each Friday evening for several months in the town's community hall. No charges have been preferred against the clergyman.

Reagan Productions in Suit Over Non-Production

Brought to court before Municipal Judge Ballard of Los Angeles on a charge of grand larceny lodged against him by G. C. Lauster, of Van Nuys; Thomas C. Reagan, head of Thomas C. Reagan Productions, Inc., a film company which has its headquarters at Van Nuys, is charged by Lauster with fraud. Lauster's story is that he purchased $1,000 worth of stock under the impression that Reagan Productions would make pictures but as yet, he claims, the company has shown no signs of activity in the production field.

Syd Chaplin Involved in Judgment Suit on Coast

Syd Chaplin was ordered to appear in court at Los Angeles this week before Superior Judge Hand in settlement of a $1,262.45 judgment obtained against him, Victor H. Levy and June Rand Taylor by S. H. Peters on May 2, 1925.

Peters sued Chaplin and the other two defendants in connection with the affairs of the Sassy Jane Manufacturing Company of which Chaplin was one of the principal stockholders, it is said.

Berlin Press Showing of "Big Parade" for Vote on Exhibition in Germany

AN Associated Press dispatch from Berlin states that on June 14 a preview of "The Big Parade" was held in the German capital for the press and people in the picture business for the purpose of obtaining the opinions of the scribes and film representatives as to the advisability of exhibiting the picture in Germany. At the request of the Paramount Company a vote was taken following the presentation of the M-G-M production, the result showing 191 in favor of showing the picture and 31 votes against.

The vote was considered indecisive by the company as a large part of the audience did not use the ballots. According to the A P dispatch the film, which was shown in its entirely, stirred those who saw it.

Several New Theatres Projected in Mid-West Territory

GEORGE TROST, of Greenville, Ill., has been awarded the general contract for the construction of the new Washington Theatre at Fifth and Washington streets, in Effingham, Ill. The Washington Theatre Corporation, of which H. B. Kneedler is the manager, will operate the new house. It will be two story with basement, and cost about $75,000.

Paramount May Get Station WGL

HEARINGS before the Federal Radio Commission this week included efforts by Station WGL, atop the Hotel Majestic, New York City, to obtain the 416-meter wavelength instead of the 256-meters assigned it in the reallocation plan, in competition with Station WOR, Newark and New York.

Station WOR, operated by Bambergers, Newark department store, has always been unusually friendly to motion pictures, but it is understood that WGL may become part of the proposed nation-wide chain of stations which Paramount Famous Lasky plans to use to "plug" Paramount pictures. Remaining time would be leased on an advertising basis.

Station WOR is conceded to have the edge in the contest, due to its greater age and splendid record.

First National Plans Stella Series for Dove

A strong lineup of starring vehicles has been arranged for Billie Dove, who has been made a First National star following her work in "The Tender Hour.

She is at present starring in "The Stolen Bride," the first of the series, now in production with Alexander Korda directing. This will be followed by "American Beauty," from the Saturday Evening Post story by Wallace Irwin. Next will be "The Heart of a Follies Girl," to be produced by Al Rockett from Adela Rogers St. John's Cosmopolitan story.

Then Miss Dove will star in "Once There was a Princess," by Juliet Wilbur Tompkins. In addition to these the First National star will be given the leading role in George Fitzmaurice's forthcoming special, "Louisiana."

Ginsberg Back East After Hollywood Visit

Henry Ginsberg, president of Sterling Pictures Distributing Corporation, who has spent the past month in the studios of Sterling Productions in Hollywood, has returned to the home office in New York. Mr. Ginsberg's mission was connected with his plans for the 1927-28 production season, and he promises several important disclosures concerning Sterling's program following his coastal conference with Joe Rock, head of production, and I. L. Walenstein, consulting expert and story supervisor.

Louis Silver Signed as "Jazz Singer" Director

Also to cooperate in the production of "The Jazz Singer," the first of the features to come from the Warner Bros. studio to employ the Vitaphone as a corollary to its dramatic action, will be Louis Silver, who has been engaged to compose the musical score and the accompaniment for the picture. The musical director will be constantly on the set with Alan Crosland, and will also direct the orchestra which will supply the synchronized accompaniment.

Columbia Acquires Film of Miss. Flood

COLUMBIA Pictures has acquired for immediate release and general distribution a two-reel film, "The Menace of the Mississippi," from A. Harrison, who with a staff of seven cameramen secured exclusive shots of the flood's havoc, penetrating into the interior of the flooded regions for a period of two months and returning, it is said, with a vivid story of the flood. It is not a newsreel.

"The Menace of the Mississippi" was presented by Mayor William Thompson of Chicago before the National Flood Committee organized to relieve the stricken locality. One of the highlights of the film, said to be an exclusive shot, is that devoted to the million dollar fire of the Cairo seven-story grain elevator.

Rob't J. Flaherty Signs Contract with M-G-M

ROBERT J. FLAHERTY, director of "Nankook of the North" and "Moana," two pictures which caused much discussion because of their genre quality, has signed a contract as director with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, it was learned last week. His first production under his new contract will be a South Seas story—a romantic one with a full cast and not to be made solely with the aid of natives as was the case in his previous films—the title of which will be announced later.

"Bride of the Night" Last Fox Films Picture

The latest picture to go into production at the West Coast studio of Fox Films is "The Night Bride" with Charles Farrell and Greta Nissen in the featured roles. It is based on "Prince Fazil," an English stage adaptation of "L'Insomumise," by Pierre Frondaie. In the cast also are Mae Busch, Vladim Uraneff, Tyler Brooke, Eddie Sturgis, Myrna Loy, John Boles, John T. Murray, Erville Alderson, Hank Mann and Dale Fuller. They are working under the direction of Howard Hawks.

"Bride of the Night" will be a special production and is not included in the 1927-28 schedule of Fox production as its release policy has not been decided.

Kane Places Claudette Colbert Under Contract

With the completion of "Hell's Kitchen" at the Cosmopolitan Studio, Robert Kane announced to-day that he had signed a three-year contract with Claudette Colbert, brunette star of "The Barker," who played opposite Ben Lyon in the new first National film.

Miss Colbert is to be featured in "French Dressing," which will be the first Kane picture put into production in the fall.

The young French actress has been on the stage but two years.

Schulberg and Family En-route to Japan

B. P. Schulberg, associate producer and executive chief of the Paramount studio, accompanied by Mrs. Schulberg and their son and daughter are now en route to Japan.

This is the first real vacation that Mr. Schulberg has taken in ten years and he plans to spend four days in Yokahama, boarding the S. S. Empress of Russia after that time to arrive in British Columbia, July 10. Mr. Schulberg will return July 12.

Lumas Closes Foreign Distribution Contracts

Contracts were signed last week between Budd Rogers, vice-president of Lumas Film Corporation and J. O. Barnstyn, president and general manager of British and Continental Trading Co., Inc., whereby the latter organization acquires the distribution rights for the entire Lumas output for the entire world, exclusive of the United States and Canada.

"U" House Posts Filled; Building Plans Announced

New appointments in the ranks of the theatre managers of the Universal Chain Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., are announced by Dan Michalove, general manager of the circuit. Montague Salmon, former manager for Publix in Macon, Georgia, becomes manager of the new Revere, now nearing completion at Revere, Mass. Mr. Salmon was also manager of the Capitol Theatre, Somerville, Mass.

Mark Hanna goes to the latter house as manager. Both of these men take up their duties immediately.

Contracts for the construction of the new Universal theatre in Sheboygan, Wisconsin, have just been awarded to the United Studios, Inc., of Chicago. Construction will start at once. The house will have 1600 seats and will be of the latest atmospheric type.

Fox Contest Winners Sail for Hollywood

After spending a busy week witnessing theatre attractions and the sights of New York, the three winners of screen contests conducted by Fox Films in Italy and Spain, Marcella Battelini and Alberto Rabagliati of Italy and Antonio Cumellas of Spain sailed aboard the President Polk, and are now enroute for Hollywood via the Panama Canal. They are expected to arrive at the movie city about June 23 to start working under long term contracts with the Fox organization. The Spanish beauty contest winner, Marie del Casajuana, is already going through a course of training in Hollywood preparatory to embarking on her screen career. None of the four has had theatrical or screen experience.

Associated Press Man Joins Paramount News

Stephen T. Early, Washington newspaperman, has resigned from the staff of the Associated Press to become Washington representative of the Paramount News.

Mr. Early's life has been spent in Washington and his career as a newspaperman has been linked up with the Capitol. He entered the service of the United Press in 1908 and joined the service of the Associated Press in 1913, leaving to enter military service in 1917. After the armistice he served as assistant in charge of the Stars and Stripes, official news publication of the A. E. F. In 1919 he received a distinguished service citation from Gen. Pershing.

Sterling Closes Southern Distribution Agreement

A distribution deal involving eight States in the South has just been brought to a satisfactory closure by Sterling Pictures Distributing Corporation, Henry Ginsberg, president.

By the terms of this deal, arranged with Arthur C. Bromberg of Atlanta, the A. C. Bromberg Attractions, Inc., will distribute the Sterling "Quality Eight" for 1927-28 in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Tennessee, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana.

Sterling Lists First Two for Coming Year

The first pictures to be produced by Sterling Pictures for consumption during the new season will be "Stranded," by Anita Loos, and "Outcast Souls," by John Peter Toohey. They will be put into production as soon as possible—that is as soon as the three remaining pictures on the 1927-28 program have been completed. Joe Rock and I. L. Walenstein will groom the production forces.

"The Cruel Truth," one of the Sterling pictures for the present season and following "Thumbs Down" on the releasing list, will have Hedda Hopper, Constance Howard, Hugh Allan and Frances Raymond in the cast. They will be guided through their various scenes by Phil Rosen. The story and continuity on the story are by Frances Guihan, while I. L. Walenstein is technical advisor. Herbert Fitzpatrick is the cameraman.

Rogers Heads Pathe's Shorts for June 26

"Through Switzerland and Bavaria with Will Rogers," one of the Rogers single-reel films of his travels on the Continent, is the headliner on the Pathe group of short subject releases for the week of June 26. The program also contains "Pioneer Instinct," a Grantland Rice Sportlight; "Baby Brother," an Our Gang comedy; "A One-Man Dog," an Æsop film fable; the second chapter of the Pathe serial, "The Crimson Flash;" Pathe Review issue number 26 (including "The Herring Hurries Home," "The Heights of Shenandoah" and "Sir Thomas Noah Goes Yachting"); Topics of the Day number 26, and the two issues of the Pathe News, numbers 54 and 55.

Postpones Trip Because of Illness

Owing to illness, Colleen Moore's departure to Europe has been postponed for one week. The First National star expected to sail this week, but on the advice of her physicians, she will spend the next week at a New England resort, sailing just as soon as she recovers from the pleurisy from which she has been suffering for the past several days.

West Point Will Co-operate With De Mille

When the De Mille studio places "West Point," an original story by Majors Robert Glassburn and Alexander Chilton, into work as one of the specials on the new season's program, the full cooperation of the United States Military Academy will be extended the studio. William Boyd will have the stellar role in the story.

John Thomas Joins Staff of Paramount Scenarist

John Thomas, author of "Dry Martini," one of the season's best selling books, is the latest addition to the Paramount staff of scenarists. The writer's efforts in the literary field have been many and varied, it is said, and he has already arrived in Hollywood where he is now engaged on his first story for screen adaptation.

Lloyd Renews Preparatory Work on Picture

AFTER a narrow escape from pneumonia Harold Lloyd has renewed story conferences on his new picture, and in all probability the next two weeks will see him working on his New York production. Lloyd's physical condition was all that saved him from protracted illness, in the opinion of Dr. William Branch, his attending physician.

The comedian has taken over the house at Santa Monica beach that he has occupied for several summers, and with Mrs. Lloyd and their three-year old daughter, Mildred Gloria, will spend a week there recuperating. The family will remain there until the production unit leaves for New York, which production manager John L. Murphy hopes will be in the latter part of August or early in September.

M-G-M Golf Tournament Successful Affairs

The golf tournament held by the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer organization at the Hillcrest Club in Los Angeles was a very successful event, with 72 entrants contesting for trophies and various divisions of play. Harry Rapf and Eddie Mannix, M-G-M studio executives, staged the meet.

Premier honors were captured by Hunt Stromberg, associate producer, who won the Marcus Loew silver cup for the lowest net score of the day with 96 strokes to his credit giving him 58 net. This put him at the head of the executive division and carried with it the Reeve Houck trophy.

In the actor's division, Jackie Coogan led the field, winning the Nicholas Schenck trophy for low bet with a gross score of 108 and net of 70.

Leon Keller took the Louis B. Mayer trophy for low gross by ringing up 78; Keller also won the Bernard Hyman cup by registering three birdies. Stanley Cavanaugh, with a gross of 79, captured the Coogan prize for the second lowest gross score.

Edward Sedgwick captured the special cup offered by Joseph M. Schenck.

In the division of publicity and scenario men the Lew Cody prize trophy went to Joe Sherman.

Gene Nombostle ran away with the Frank Orsatti cup in the production division, while Paul Keeler captured the E. J. Mannix trophy in the technical division.

Winners of divisional contests will play for the Hal Roach Grand Sweepstakes prize. Harry Rapf and Eddie Mannix will also have charge of this affair.

Jones Selects Support for "Chain Lightning"

Now that "Black Jack" is practically filmed, Buck Jones has chosen supporting players for his next Western vehicle for Fox Films, "Chain Lightning." Dione Ellis has the leading feminine role, while Ted McNamara will play the part of Shorty, a comic figure. William Welch and Jack Baston have other important parts. Director Lambert Hillyer has written the scenario based on Charles Alden Seltzer's story.

New Pilot Theatre Opened in Winston-Salem, N. C.

The new Pilot Theatre, Winston-Salem, N. C., opened June 9, at 3 P. M., entirely rebuilt and modern throughout. Bonner [illegible] appointed.

The building has been rearranged so that the screen is in the rear of the theatre, instead of the front, as heretofore. The theatre has new equipment and a balcony has been added, which increases the seating capacity to about 600.

R. D. Carver, of Charlotte, had charge of the plans. This theatre is the oldest house belonging to the Piedmont Amusement Company and was entirely torn out some months ago, now being new throughout, except for the side walls. The property belongs to Senator A. F. Sams, who leased it to the Piedmont Amusement Company of this city.

First National Renews Contract with Lyon

First National this week renewed its contract with Ben Lyon for the fifth consecutive year. The contract was signed yesterday just after the actor had finished his role in Robert Kane's latest production for First National, "Hell's Kitchen." Plans have been made for featuring Lyon in a number of productions during the season of 1927-28.

Mr. Lyon will sail within a short time for a two months' vacation in Europe, the first he has had since becoming a First National player four years ago. He will be accompanied by his mother and his sister, and will tour England, France, Spain and Italy.

M-G-M's "In Old Kentucky" Gets Under Way

The latest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture to be put in work is "In Old Kentucky," an adaptation by Dorothy Farnum of Charles Dazey's stage melodrama of that name. John M. Stahl is directing the picture, a portion of which will be filmed in the blue-grass region of the state. Four more features are in preparation and will be on the lots within the next few days. Among these are "The Fair Co-Ed" and "The Enemy."

Victor McLaglen An Exclusive Fox Star

Victor McLaglen will not appear in the productions of any company other than those of Fox Films, reads a statement from Winfield R. Sheehan, issued this week, denying reports that McLaglen would be loaned to another company while his next story for Fox Films was in preparation.

Pathe Releasing Three Westerns During June

THE Pathe program for June list three Westerns including "The Code of the Cow Country," on t June 19, "The Meddlin' Stranger," on June 12, and "Pals in Peril," on June 26. All three pictures were produced under the supervision of Lester F. Scott, Jr., head of Action Pictures, Inc.

Paramount Starting Nine

Production on New Schedule Ready for Filming Within Fortnight at Hollywood Studios

FIVE Paramount productions are scheduled to start within the coming week or two. Among the first of these is "Hula," in which Clara Bow will be starred and which will be directed by Victor Fleming; Clive Brook and Arlette Marchal are in the supporting cast. But a few days of rest will be allowed Pola Negri following her return from abroad as production on her new starring vehicle to be directed by Rowland V. Lee from a Sidney Howard original, is soon to start.

Practically all sets have been constructed on the studio stages preparatory to the beginning of Emil Jannings' second starring picture for Paramount. This drama of underworld life in London is to be directed by Mauritz Stiller. Josef von Sternberg wrote the original. Arrangements have been completed with the authorities of Los Angeles' Chinatown to there make many of the scenes called for in Richard Dix's new starring picture. This production, "Shanghai Bound," will be directed by Luther Reed, and will be under way within a few days.

Chester Conklin and George Bancroft, ready to start their teamwork in the railroad comedy, "Tell It To Sweeney," are assisting Director Gregory La Cava in the selection of the remainder of the cast. This company is scheduled for a location trip to Chatsworth; three comedy constructors have been assigned to the story: Norman McLeod, Percy Heath and Kerry Clarke.

The other four pictures which will be started shortly are: "Swim, Girl, Swim," starring Bebe Daniels; the next Adolphe Menjou picture, to be directed by H. D. Abbadie D'Arrast, who directed Menjou in "Service for Ladies;" "The Glory Girl," starring Esther Ralston, with Dorothy Arzner directing; and the next Florence Vidor picture, which will be directed by Frank Tuttle under present plans.

Five in Working at FBO

Production on New Feature Pictures Progresses; "The Harvester" Almost Completed

FIVE feature productions are at present being produced by F B O at the Hollywood studios under supervision of William Le Baron, vice-president in charge of production. The pictures in the camera stage include "The Harvester," "The Coward," a dog story, "The Mojave Kid" and "Tom's Gang."

"The Harvester," one of Gene Stratton-Porter's novels, is rapidly nearing completion at Rome City, Indiana, where director Leo Meehan is working with the cast, comprising Orville Caldwell, Natalie Kingston, Belshazzar, an English setter and Will R. Walling.

Filming of "The Coward," an Arthur Stringer story, was started this week with Warner Baxter in the title role and direction by Alfred Raboch. J. G. Hawkes made the adaptation, the continuity was furnished by Edfrid Bingham and Edna Hibbard and the cast supporting the start includes Sharon Lynn, Freeman Wood and Raoul Paoli.

What is stated to be a novel idea in dog stories in motion pictures will be the latest F B O vehicle starring Ranger, the company's dog star. This production will have a leading man dog, Ranger, a leading lady dog, Nitchamoose, and a heavy, or villain dog, Ogoma. The locale of the story is in the Cumberland Mountains and the human cast supporting the star includes Sharon Stanton Heck, Ethan Laidlaw; Howard Mitchell is directing.

"The Mojave Kid" marks Bob Steele's first introduction as an F B O Western star. A cast of 35 has just finished a week of filming exteriors at Red Rock Canyon in the Mojave Desert, California, under direction of Robert North Bradbury. The cast includes Lillian Gilmore, Buck Connors, Bob Fleming, Jar Marley, Theodore Henderson and Nat Mills.

The fifth production "Tom's Gang," starring Tom Tyler, was completed this week, under direction of Robert De Lacy. The story is an original from the pen of Frank Howard Clark and opposite Tyler appears Sharon Lynn in the leading feminine role.

"Wings" Premiere at N. Y. Criterion, Aug. 1

"WINGS," Paramount's film of American aviators in the late war, will have its premiere presentation at the Criterion Theatre on Monday evening, August 1, it was announced definitely yesterday by A. Griffith Grey, head of the Paramount road-show department. "Wings" has been dedicated to the spirit of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh.

"Wings" is the result of two years of intensive effort and $2,000,000 in expenditures. In filming the air scenes 250 airplanes were used and in reproducing the battle of St. Mihiel, which brought victory to the Allies, 10,000 soldiers took part in the picture.

William Wellman directed "Wings." The author is John Monk Saunders.

The cast is headed by Clara Bow, and includes Charles (Buddy) Rogers, Richard Arlen, Jobyna Ralston, Gary Cooper, Arlette Marchal, H. B. Walthall, Hedda Hopper, Claire McDowell, Gunboat Smith and El Brendel.

Neal O'Hara Titling Keaton's "College"

Neal O'Hara, humorist of the New York Evening World, is now engaged in the titling of "College," Buster Keaton's newest picture for United Artists. Shooting on the picture has just been completed in Los Angeles.

Laemmle Arrives in N. Y. for Trip to Europe

CARL LAEMMLE, president of Universal Pictures Corporation, arrived in New York Wednesday on the Century from Universal City, in preparation for his annual trip to Europe. He will sail on the Berengaria on June 29.

First National Branches Striving in Summer Drive

First National's annual summer sales drive, which has proved a fine incentive for building up business during the hot weather slump, got off to a fine start last week. A financial reward awaits the salesmen of each exchange which exceeds its quota for the period of the drive—an extra week's salary. First National's executives instituted this selling campaign several summers ago and have found it gaining in results with each season.

The three branches with the highest rating for the first week of the 1927 summer drive are Omaha, 140.61 per cent; Oklahoma City with 120.52 per cent, and Salt Lake City with 115.63 per cent. The six other branches which have exceeded their quotas are: Seattle, Detroit, Los Angeles, San Francisco, New York and Winnipeg. The Eastern District stood highest, with the Canadian District second.

George O'Brien's Father Pays Visit to Studio

Dan O'Brien, police chief of San Francisco and father of George O'Brien, popular Fox Films player, paid a visit to the Fox New York studio this Tuesday, June 14, to see his son working before the cameras under the direction of Allan Dwan, who is producing "East Side, West Side," the younger O'Brien's eighteenth film since signing his contract with Fox.

O'Brien had been in Canada attending a police convention and made the trip to New York while on his way back to the Coast so that he could pay his son a visit. Dan O'Brien has for several years been president of the Police Association of the United States. When the days work under the Kleig lights was finished, Captain Felix Riesenberg, author of "East Side, West Side," invited both O'Briens to be his guests on the yacht, "The Norseman."

First National's Charlie Murray-George Sidney picture, "Lost at the Front," had its first New York City showing at the smoker given last week by the Advertising Men's Post of the American Legion, given at the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory. It formed the chief entertainment feature of the smoker and went over big with the 1,600 advertising men assembled.

"Lost At The Front" obtained a good bit of publicity and exploitation through this showing, which the Adpost played up in the New York City newspapers and through an "Ode" to the Hootenanny in the picture which James A. Brewer, commander of the Post, wrote and which the Post distributed freely.

Two New Films in Work at Burbank

PHOTOGRAPHY was started this week at the First National studio at Burbank on "The Drop Kick" and "The Crystal Cup." The first is a Richard Barthelmess vehicle and it is being directed by Ray Rockett. The second picture features Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall. These two have just completed another production, "Smile, Brother, Smile."

Twenty-Six Releases from Educational During July

A large and comprehensive schedule of subjects especially suited for mid-summer showing is Educational's output of releases during the month of July. Twenty-six releases in all are intended for the month.

"Kid Tricks," starring "Big Boy," is the first issue coming on July 3 in company with "The Movie Hound," a Cameo with Phil Dunham, and "Pick a Pet," one of the Walter A. Futter "Curiosities" titled by Beth Brown. In the "Big Boy" comedy are Robert Graves, Jack McHugh, Elfie Fay, Lila Leslie and Ford West; they were directed by Charles Lamont. On July 10 comes "Meet the Folks," directed by Robert Kerr and starring Jimmie Adams with Gayle Lloyd as his feminine support; "The River of Suds—A Mid-Ocean Sunset," a Bruce Scenic Novelty, "Sure Cure," a Mermaid comedy with Clem Beauchamp, George Davis and Phil Dunham, the featured trio, and Lucille Hutton, Robert Graves, Jack Lloyd, Robert Burns and Kitty Barlow as other members of the cast directed by Stephen Roberts, and "Felix the Cat in Art for Heart's Sake," a Sullivan cartoon. Three releases are listed for July 17 in "Dead Easy," with Bobby Vernon, Doris Dawson and Jane Manners; "Brave Cowards," co-featuring Phil Dunham and Estelle Bradley, and "Capers of a Camera," a Lyman H. Howe's Hodge Podge reel. July 24 will be the occasion for the release of "Monty of the Mounted," a Lupino Lane comedy directed by Charles Lamont, and "Felix the Cat in the Travel-Hog," another adventure of the Sullivan cat. The final group of releases includes "His Better Half," presenting a Lloyd Hamilton frolic directed by Norman Taurog; "Traveling at Home," another of the Curiosities; "Hold Fast," has the Cameo girls with "Toy" Gallagher, and "High Spots," an Al St. John vehicle made under Stephen Robert's direction with Estelle Bradley in the feminine lead.

Sills Will Star in Jack London's Story

Interesting production news from First National is that the company will transfer to the screen Jack London's Alaskan story "Burning Daylight," with Milton Sills starring as a Thor of the North Country, champion dog racer, champion poker player and athlete. Wid Gunning, who had charge of the filming of "Babe Comes Home," starring Babe Ruth, will be responsible for this production. Another Sills picture will be "Just a Sucker."

Warners Schedule Product

Release Order For First Half Of Twenty-Six Winners Announced; New Titles For Product Listed

WARNER BROS. this week announced that production on the first half of the twenty-six Winners scheduled for release this season has advanced to the point that the order of release for the various pictures and the titles to adorn them are set.

Opening the new season's line-up will be "The Bush Leaguer," a baseball story starring Monte Blue supported by Clyde Cook and Leila Hyams. Howard Bretherton is the director and Charles Gordon Saxton the author.

Irene Rich's starring vehicle, temporarily titled "The Outpost," will come next. The story is by Mark Canfield and Michael Curtiz is at the megaphone directing Miss Rich and her supporting cast which includes William Russell, Douglas Gerrard, William Collier, Jr. and Jack Ackroyd. This will be followed by Rin-Tin-Tin's first, "Jaws of Steel" by Gregory Rogers with Ray Enright as its director.

The fourth release is a comedy starring George Jessel. This is being made under the temporary title of "The Broadway Kid" but a new name will be given it before release. Byron Haskin is listed as director. Then will come May McAvoy in "Slightly Used." Douglas Gerrard will support the star in this Melville Grosman story.

"A Sailor's Sweetheart" starring Louise Fazenda and Clyde Cook with William Demarest, is then on the list. Harvey Gates adapted this work of George Godfrey. Number seven will be "One Round Hogan," another picture starring Monte Blue. F. L. Gibbs is the author and Charles R. Condon its scenarist.

"Beware of Married Men" by Franz Jasque is the next. This will have Irene Rich as its star. Then comes Rin-Tin-Tin in "A Dog of the Regiment" by Albert S. Howson. This picture will tell Rinty's own life story and his deeds in France. "Finnegan's Ball" with a special cast is then scheduled. May McAvoy starring in "Rebecca O'Brien" follows.

"Five and Ten Cent Annie" with Louise Fazenda and Clyde Cook as stars supported by William Demarest is number twelve. This story is by Leon Zurade. "Good Time Charley" with Warner Oland in the title role will complete the first half of the schedule of Winners. Darryl Francis Zanuck is the author of this comedy drama.

Six Pictures in Work at Studio of Warner Bros.

THE Warner Bros. Hollywood studio is housing more units at the present time than it has ever had before. Pictures in work there are: "The Jazz Singer," "The Bush Leaguer," "The Outpost," "Ham and Eggs at the Front," "Slightly Used" and "The Broadway Kid." Al Jolson, May McAvoy, Warner Oland, Otto Lederer, Bobby Gordon and Eugenie Besserer are the featured players in "The Jazz Singer," working under Alan Crosland's direction.

In "The Bush Leaguer" are Monte Blue, Leila Hyams, Clyde Cook, William Demarest and Richard Tucker and they are being directed by Howard Bretherton.

Michael Curtiz is filming "The Outpost," the tentative title of an Irene Rich vehicle now in the process of filming at an Arizona location. "Ham and Eggs at the Front," an extended run production, features Louise Fazenda, Tom Wilson, Heinie Conklin and Myrna Loy. Roy Del Ruth is the director. "Slightly Used" is to be May McAvoy's next starring film for which Graham Baker has completed the script to be placed into the hands of Director Archie Mayo.

George Jessel's first on the year's program will probably be "The Broadway Kid," a temporary title of a story of theatrical life which Anthony Coldeway wrote. Byron Haskins will begin working on it in a few days.

Ray Rockett Will Produce Barthelmess Pictures

Al Rockett, West Coast production chief for First National, has announced that his brother, Ray Rockett, will take over the production management of future Richard Barthelmess pictures. Ray Rockett completed the production of "The Patent Leather Kid," which had been in charge of Al Rockett, since it was started early this year.

Of the other Barthelmess pictures planned for the coming year, which Ray Rockett will produce, the first will be "The Drop Kick." The second Barthelmess picture under Ray Rockett's management will be "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come." Another will be "The Noose" from the successful stage play by Willard Mack and H. H. Van Loan.

Universal Gets "The Last Warning" for Screening

The picture rights to the stage play, "The Last Warning," by Thomas F. Fallon, have been acquired by Universal Pictures, who plan to produce it as another "Cat and the Canary." It will probably be the lead-off in the company's picture schedule for the 1928-29 season. The play played to capacity houses at the Klaw Theatre in New York for an entire year. It is an adaptation of the mystery novel, "The House of Fear," by Wadswroth Camp.

Bard Replaces Foxe in "Two Girls Wanted"

Ben Bard will play the role of Jack Terry in support of Janet Gaynor in the Fox screen version of Gladys Unger's play, "Two Girls Wanted." He replaces Earle Foxe, who was originally announced for the part. Foxe was unavailable for the role because it interferes with his current Van Bibber production.

The screen presentation of "The Better 'Ole" (Warner Brothers) received strong advertising support by first run theatres by means of exploitation and newspaper campaigns. Displays reproduced above were featured by the following theatres: Fays, Rochester; Empire, Syracuse; Palace, Raleigh, N. C.; Orpheum, Chicago; Aldine, Philadelphia; Metropolitan, Washington, D. C. and Stillman Cleveland.

Milwaukee Theatre Men Stage Model Benefit

Fund Relief Show Enables City to Exceed Flood Quota by Twenty-Five Per Cent

AMONG the many magnificent accomplishments of theatre men and members of the theatrical profession in work connected with the raising of funds for relief of sufferers from the recent Mississippi flood catastrophe, the benefit performance staged in Milwaukee on May 16—a leading factor in enabling that city to exceed its quota by twenty-five per cent—stands out as a demonstration of the efficiency of organization and showmanship as well as the traditional responsiveness of the profession in emergencies of this kind.

The Milwaukee benefit show, organized and conducted by theatre owners and managers in co-operation with city officials, school authorities and organizations, exceeded the expectations of its own sponsors and set a new precedent for the city in this work.

The returns from the benefit were $36,-161, which amount was turned over to the local Red Cross Chapter for use in the Mississippi flood area. With this grand climax to the drive for funds upon the part of individuals and organizations, the total amount raised in Milwaukee went over the quota of $92,000 to the tune of twenty-five per cent.

Though the benefit show was on such huge proportions that a total of 175,000 feet of film and 120 vaudeville acts were presented, there was not one cent of overhead expense connected with the charity enterprise. The show was staged at the huge Milwaukee Auditorium, with a seating capacity of 10,000, and 40 neighborhood theatres. The show at the Auditorium ran continually from 11 A. M. to midnight, with six complete performances presented to capacity audiences.

This show drew a total of 34,188 patrons. Crowds started forming in front of the theatre at 9 in the morning, and throughout the day and at night there was a steady stream of people past the box office. At night the crowd in front of the theatre was so great that thousands were turned away, and an extra performance was necessitated, the original schedule calling for closing at 11 o'clock. Neighborhood houses accommodated 25,000 patrons.

The sale of the tickets in advance was one of the best handled details of the Milwaukee benefit. This work was done by school children; 72,000 children disposed of 61,800 tickets for the shows. The school children were divided into 13 teams, and a spirited competition was carried on throughout the drive to sell tickets. Youngsters who participated in the ticket-selling competition were rewarded for their efforts with a free performance at the neighborhood houses on the Saturday morning following the benefit.

The efficient handling of all details connected with the enormous undertaking was demonstrated by the fact that not a single accident occurred, though huge crowds were taken care of during the day and evening. At 8 o'clock in the evening a crowd of 8,000 gathered in front of the Auditorium, awaiting admission to the theatre, at that time packed to capacity, and the large detachment of policemen detailed to this special duty, though confronted with a trying problem, succeeded in keeping entrances and exits clear and affording protection to all those who gathered for the show.

Active Co-operation

The theatre owners and managers had the whole-hearted co-operation from officials and organizations, as well as stage artists and technicians. About 5,000 Milwaukee people were interested in the benefit, this number including fraternal organizations and clubs, city and school officials.

One hundred and fifty artists donated their services, providing the vaudeville and special stage numbers provided on the programs. Also engaged in the show and donating their services were 175 stage hands, 60 operators and 400 musicians.

Seventy-five taxis were used to transport the artists from one theatre to another throughout the day and evening, this service also being contributed. The Boy Scouts acted as ushers at the Auditorium, and also served as escorts for women and children at street crossings and through the crowds.

The Milwaukee benefit was planned at a meeting of theatre owners and managers at the Alhambra theatre on May 4. From that time up to the day of the show, May 16, the benefit occupied a foremost place in the interest of the city. Newspapers co-operated generously, giving the most prominent publicity to all matters connected with the show.

A statement was issued by Mayor Hoan, urging public support of the great show to increase the relief fund which Milwaukee would contribute to the Red Cross for the flood victims.

The planning and execution of the details connected with such a vast and successful enterprise stand as a credit to the qualities of public spiritedness and business efficiency of the Milwaukee theatre men. J. Tracey Hale, chairman of the county Red Cross, expressed the gratification and pride which Milwaukee people took in the work of its theatre people when, in acknowledging receipt of the check covering the proceeds from the benefit, he said "Milwaukee owes the theatrical profession its most grateful thanks for the splendid manner in which the show was put over."

The "walking hat" shown above was one of the exploitation stunts staged in Lawrence, Kansas, by Manager J. G. Weigand, of the Bowersock Theatre, for First National's "High Hat"

Jurists Decide Lesson of "World at Her Feet"

The Los Angeles Express, co-operating with the management of the Metropolitan Theatre of that city, sponsored an interesting debate over the moral pointed by "The World at Her Feet."

That standby of debatable questions "Should a wife have a career?" was the basis of the contest. A jury of six prominent men and six prominent women, all of them jurists, "tried" the case and their verdict was as follows:

Favoring a career for women: One woman lawyer.

Favoring a career and home life combined: Four women and two men.

Favoring home life for a wife: Four men and one woman.

The picture was screened for the jury and then each of the judges wrote about a hundred words, giving their reasons for their opinions. The story with photo of the jury was accepted by the Los Angeles Express, one of the biggest of the afternoon papers in the city and was the occasion for considerable comment.

Pronounced Best Example of Theatre Publicity

A humorous story concerning the Harry Langdon feature "His First Flame," written by Tom Sanson of the West Coast Publicity Department in Los Angeles, has been selected by the University of Southern California as the best example of theatre publicity submitted to the University paper.

The Sanson yarn therefore will be sent to the University of Michigan as the selection of the U. of S. C. for the contest which is being conducted by the Department of Journalism there.

Lobby displays featured the harmonica contest staged by the Rialto Theatre, Louisville, in conjunction with showing of Educational's "Big Boy" comedies

City-Wide Harmonica Contest Expolits Louisville Rialto

A CITY-WIDE harmonica tournament, staged in Louisville, Ky., by the management of Keith's Rialto Theatre, with the co-operation of Educational and M. Hohner, Inc., the latter part of May scored as one of the most popular exploitation features sponsored in that city by local theatrical interests.

The competition was open to school children, boys and girls, the entrants being selected by the schools and represented their schools in the contests held in the theatre.

Contests were held twice daily, there being four to six contestants at the afternoon performance at 3 o'clock and as many at the evening performance about 7:30 o'clock. These contests ran through Thursday with Friday devoted to semi-finals. Four contestants were picked from the semi-finals These four competed in the Saturday matinee finals. The winner then came back to play at the evening performance Saturday. Of the three daily contest judges, there was always one from a school, and the music department head served as one of the judges in the finals.

Serenade Mayor

On Friday, a large delegation of harmonica players visited the mayor of Louisville and presented him with a Chromatic harmonica after serenading him with harmonica selections. On Wednesday before the contest opened, a band of forty-five players were taken to the Capital at Frankfort to play for the governor. Then a gold harmonica was presented to him. The Rialto Theatre sent a cameraman to the scene and he obtained pictures of the playing and presentation. These were immediately developed and were on the Rialto screen on Friday. On the same reel with the pictures of the presentation to the governor, there were movies of some of the local harmonica entertainments, the reel devoted to harmonica stunts being about 400 feet in length.

In addition to the lobby exhibitors, window displays were obtained in four different music store windows. This was in the nature of a tie-up with stores handling the Hohner harmonicas with the exception of one—the large store of the Baldwin Piano Company. The stunt obtained a break in the newspapers the week before the contest, articles being published in every Louisville newspaper during the week. The contest was played up in the Rialto theatre newspaper advertising occupying more than a fourth of the space devoted to motion pictures. It was featured as a special "Better Music Week Attraction."

Catch Words Feature Novel Poster Campaign

With the support of an effective campaign executed by Manager Pat McGee, "Mr. Wu" did a better gross business than any previous Lon Chaney picture at the Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. The main feature of the drive was a teaser campaign carried out with 24-sheet panels.

The original sheets which were first posted each had a different catch word, such as Exotic, Superb, Stately, Fateful, etc., in addition to the title of the picture.

After these had been posted a week, the remaining sheets and dates were added with copy reading, "Fantastic Mr. Wu stars Lon Chaney—Coming to the Publix Criterion Saturday, May 14th."

All the newspaper ads carried practically the same copy as the 24-sheets.

Vacant Store Window Display for "Adventures"

Manager Edward Harrison made excellent use of a vacant store window to advertise "Alaskan Adventures" when that film played at the Rialto Theatre, Lincoln, Neb.

The window display consisted of cut-outs of polar bears and snow covered trees as a background—and the title of picture and theatre and play dates were painted on the window. A set of 11x14's were also placed around the window.

For an attention-getter, Harrison put a possum and eleven little ones in the window.

Theatre Pass Given With Every Hat Purchased

Manager Al Mason of the Palace Theatre, Dallas, Tex., obtained some effective exploitation for his showing of "Orchids and Ermine" through a tie-up with a local hat store. Mason provided a pass to be given each purchaser of a new hat, the stunt resulting in good advertising, carried by the store and much publicity at small cost.

The giant cutouts, shown as a feature of the lobby display above, served a double purpose in the exploitation of "The Winning of Barbara Worth" (United Artists) as used by Manager Montague Salmon of the Rialto Theatre, Macon, for they were moved to the college stadium, where they were carried about the field during a May Day celebration

Conversation From Lobby Speaker Sells Show

Manager James H. McKoy rigged up a neat lobby display for "The Telephone Girl" that got more than the usual publicity when the film played at the Rex Theatre, Spartanburg, S. C.

With the co operation of a local electrical store, an amplifier was rigged up through a big Radiola loud speaker and this was put behind a big desk phone cut-out that took up as much of the lobby as could be spared.

The phone cut-out contained the title of the show, and numerous stills from the picture.

The mouthpiece was upstairs where the speaker could see everybody that came in the lobby or passed the theatre.

To make the stunt more effective, McKoy had a man at the mouthpiece that apparently knew everybody in town.

The speaker's voice could be heard for a block away. The best part of the stunt lay in the fact that the man knew people, was quick-witted, and only said the right and clever thing at the right time.

Totes Safe to Ballyhoo "Too Many Crooks"

A novel variation of the "sandwich man" ballyhoo was used as exploitation in Jacksonville for "Too Many Crooks" at the Arcade theatre when Manager Chas. S. Morrison had a man carry a safe about on his back prior to the opening of the engagement. The worker was made up to look real hard boiled and the safe, constructed of compo board.

Los Angeles Elks Sponsor "Moulders of Men" Show

The Los Angeles Lodge No. 99 of the B. P. O. Elks, located at Westlake Park, Los Angeles, cooperated in putting over "Moulders of Men," the F. B. O. picture dedicated to the Elks, by sending out to all their members a specially prepared card, for the Figueroa, Theatre in Los Angeles.

Living figures replaced the usual cutouts used for lobby displays when "Slide, Kelly, Slide" (M-G-M) played Loew's State Theatre, Newark, N. J. The girls who posed in the "living still" were members of the local Western Electric Company's girls' baseball team

Kansas City Baseball Contest Exploits "Slide, Kelly"

A CLEVERLY arranged and well managed baseball contest, tying up with local interest in the teams of the city, scored emphatically as exploitation for the presentation of "Slide, Kelly, Slide" at the Royal Theatre, Kansas City. The campaign was staged by William Jacobs, publicity director for the theatre.

The American Association opened its season two days before the playdate and thereby gave the management a splendid opportunity to make a desired tie-up with the Kansas City ball team. A clever contest was staged, which created a city-wide interest in the film. This took the form of a fungo-hitting contest for men and a ball-throwing contest for women. Uniforms were offered to the team whose representative won the contest. The winner of the woman's contest received an annual pass to the Newman and Royal Theatres. Both the local newspapers (it was the first time in the local history of the theatre that a theatre received a break of this kind) ran stories on the contest.

The uniforms were bought, at a wholesale price, from a local concern. In return the company made a window display of the uniforms, tied-up with an exclusive and attractive set of photos taken during the World Series games at St. Louis last fall, along with stills from the picture.

The contest took place between the practice of the teams and when the crowds were already in the park. The regular announcer at the ball field announced to the spectators the purpose of the contest and the showing of the film at the theatre. Motion pictures were taken of the contests and the professional players assisted in the judging. These were inserted in the newsreel at the Newman theatre all week.

A special lobby display consisted of cut-outs from a twenty-four sheet, and a large cut-out with illuminated letters on the marquise.

Demonstrating what the "Gaucho" looks like in the flesh, and offering some advance exploitation for the new Douglas Fairbanks, fifteen South American cowboys, imported from Argentina by the star, led the street parade inaugurating the recent rodeo in Los Angeles and ballyhooed the forthcoming production "The Gaucho" in which Fairbanks stars for United Artists

Unusual Novelty Exploits "The Poor Nut"

First National's exploitation has issued an unusual novelty now being used to advertise "The Poor Nut," a forthcoming release, to exhibitors.

The novelty is an imitation English walnut, which contains a folded strip in the form of a trailer with scene reproductions and subtitles introducing the characters.

Key City Reports

New York City

ALTHOUGH the first real spell of hot weather hit New York last week, the poor business at most of the Broadway houses may probably be set down as much to the weak array of pictures offered as anything else. Nearly every one of the newspaper reviewers remarked that the week was practically without a bright and redeeming spot.

The Roxy had the poorest week since opening, with "The Heart of Salome." The house is offering this week one of the finest bills generally it has had, although the feature is not overly strong.

Not even the glory of Paul Whiteman was sufficient to bring the Paramount up to a really healthy gross with "Whirlwind of Youth." Plunkett, at the Strand, who was also a strong bidder for Paul Whiteman's services, put in Ted Lewis as opposition, but this also failed to overcome the weather and "The Tender Hour."

Although the Capitol had nothing like a record on the week with "Tillie the Toiler," the house did hold up as compared with the previous week, which was something at least. Most of the two-dollar pictures are near or at the end of their runs, with indifferent business at many.

Los Angeles

LOEW'S STATE is doing exceptionally good business this week with "Naughty But Nice" and has the added attraction of the ever-popular blues singer, Jane Green, on the boards.

Reports from Grauman's Chinese on "The King of Kings" show practically one hundred per cent sellout for the evening performances and eighty per cent on the matinees.

"Rough Riders" at the Million Dollar is reported as still going strong in the second week.

Although "Vanity" in its second week at the Forum is causing no rush at the box office, the picture is doing considerable business.

In its seventh week at the Carthay Circle Theatre, "Seventh Heaven" is holding up to expectations and the management is more than pleased with box office receipts.

"Ritzy" at the Metropolitan fails to produce much excitement among theatregoers, and is just doing average business.

Proclaimed to be a daring exposé of sex, "Is Your Daughter Safe?" at the California has been running for thirteen weeks and reports show that the picture is doing fairly well

Boston

THE long expected summer weather has arrived, hitting Boston full force and making up for lost time by its intensity. Exhibitors had been taking full advantage of the late season and the grosses for May and early June so far surpassed those of previous seasons that it will take a pretty long and hot summer to set them back even with former seasons.

Last week's Boston programs were featured by the premiere showing of "The King of Kings," at the Tremont. This brings to Boston the only road show now in the city.

Paramount's "Senorita" at the Metropolitan has been well received; in fact any film in which Bebe appears is certain to get the attention of the Boston theatregoers.

When a combination of two presentations and a good film are added, even the stay-at-homes turn out. Rodemich and his Met Merry Makers still hold sway for the musical end. "Sports Revue" is the Publix number, decidedly timely in its appearance with the real out-of-door season. Ted Lewis and his band are scheduled for the forthcoming musical number.

"Lovers" features Loew's State Theatre's bill with Phil Spitalny and his Victor Recording Orchestra as the centre of the presentation number. Loew's State has built up an enviable place as a neighborhood house.

"Resurrection" at Loew's Orpheum is drawing better than average houses and "Convoy" at the Scollay Square Olympia is also playing to good houses. Broadway Nights" at the Washington Street Olympia and "Mr. Wu" at the Bowdoin continue to attract large numbers for this season. The novelty of the Vitaphone at the Twin houses, the Modern and Beacon Theatres, and "Don Juan" are filling both daily. "The Heart Thief" at the Keith-Albee Boston Theatre, "Rough Riders" at the Fenway and particularly good features as a whole in the suburban houses have given Boston another good week with every indication that good business is in store, at least until after July 4th.

Albany

THE effects of the hottest June 10 in the history of this section, which cost the exhibitors several hundreds of dollars, conventions and poor business generally on the motion picture theatre, was pretty well illustrated in the three cities of Albany, Troy and Schenectady, last week.

At the palatial Troy theatre, "Mr. Wu" ran for the week, being coupled with the usual Vitaphone presentation. This picture had done a fine business a few weeks ago at the Leland in Albany, but in Troy it failed to attract, due primarily to the convention.

In Albany, business for the week ran only fair. Probably the best moneymaking picture for the week was "Lovers" at the Mark Strand. At the Mark Ritz in Albany, "Lawful Cheaters" ran the first three days to what might be termed ordinary business, with "Bitter Apples" running the last three days to fair houses, after being heavily panned by the newspaper critics. In fact the newspaper critics in Albany failed to find much of anything to please last week. "The Bachelor's Baby" at the Leland came in for unusually stiff criticism, which no doubt materially affected business. At the Clinton Square, the "Princess of Hoboken" and "The Devil Horse" divided honors, although weather conditions were such that business was at a low ebb. In Schenectady, the theatres still report poor business on account of a general slump in the industrial city.

Philadelphia

THE first week of hot weather made a slight inroad in general business along the theatrical Rialto.

The Stanley, with Bebe Daniels in "Senorita," and an excellent surrounding program including an extravaganza entitled "Castle of Dreams," and the Giersdorf Sisters, had a fair week.

John Barrymore continues to pull good business with "The Beloved Rogue" at the Stanton.

Syd Chaplin in "The Better 'Ole" finished a six weeks' run at the Aldine. It was expected that the picture might hold out longer.

The Arcadia took in "Rookies" after its run at the Stanley and had just a fair week.

The Karlton, with "Broadway Nights," with Lois Wilson and Sam Hardy in the leads, had just about a satisfactory week.

The Fox Theatre, playing its first Thomas Meigham film, "Blind Alleys," had a good week. The bill was bolstered with Jimmy Hussey, comedian, and Irene Franklin.

"What Price Glory," scheduled to close on Saturday night at the Fox-Locust, was extended for another week. The house will then close, to be reopened about September 1st.

"The Love of Sunya,' with Gloria Swanson, held up well at the Palace, being a repeat after the Stanley.

Tom Mix in "Outlaws of Red River," was responsible for a fairly satisfactory week at the Victoria.

"The Fire Brigade," a repeat from the Stanton, did well at the Globe.

The Capitol had rather a flat time of it with Mae Murray in "Altars of Desire."

Portland, Ore.

HOT, sultry weather over the week-end, followed by a terrific thunder-storm and heavy rain Tuesday night interfered with business considerably, but most of the houses report that trade picked up for the latter portion of the week.

The Broadway, playing "Captain Salvation" together with Fanchon and Marco's "College Humor" idea, registered well, although patrons did not think much of the film, nor the stage show.

"The Brute" at the Blue Mouse, with an excellent Vitaphone program, did excellent business. This theatre has reduced its matinees from 50c to 25c and patronage has increased materially.

The Columbia returned Fox "Monte Cristo" with splendid results. Numerous fans who had seen the picture before returned to see it again.

"The Kid Brother," second run at the Peoples, drew fairly well. All comers liked this comedy, but Lloyd seems to have suffered in popularity here from "For Heaven's Sake."

"The World at Her Feet" at the Rivoli got fair trade and was liked in proportion.

The Liberty returned "Quicksand" to slow business. There were some complaints on the picture.

Canada

THE theatres of Ottawa, Ontario, and Hull, Quebec, had considerable opposition during the week of June 6 because of the annual spring meeting of the Connaught Park Jockey Club and varied experiences were met by the film palaces.

B. F. Keith's Theatre, under the management of J. M. Franklin, held its own probably more than other houses in Ottawa with "Afraid to Love" and a strong vaudeville bill. The Regent Theatre, with Manager Ray Tubman in charge, was below average with "Knockout Reilly" in spite of the fact that Richard Dix was the star. The title apparently frightened many regular patrons. "Convoy" at the Centre Theatre proved to be an exciting picture and patronage wasn't too bad.

The attraction at the Imperial Theatre, Ottawa, was "Ankles Preferred," a Fox production. Opinion on this picture was also divided. Patronage at the Imperial was quite fair.

P. J. Nolan had a good run with "Michael Strogoff" at the Columbia Theatre, a neighborhood house in Ottawa. Extra advertising helped here. Crowds at the Francais Theatre were steady for the three-split week, the attractions being "The Social Highwayman," "Upstage" and "Sweet Rosie O'Grady." The strongest of the three was "Upstage."

In Hull, Manager Donat Paquin had three different programs at the Laurier Theatre during the week and business was fair. The features were "The Notorious Lady," "Johnnie Get Your Hair Cut" and "Oh Baby." Three bills were also presented at the Eden Theatre, Hull, with fair success, the attractions being "The Bells," "The War Horse" and "The Canyon of Light." Joseph Paquin did a little better than usual at the Capitol Theatre, Hull, with "Quo Vadis" for half of the week.

Kansas City

HOT weather put a slight crimp in the weekly attendance at most first run theatres in Kansas City this week, although the decrease was not enough to cause serious concern.

At the Newman, Florence Vidor in, "The World At Her Feet," did not suffer any decrease in crowds, but did a good week's business. The same can be said of "Rookies" on its second week's run at the Royal. At the Pantages the picture, "Love Makes 'Em Wild," was just a bit below the usual week's average, as was "Stage Madness" at the Globe theatre.

"The Telephone Girl" at the Liberty did not come up to the attendance of the previous two or three weeks, although it was not far behind. At the Mainstreet "A Million Bid," with Dolores Costello, also was a little short of the average business.

Detroit

EXCEEDINGLY warm weather during a greater part of the week exerted an unpleasant effect upon business check-ups in downtown screen palaces. Official opening of outdoor recreation centers supplied another reason for the letdown. In a few instances, receipts were away below normal. A sign of the times was evidenced recently in the Fox-Washington's closing until early August.

Revivals continue at the Broadway-Strand where seats are now selling at special summer prices. "Cohens and Kellys" did not do well in this house.

The Capitol bill listed Lon Chaney in "The Unknown" and headlined Ruth Roye along with Herbert Rawlinson on the stage. Both features pulled much more than was expected.

A big sensation was created by "Tillie the Toiler," with Marion Davies and Matt Moore. Interest in the comic strip feature boosted sales enormously. Full cooperation of the local Hearst paper also stimulated business. Proved itself the Madison's best drawing attraction during the past two months.

"Wedding Bills," featuring Raymond Griffith and a Charlie Melson stage show managed to make a fair average at the State. Patrons were pleased with both productions. However, they made a poor record during the middle of the week.

Lillian Gish's "Annie Laurie," backed by a light stage presentation, went away under at the Adams and sales dropped considerably.

The Milton Sills Romantic drama, "Framed," together with "Vienna Life," an elaborate and glittering Publix unit, kept customers coming to the Michigan at a fair rate. Early evening performances brought in the heavy trade.

Minneapolis

MINNEAPOLIS opened its new $3,000,000 auditorium this week with a seven day celebration which attracted thousands to the big building. This continued for seven afternoons and seven nights, and yet in spite of such severe competition, the moving picture theatres enjoyed a very good week.

Business at the State theatre proved better than ordinary. Florence Vidor in "The World at Her Feet" was the screen attraction. Giovanni Martinelli and Bernardo De Pace were featured on the Vitaphone. And as a big added feature, scenes for the Minneapolis Journal-Finkelstein & Ruben all-Minneapolis movie were filmed on the stage, permitting the audience to glimpse the interior of a studio.

Babe Ruth's showing at the Strand in "Babe Comes Home" was a bit disappointing. Business was reported "just fair" at the theatre. But Jack Mulhall attracted very good crowds to the Lyric in "See You in Jail" and revival week at the Grand was a great success. Here a different picture was shown each day, including "Broken Blossoms," "Monsieur Beaucaire" and some of the other old timers.

Thomas Meighan's "Tin Gods" was revived at the Aster with good results. Pantages played "Is Zat So?" for all it was worth and found it was a good business-getter. The Hennepin-Orpheum showed "Birds of Prey" with Priscilla Dean.

Business at the neighborhood theatres was up to the average, or even better than average in some cases. The Loring showed "Slide, Kelly, Slide" and "Kiss in a Taxi."

The Lagoon featured "The Love of Sunya" and "Let It Rain." At the Rialto the attractions were "Evening Clothes" and "Wolf's Clothing."

In addition to the auditorium, the Shubert provided some keen competition with Martha Hedman in "The Boomerang." The weather was generally good, and sports of all kinds were booming. The fact that the movie theatres enjoyed such good business was therefore considered quite remarkable.

Cleveland

ALTHOUGH one of the three leaving which is accredited to dark clouds ahead on the theatrical horizon last week. Big feature attractions drew big business. And fair feature attractions drew fair business. "Resurrection" did exceptionally well at the Stillman, where it was shown with Vitaphone specialty acts, and will be held over a second week. "Rough House Rosie" won mediocre criticisms, but pulled through the week with profits on the right side of the ledger. "Whirlwind of Youth" came through the competitive battle with just fair honors at Keith's Palace. The State did summer average business with "A Million Bid" as the feature attraction, surrounded by a well balanced vaudeville program. The Park theatre did better with a second run of "Rookies" last week than it has been doing with mediocre features. The Cameo came near the head of the list of local successes with "Lost at the Front" combined with "The Nickel Hopper, featuring Mabel Normand. Tom Mix scored his usual success both at Keith's East 105th St. where he played all week and at Reade's Hippodrome where it played the first half of the week. "Pleasure before Business" was shown the last half of the week with moderate success. "The Night of Love," plus Vitaphone, just about lived through the week at the Circle. Although most of the downtown houses reported that business had picked up a little last week most houses state that they are still way below the average for June, especially a cool June.

Baltimore

DUE to a Jewish holiday falling on Monday, June 6, that week got off to a flying start for good business in Baltimore, but then came a hot spell and that, combined with the Lindbergh reception on Saturday in Washington, D. C., put a bad hole in the receipts of the motion picture theatres in the Monumental City.

"Michael Strogoff," which was shown at the Embassy for its first run, following the first-run presentation of "Potemkin," did a good business, but in no manner equal to business done by the Amkino picture, during its first week.

The surprise of the week, however, was the wonderful patronage given "The Count of Monte Cristo," the five-year-old film being reissued by Fox, which made a comparative clean-up at the New Theatre. One motion picture editor went to the performance expecting to stay about fifteen minutes and remained very interested until the end.

"Children of Divorce" went over very good at Loew's Valencia and at Loew's Century, "Lovers?" also did very good business, with the sixteen Foster girls as an added attraction.

"Convoy" did a poor business at the Rivoli except on Monday. "A Million Bid," went over fairly well at Warner's Metropolitan, and only fair business was done at the two family vaudeville houses, the Garden and Keith's Hippodrome. "Rich But Honest," was the attraction at the former, while "Oh, Baby," was the attraction at the latter.

St. Louis

LOEW'S State Theatre, one of the city's two big down-town first run picture palaces, reports that "Tillie, The Toiler" featuring Marion Davies did near-record business the week ending on June 10.

On Sunday night, June 5, the house had the second largest Sunday night's business in its history. Isham Jones and his Brunswick orchestra was the big stage attraction of the week, and Isham has always been very popular in St. Louis, and no doubt contributed to the excellent receipts for the week.

Other St. Louis first runs reported improved business for the week while most of the neighborhoods also picked up in receipts. On the whole the week from a weather standpoint was the best since February, and despite the opening of the Municipal Opera season and its daily capacity of about 10,000 patrons the theatres as a whole had not much complaint.

The Missouri glorified "The Telephone Girl" with Madge Bellamy as the starette.

Across the street at the Grand Central "Broadway After Dark" was the principal screen attraction. This picture was revived and proved that it still has tremendous drawing powers.

The Ambassador Theatre showed Clara Bow in "Rough House Rosie." The St. Louis Theatre offered "Slaves of Beauty" in conjunction with five acts of Orpheum Circuit Vaudeville.

Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE theatres felt the effects of the first week of summer weather the city has had this season. The attractions were strong, but could not compete with the weather.

The Wisconsin did comparatively good business with "Tillie the Toiler," and "The Winning of Barbara Worth" brought a goodly share of patronage to the Alhambra. "The Magic Garden" at the Garden theatre was well received, and "The Whirlwind of Youth" at the Strand also drew fairly good business. "The Music Master" was the attraction at the Merrill. "The Heart Thief" made a strong bid for popularity on the bill at the Orpheum theatre.

Neighborhood theatres fared somewhat better than the down town houses during the week. "Mr. Wu" drew good business at the Milwaukee, Savoy and Colonial theatres. "Knockout Reilly" playing at the Tower and Modjeska theatres was also a favorite.

Seattle

AFTER several weeks of business below normal, the Fifth Avenue Theatre stepped back into the big money column last week, topping all other local houses with a fine stage show and average picture. "The Serpentine Girls," picked up by Fanchon and Marco from the Hollywood Music Box Revue, put over the best stage show in months, and "Senorita" as the film headliner was fairly popular. Business above average.

At the Blue Mouse, John Hamrick inaugurated a new summer policy of two-week pictures and Vitaphone shorts with his engagement of "The Brute." The picture did a very good business, attracted principally by the Vitaphone subjects, however. 25c matinees and 50c evenings prevail.

"Cabaret" at the United Artists was decidedly below average. An excellent exploitation and advertising campaign filled the house for the first few days of the run, but audience comment after that knocked off business to a noticeable extent.

"Beware of Widows" at the Columbia Theatre was an entertaining picture that pleased the regular patrons of the house. It was not a big box office attraction, however. Similar comment may be made relative to "Don't Marry for Money" at the Embassy.

The Coliseum Theatre, after topping the town for two consecutive weeks with "Rookies," got a tough break in pictures with "Broadway Nights" and "Blind Alleys." Neither of these pictures had any box office appeal so Manager Raleigh cut down their engagements to a half-week each and then expected to stage a comeback with "Captain Salvation."

The California Collegians on the stage and "Mr. Wu" on the screen of Hamrick's Egyptian Theatre kept this house head and shoulders above the other leading neighborhood houses, even at slightly advanced prices. Business was strong for the week.

Another neighborhood house that will be a contender for business was opened last week—Jensen and Von Herberg's Bagdad Theatre in Ballard. The opening week's program, included "Venus of Venice" and a children's stage revue direct from a down-town run at the Fifth Avenue Theatre did a mighty fine business.

Weather has been quite warm, and people are beginning to remain in the outside air, but picture business is just as good as is expected at this time of year.

Indianapolis

AVERAGE summer business was reported by Indianapolis box offices the past week. Business has gradually gained since the slump the week before the Memorial Day speedway races. Spring weather—frequent showers—played their part in running down total receipts. Berkell and Stuart Walker stock company attractions have drawn heavily from the movie crowds.

Babe Ruth in "Babe Comes Home," had a good run at the Circle, leading the week's business. "The Understanding Heart" at the Ohio and "Rough House Rosie" at the Apollo did fair business.

Oklahoma City

FAIR weather this week with a steady increase in heat. All of the theatres changing programs in midweek except the Criterion where Clara Bow in "Rough House Rosie" played to splendid sized audiences. A little larger ads for this picture, but nothing spectacular. "Lovers" did very well at the Capitol the first of the week. "Cabaret" with Gilda Gray brought a good house for the last part of the week at this theatre. "The Sunset Derby" began the week at the Empress and was well received, but it was changed in midweek—probably the summer schedule beginning for this theatre—to "The Heart Thief." This played to fair business. "The Night Bride" brought all Marie Prevost's admirers to the Liberty the first part of the past week—a goodly crowd. It gave way the last half to "Fighting Love."

San Francisco

THE past week in San Francisco, was considered fairly good but not as good as it should have been in the majority of houses, due in some instances, it is thought, to the fact that the pictures were not as good as they usually have them.

.."Don Juan," shown for a third week at the St. Francis Theatre, continued to draw crowds. "Drums of the Desert," at the Granada did fairly well, but not as expected. The act there, "Sunshine and Rain," was well thought of. "The World At Her Feet," at the California Theatre, did not do well but the comedy "Should Men Walk Home?" was well received. The sea romance "Captain Salvation" at Loew's Warfield did fairly well but not as usual; the colored comedy, "His Brown Idea," did excellent.

At the Cameo Theatre, "The Naked Truth," was shown for a third week at advanced prices and, on certain days, continued to attract people. "Husband Hunters," together with an F B O comedy and five acts of vaudeville drew crowds. "The Sea Tiger" did fair at the Golden Gate Theatre, the crowds filling the house, mainly, however, to see Gus Edwards and Co. "One Increasing Purpose," at the Pantages, did well, it being considered odd, which together with the acts drew crowds.

At the residential theatres, good business was done at the larges ones, the Coliseum Theatre's program being considered exceptional with "Altars of Desire" and the comedy, "The Wrong Mr. Wright." Nat Holt's Wigwam Theatre did exceptionally well with "Hey, Hey, Cowboy," which made many return, as did the musical comedy, "Custard's Last Fight." The Majestic Theatre did fairly well in "The Wilderness Woman" and the Casino did well with "My Neighbor's Wife."

Central Pennsylvania

THE outstanding film play of the week in Harrisburg was "Resurrection," at Loew's Regent, featuring Rod La Rocque and Dolores Del Rio. Of the lighter type of show "An Affair of the Follies," with Lewis Stone, Billie Dove and Lloyd Hughes, proved popular and the size of the crowds throughout the week indicated that a play of this type leaves a pleasant after-reflection.

Apparently "Fashions for Women," with Esther Ralston and Raymond Hatton, was a good deal of a flop at the Victoria, for after running half a week in this theatre, which for months has been booking exclusively week-run plays, it was unceremoniously taken off the screen. Manager Lee Levy substituted for the final half of the week "Arizona Bound," with Gary Cooper, and had far more pulling power. The published excuse for taking off "Fashions for Women" was that it was done to permit the showing of the Arizona Western, which, it was stated, for some reason or other, had to be booked in a hurry to assure its having an early Harrisburg showing.

That the "Birth of a Nation" still has power to attract was proved at the Russell theatre where this classic drew paying crowds.

Almost every week this season there has been a large carnival company showing in Harrisburg, constituting a counter attraction to the movies. This week it was "West's World Wonder Shows."

Opinions on Current Productions

"The Phantom Outlaw"
(Universal Mustang—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

THIS one with Fred Gilman will please the two reel Western fans, for Director Wyler has managed to get considerable action out of the usual amount of riding and fighting. A long rough and tumble fight takes place when Gilman has convinced Capt. Randall's son Jack that he ought to return to his father and straighten out a mystery that has arisen over his disappearance, and the fact that a Phantom Outlaw is menacing the community. For their own protection, his accomplices don't want to see him leave—hence the battle. And then, there's Steve Kelly, the villain, who kidnaps Cap'n Randall's daughter just about the time Gilman has made up his mind that she's the Only Girl. Oh, there's lots of trouble and villainy afoot! However, as you well know, Gilman prevents the villain's escape and the last reel ends with hero and heroine making plans for that long put off wedding.

"Queens Wild"
(Educational—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

NUMBER this one among the more humorous than the average comedies. In addition to the funny business we are treated to some cleverly executed double exposure shots of Estelle Bradley in the dual role of wife and flirtatious flapper who are twin sisters. The acting takes place in a small hotel where a newlywed couple are registered. The bridegroom experiences continual difficulty because of the presence in the hotel of his wife's twin sister who is not averse to the admiration of the opposite sex; her flirtations exasperate him because he can't tell whether it is the sister or his wife who is flaunting her sex appeal. However, the complications are finally ironed out.

The cast consists of Estelle Bradley, Phil Dunham, Clem Beauchamp, George Davis, and Jack Lloyd. Stephen Roberts directed.

A trio of comedy moments in a recent release from Educational

"Who's Afraid"
(Educational—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

LUPINO LANE'S latest comedy furnishes plenty of reason for laughter as a result of the many amusing situations contrived when the pantomimist-tumbler-juggler finds himself an inmate of a freak museum. He had asked father's permission to wed the girl and was told to prove he could support her; but in his eagerness to show his worth he became unpleasantly involved with a member of the police force and had to flee before that dignitary's wrath.

Lane's supporting cast includes Kathryn McGuire, Robert Graves, and Wallace Lupino. Charles Lamont directed.

"Rumors For Rent"
(Fox Helen & Warren—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

DIRECTOR HARRY SWEET has taken the old hand-cuff gag—where two persons are linked to one another—and done wonders with it in this Helen and Warren comedy written by Mabel Herbert Urner. Kathryn Perry and Arthur Hosman, as uusual, are the featured players.

Warren gets thirty days as the result of being caught in a raid on a gay party while his wife is supposed to be visiting relatives. In reality she is in on the same affair—but in another part of the house. On the twenty-ninth day, his prison companion to whom he is handcuffed, decides to escape and naturally Warren has to go with him. There's a flock of laughs from this time on. Otto Fries, as the fellow convict, also does good work.

"Snookums Asleep"
(Universal-Stern Bros.—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

MOST of these Snookums comedies are pretty good and this one starts off as if it were going to run true to form, but about half way through the action starts to drag and it never gets on its feet again. These two reelers are all Snookums, anyway, and when a sufficient number of amusing situations are not provided, the pace is bound to be slow. The usual household sets are used for the show. In addition, Newlywed attempts to catch a couple of back fence cats to amuse the kid. Mrs. Newlywed is attending a glee club meeting and the daddy gets all tired out trying to keep the baby contented during her absence. They finally break up the meeting.

(Scenic-Educational—One Reel)

THE scenes shown in this Bruce Scenic certainly live up to the title given the reel for the views of land and water will produce a desire in all who see it to visit the country photographed. These charmingly picturesque shots were taken at Lake Louise in the Canadian Rockies and at Moraine Lake in the nearby valley of the Ten Peakes.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

Personality and fun are reflected from these shots from a recent Pathe two-reeler

"Giddy Gobblers
(Educational—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

NEAL BURNS is featured in this Christie Comedy which tells of the boy who tried to win his fiancee's father to his side by treating him to a turkey dinner. But, alas and alack, the cop upstairs was trying to work himself out of a difficult situation with his captain by the same means, a thief had secreted a stolen necklace in the gobbler intended for Neal and, to cap the climax the robber stole the gobbler and the poor fiance was forced to steal another, which entailed considerable chasing about. However the thief was apprehended, the turkey recovered, the fiancee's father was appeased and the cop was not transferred to the "sticks."

Neal Burns, Edna Marion, Jack Duffy, Bud Ross, Bill Blaisdell and Bill Irving comprise the cast, which was directed by Arvid Gillstrom.

"Sleepy Time Pal"
(Univeral Bluebird—One Reel)

NEELY EDWARDS is the featured player in this Blue bird comedy, and it's a better than usual Edwards effort. Getting rid of his rival for the moment, after the girl has turned down both engagement rings and has asked for time to consider the proposals, Neely presses his suit with much vigor. In the meantime, a storm comes up and he is forced to stay for the night in the room of Uncle Lochinvar from the wild and wooly West. During the night Uncle comes home much under the weather and dreams that he is again breaking bronchos. The love affair ends disastrously.—E. G. JOHNSTON.

"Love 'Em and Weep"
(Roach-Pathe—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

ANOTHER of the Hal Roach Star series which shouldn't miss fire with the fans. It is one of those domestic triangle stories which are old in history, but always new in the telling of the man who wrote instead of using the telephone in a romance preceding his marriage to another girl. The story has been given good production and the cast is made up of some of the best in the Roach roster of players, with Mae Busch, who ordinarily graces feature length pictures, as the star.

Stan Laurel, Jimmie Finlayson, Oliver Hardy, Charlotte Mineau and Vivien Oakland support the star. Fred L. Guiol directed under supervision of F. Richard Jones with costuming by Lambert.

"What An Excuse"
(Universal Stern Bros.—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

THERE'S a little curly-headed blond comedienne in this Stern Bros.' two-reeler that's pretty good, but they don't give her name so we can't give her proper credit. But anyway, she's the best thing about the picture which seems to contain every old gag that has been pulled since comedies first started being made.

The girl's father hires a detective to keep all males away from his daughter but intrepid Charlie, the favored one, frustrates the attempt and in the end carries off the prize.

"The Tenants of Marble Canyon"
(Scenic-Educational—One Reel)

THE tenants of Marble Canyon in the Canadian Rockies, Alberta, Canada is a bear family, mother and three children. The footage is devoted to a picture analysis of their manner of passing the time with camera studies of the country in which they live. The gambols of the young bears are cute to watch but the scenery is "not so hot."—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"Under The Bed"
(Universal Bluebird—One Reel)

CHARLES PUFFY has the part of a lonesome hubby in this one and while waiting for his wife to return to their hotel apartment a pickpocket, disguised as a woman, seeks protection. Charlie hides him under the bed. The bride of a newly married couple next door also asks aid of Charlie in order to escape the wrath of a pursuing father and she, too, is put under the bed. In the meantime the wife arrives after being chased for speeding by a motorcycle cop. Complications follow. It's an amusing little comedy.—E. G. JOHNSTON.

Buster's Initiation"
(Universal-Stern Bros.—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

BUSTER and Mary Jane have placed Tige in a brand new role in this Stern Brothers' two reeler. The clever dog furnishes the power for their little automobile which is the means of transportation to and from school. At school the usual tricks are played upon the teacher, with Buster, Mary Jane and Tige very much in the limelight—and trouble. Angry at Buster for stirring the teacher's wrath the rest of the boys decide to get him, but with the assistance of faithful Tige, Buster and Mary Jane elude the gang and proceed with an elopement. This is O. K.

"Cows Is Cows"
(Universal Western Comedy—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

MORE to do in this one with the rivalry between the villages of Paradise and Piperock, in which the former imports a pugilist and insolently challenges the latter to produce a better fighter. A hatpin jab at the hands of his pal is the means of getting Pee Wee Holmes into the limelight and he is immediately acclaimed as the "hope" of Piperock. Ben Corbett trains him for the coming match. There is much horse play in this and the actual encounter. The fighter from Paradise batters him around almost at will but as an impatient fan pushes Pee Wee back in the ring his head hits the champ's and the latter is knocked cold. It's amusing.

"Cured in the Excitement"
(Sennett-Pathe—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

A FAIR amount of laughs is contained in this Mack Sennett production which features Madeline Hurlock and Billy Bevan. The story tells of a man who hied to a sanatorium to doctor some imaginary ills but he got no peace because the gymnasium instructor at the human repair factory was quite friendly with his wife. But then he discovered his suspicions were ill-founded.

Vernon Dent and Thelma Hill appear in suppart of the featured players in this comedy, which was directed by Karl Rodney.

Some of the interest-holding qualities of Hal Roach's comedies are indicated by the above scenes taken from a recent Pathe release

"The Road to the Yukon"
(Fox Variety—One Reel)

DON'T miss this issue of Fox Variety—it's one of the best we've seen. And particularly good for the summer weeks when your patrons' thoughts are turning to Northern resorts. It will open your eyes to the beauty and charm of the English city of Victoria on Vancouver Island and will take you on a 700-mile trip through the famous narrows to Prince Rupert—just across the bay from Alaska. There are some great shots.—E. G. JOHNSTON.

"Felix the Cat in Dough-Nutty"
(Educational—One Reel)

FELIX the Cat and his antics furnish the usual amount of entertainment but we don't care for the introduction of the human figure into this pen-and-ink creation, nor, we believe, will your patrons. This idea of the combination of the human figure and the pen-and-ink-drawing has been used in another series of cartoons but we've never been able to understand the reason for so doing as there seemed no need for it especially as the human figure contributed little or nothing to the enjoyment of the reel.

Here's hoping they leave Felix alone to work out his own difficulties.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

Pathe Review No. 24
(Pathe—One Reel)

PATHE-COLOR views of the pelican, the flower, Cyclamen from the Mediterranean, and the (old reliable for color shots) Yellowstone Falls which has probably been photographed from more angles than any other spot on the globe. An interesting item in black and white in the back-stage views of the principals and chorus preparing for one of New York's musical comedy extravaganzas. The last is a collection of ethereally lovely scenes of trees and sky.

Up to standard.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"Flying Feet"
(Sportlight-Pathe—One Reel)

ANOTHER of the always interesting issues of Grantland Rice's Sportlight reels. This one, as indicated in the title, deals with footraces both by humans and animals. Some of the most famous runners in this country and abroad are on view in this issue, Sholtz, Robertson, McAllister, etc. Then some of our best-known thoroughbred race horses and the canine meteors, whippets.

This can be sold to any audience.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"The Flying Fool" Banks' Next Pathe Vehicle

Monte Banks' next feature comedy for Pathe release will be "The Flying Fool," originally annaunced as "An Ace in the Hole," but changed because of conflict with a magazine story of the same name. "The Flying Fool" is from an original story by Charles Moran, who also worked on the scenario and comedy situations in collaboration with Hampton Del Ruth, Matt Taylor and the comedian himself. As the scenario is nearing completion an announcement of Banks' supporting cast is expected within a week.

Dearie

Good Picture; Should Please; Title Poor

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

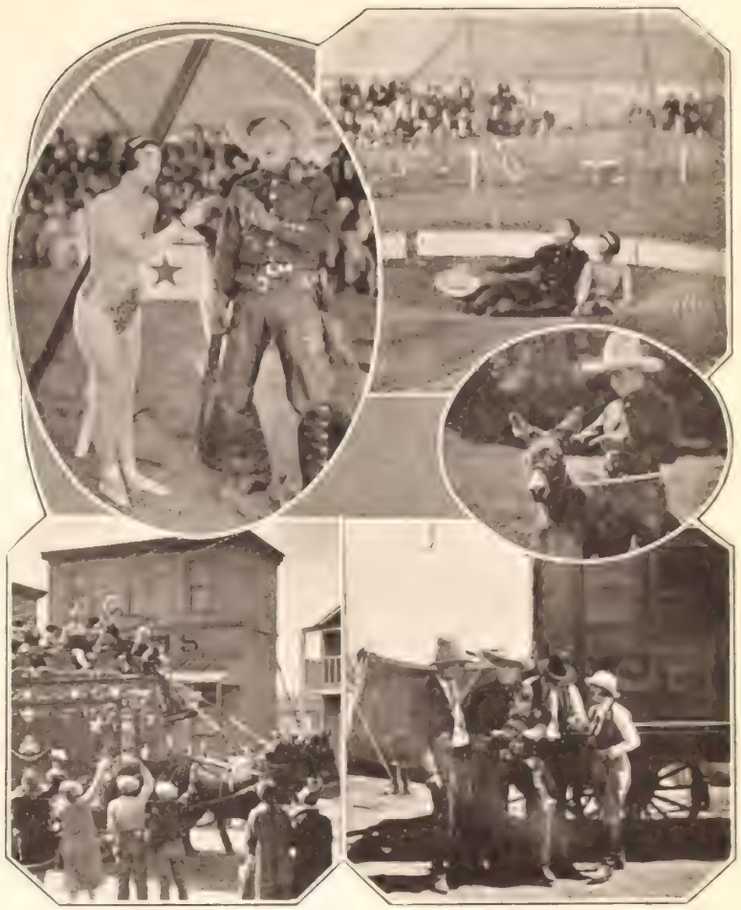
THERE'S nothing wrong with this production except the title, which, meaning nothing as an indication of what to expect, may result in poor attendance as it will not attract any particular "type" fan, theatregoers with a penchant for any specific variety of story. But, once in the theatre, the spectator will not be dissatisfied with what the unwinding of the reels unfolds for this tale of mother-love has some very strong moments, and the acting of the cast is all that could be asked; it is a personal triumph for Irene Rich and William Collier, Jr., with creditable performances by Edna Murphy, Anders Randolph and Richard Tucker.

Another fault that might be found is the lack of comedy relief but it is our belief that the usual method of alternating the tragic and comic scenes would be out of place in this film as the forced comedy gag would prove an intrusion. Perhaps it was intended that the two "intellectuals" associated with Collier both in college and at home would provide some humorous moments but their performances were flat, whether through their own inability or through directorial restraint, it is hard to state.

The Cast: Irene Rich (starred), William Collier, Jr., Edna Murphy, Anders Randolph, Richard Tucker, Arthur Rankin, David Mir, Douglas Gerrard, Violet Palmer. Story by Carolyn Wells, scenario by Anthony Coldeway, directed by Archie Mayo, photographed by David Abel.

THEME: Mother is forced to work in night club to support son in college who believes he has literary ability. He writes novel which is rejected by publisher-friend of mother. She intercedes, is misunderstood by son, but they are brought together, when son accidentally shoots her.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The night club scenes. Acting of Miss Rich and Collier. The lavish production.



EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up star as former productions have made her popular.

DRAWING POWER: Good for any type of theatre.

Produced and distributed by Warner Brothers. Length, 5,897 feet. Released, June 18, 1927.

What Every Girl Should Know

Recounts an Interesting Story

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

POSSESSING a title that provokes curiosity because of the air of finality in its phrasing and presenting in acceptable fashion a story that sprouts melancholy here and there, closing on the motif of happiness as the result of good, "What Every Girl Should Know" is here judged as a pleasant little piece that is entertaining. Virtues it has in its avoidance of story implausibility and the odious heavy. Its sprightly injections of comedy and its tennis match, a climax that is novel. Still, it has its movements doloroso when the home is broken up and the two orphans are left alone while their big brother goes to prison and they do not carry conviction. The interest is warmed and the momentum of the tale quickened when the scenes of the orphange fade out, the scenes that follow of the seeming security of the heroine with her benefactor affording a welcome contrast. All hands fit in nicely in the story and, with material supplied him by John Wagner, Reisner's direction evinces his ability.

Perhaps it was the wiser thing to do in not revealing what it is that should be known and sending the audience out to figure it out for themselves. Certainly, it often happens that what is supposed to be the answer to a question is often simple bunk.

The Cast: Patsy Ruth Miller, Ian Keith, Carrol Nye, Mickey McBann, Lillian Langdon, Hazel Howell, Carmelita Geraghty. Director, Charles Reisner.

THEME: Household of three orphans disintegrates when breadwinner goes to prison on untrue charge of reckless driving, and remaining two to orphanage from which they are rescued by one of the trustees who adopts them and finally wins the elder of the two, a girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Automobile accident and scene of brother's departure for prison. Senes in orphanage and tennis match.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Second page of press sheet has plenty of suggestions for tie-ups with various stores, how to attract with the title, ballyhoo stunts, etc.

DRAWING POWER: Palatable fodder for neighborhood and second run houses.

Produced and distributed by Warner Brothers. Length, 6,281 feet. Released, March, 1927.

The Circus Ace

Realistic Mixture of Western and Circus

(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

THE lure of a pretty trapeze artist in the person of Natalie Joyce is the reason for Tom Mix forsaking his usual ranch houses, canyons and outlaws' dens in order to hang around the walls of a "big top"; a circus in a badly battered financial condition, and destined for more trouble through the efforts of a wealthy villain who has loaned the outfit money to get Millie Jane in his toils.

The circus atmosphere is realistic and well done; as is the parachute descent when Tom first meets Millie through an unsought and unappreciated rescue. His next attempt to gain favor also ends disastrously; that is, when he playfully shoots up some toy balloons set adrift by Gus, guardian of Clarence, the Kangaroo boxer. The shooting alarms the elephant and again Tom has to rescue the lady from a runaway. About this time, the villain starts his dirty work of threatening to foreclose on the circus owner and also attempts to do away with Tom, who has become a dangerous rival. Oh dear, things do look black for Tom! Lots of action in the tent now; then the kidnapping of Millie by a ruse, and her rescue in a far away mountain home by Tom. All is well.

All of the cast do admirable work, including the kangaroo. Mix is as agile as ever; so is Tony. Natalie Joyce has a mighty attractive screen personality.

The Cast: Tom Mix, Natalie Joyce, Jack Baston, Duke Lee, James Bradbury, Stanley Blystone, Dudley Smith, Buster Gardner, and Clarence the kangaroo. Director, Benjamin Stoloff.

THEME: Western melodrama with a lot of circus atmosphere and romance.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Parachute descent, rescue of heroine from runaway elephant, good circus atmosphere and stunts under tent, the final rescue and good work of cast.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Circus angle has great appeal.

DRAWING POWER: All Tom Mix fans and others will enjoy this one.

Produced and distributed by Fox Films.
Length, 4810 feet. Released, June 26, 1927.

A Million Bid

Moderately Entertaining; Lavish Production

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

THE excellent production values, acting of the principal players (when they are not restricted by direction) and a fair amount of interest aroused through the suspensive element augur a fair reception for this production by the fans. If memory serves correctly the story was filmed some years ago with Anita Stewart in the role now enacted by Dolores Costello, and, again from memory, it seems the former was the better production. However, we believe that the scenario writer and director, not the players, are responsible for the very slow development of the current picturization of the George Cameron novel.

The star displays considerable emotional ability in her big scenes and is ably seconded by the featured members of the cast but the story is developed so slowly that one rather loses patience. The best thing about the production is the wonderment as to what will happen next or just how the complications are to be ironed out. The theme, that of the doctor committed to his work despite any personal sacrifice involved, has been used before but there is no complaint on that score; the fault lies in the old-fashioned treatment of the story. In an attempt to add a touch of novelty a number of trick camera shots are introduced but they mean little or nothing; some could easily be eliminated.

The Cast: Dolores Costello, Warner Oland, Malcolm McGregor, Betty Blythe, William Demarest, Douglas Gerrard, Grace Gordon. Scenario by Robert Dillon, directed by Michael Curtiz.

THEME: Melodrama. Girl is forced to marry millionaire she despises. He is lost at sea and she weds young brain specialist; millionaire returns, victim of aphasia, and specialist operates. Operation successful but patient pretends mind still blank, thus insuring happiness of couple.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Acting of star and supporting cast. Sumptuous production.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Bill star and tease title.

DRAWING POWER: Good.

Produced and distributed by Warner Bros.
Length, 6,310 feet. Released, May 28, 1927.

Lost At The Front

Some Slapstick Of The War

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE'S apparently no end to treating the late unpleasantness in Europe with a slapstick brush. This piece—a series of gags at the front—has no head nor tail to it, but it manages to squeeze in a fair sized amount of amusing comedy, even if the action is far fetched and padded to round it off as a feature.

George Sidney and Charles Murray carry on the antics—most of which can be catalogued as low comedy. The former is an ex-bartender, the latter an ex-policeman—hailing (the both of them) from the sidewalks of New York. In the hodge-podge of slapstick at the front, it is Sidney's assignment to duck his head in a can from which he is unable to remove it. So Murray uses him as a target for a machine gunner with the result that the can is neatly severed. There is another episode wherein the comedians disguise themselves as members of the Russian Battalion of Death (the famous regiment of women). After it has served its purpose they jump into more complicated comedy—which is very much hodge-podge.

It is a fair offering of its kind, but the burlesque motif of treating the war is fast losing its punch. Both comedians exercise their old-school tricks of pantomime and arouse the chuckles here and there.

The Cast: Charles Murray, George Sidney, Natalie Kingston, John Kolb, Max Asher, Brooks Benedict, Edward Brady, Harry Lipman, Nina Romaine. Director, Del Lord.

THEME: Comedy of antics at the front with policeman and bartender getting into all kinds of adventures.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS:—The scene when Sidney tries to extricate his head from can. The episode of the coat wherein Sidney appears headless. The masquerade comedy. The gags. The subtitles. The pantomime of comedians.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Bill as comedy of the war. Tie up with Legion, etc. Feature Sidney and Murray.

DRAWING POWER: O. K. for average houses.

Produced and distributed by First National. Length, six reels. Released, June, 1927.

The Unknown

It's a Shocker with Chaney Doing His Stuff

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT'S Lon Chaney's privilege to greet you with something off the beaten path in characterization. In this picture (a shocker if there ever was one) he assumes another uncanny study, the central figure of a strong, but decidedly unpleasant yarn of a Spanish circus. The star has a way of attracting movie fans who come to see what next will be served up in the way of original characterization. Lon is a man who never fails them.

In his freakish role of the Armless Wonder he has apparently tortured himself to make his portrait real. Not given to half-way measures he has learned to eat, drink and smoke with his toes. He also uses his feet to hurl knives at a human target, represented by a girl who has responded to him because he is unable to manhandle her.

Not a pleasant tale, is it? And one must be used to strong emotions to appreciate many of its gruesome touches. Chaney's character starts off extracting sympathy, but only his art as an actor saves him at the end. So realistic does he make the figure that you actually shudder when he becomes an arch-fiend. Tod Browning, responsible for "The Unholy Three" and many other of the Chaney films, has put over a genuine shocker, but it hasn't the surprises or plot nor the shadings of character which made the above-mentioned piece a masterpiece of its kind.

The Cast: Lon Chaney, Joan Crawford, Norman Kerry, Nick de Ruiz, John George, Frank Lanning. Director, Tod Browning.

THEME: Melodrama of circus—with freak avoiding arrest by posing as Armless Wonder. He plots diabolical vengeance but is frustrated.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The circus atmosphere and episodes. The weird characterization by star. The incident. The romantic conflict. The suspense.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up as Chaney's weirdest character study to date. Use plenty of stills of Joan Crawford.

DRAWING POWER: Star will pack the house. Not for the children.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn. Length, seven reels. Released, June, 1927

Running Wild

Fields Is Finally Running Strong

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT has taken W. C. Fields several pictures to get going. His "Running Wild" enters the gallery, well fortified with chuckles—many of which come deep from the diaphragm. He plays again the henpecked, timid husband ruled by a hellion, but this time succeeds in traveling a much truer track. Call it hokum, call it what you will, the piece has a spriteliness about it which, while it will break no box-office records, will not leave many vacant seats.

The comedian has discarded his Follies tricks—tricks, you might say, which were keeping him back. In this offering he demonstrates he has some different aces up his sleeve. Gregory La Cava, responsible for much of Richard Dix's popularity, has seen to it in his authorship and direction that Fields must chart a new comedy path. As a result he has concocted a sizable story that is well decorated with amusing gags and incidents. Fields steps upon the stage of a local theatre and becomes hypnotized. When the hypnotist says to him—"you're a roaring lion!"—W. C. overcomes his timidity and lives up to the character of the jungle king. The antics are mostly original—the subtitles are rather nifty—and taken altogether it is pretty good fun.

The Cast: W. C. Fields, Mary Brian, Claud Buchanan, Marie Shotwell, Frederick Burton, J. Moy Bennett, Frank Evans, Edward Roseman, Tom Madden. Director, Gregory La Cava.

THEME: Comedy of timid, brow-beaten husband who is hypnotized into a roaring lion and overcomes his inferiority complex.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The pantomime of star who releases some new comedy tricks. The scene where Fields is hypnotized. The antics indulged in by hero when he dominates his household. The daily dozen incident.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up as Fields' best. Bill as demonstration of mind over matter. Treat copy from humorous angle.

DRAWING POWER: Sure to please patrons. O. K. for all average houses, neighborhoods, etc.

Produced and distributed by Paramount.
Length, six reels. Released, June, 1927.

The Secret Studio

Romance In An Old-Fashioned Way

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE idea behind this story has seen yeoman service on the screen, so much so that it has long outlived its usefulness. Stories of artists and the models never seem to take the big plunge into original paths. They must ever represent a slice of tawdry love in which the girl just barely escapes with her honor intact while the young bounder with the brush is severely punished by the poor, but honest youth.

In this picture there is some appropriate atmosphere represented in the studio, the artists' ball and in the treatment accorded the characters. But it never rings genuine because it is so palpably made to order. The heroine consents to pose, but she never imagined the painting would be executed as a nude. The artist had used his imagination and not the figure of the model. When he exhibits it her boy friend takes prompt action in the melodramatic way and, after slashing the painting, sees to it that his rival is adequately punished.

There is some building here for heart interest, but the touch looks out of place because of the story's lack of realities. There is compensation, however. It is furnished by the appeal and charm of Olive Borden's personality.

The Cast: Olive Borden, Clifford Holland, Noreen Phillips, Ben Bard, Kate Bruce, Joseph Cawthorn, Margaret Livingston, Walter McGrail, Lila Leslie, Ned Sparks. Director, Victor Schertzinger.

THEME: Romantic drama of artist and model—with latter escaping former's lustful advances to find happiness with worthy youth.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The atmosphere of studio. Scene when artist exhibits painting. The ball. The climax when painting is slashed and artist is punished. The appeal of Miss Borden.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Feature Olive Borden who has been photographed in dozens of poses and costumes. Stage prologue of dancing numbers against a background of an artist's studio, etc.

DRAWING POWER: Should be O. K. for average houses.

Produced and distributed by Fox.
Length, six reels. Released, June, 1927.

Studio Briefs

William Wyler, one of the youngest directors in the industry, has been signed by Universal to a contract that will keep him in the Laemmle organization for the next five years. He is now making "Thunder Riders," starring Ted Wells.

Lee Moran has a prominent role in "Spring Fever," William Haines' new vehicle which Edward Sedgwick is directing for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Ruddy Messenger will play a featured role in "the series of comedies planned for Arthur Lake by Universal. The series will consist of thirteen episodes of one reel each.

Noah Young will again appear in a Hal Roach comedy, for the first time in several years. He will work under Fred Guiol's direction and in company with Stan Laurel, Viola Richard and James Finlayson. Young was with Roach for nine years and left to try his hand as a free lance.

A contract as a writer for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has just been signed by Colin Clements, who has been actor, playwright, stage manager and producer during his career.

The leading character in "The Noose," the play recently acquired by First National, will be Richard Barthelmess when the work by Willard Mack and L. H. Van Loan is placed into work. In the Barthelmess production schedule "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come" will probably follow "The Drop Kick."

His part in "Painted Ponies" having been completed, Hoot Gibson is now enjoying a vacation while the Universal film is cut and edited. The story, by J .H. Hamlin, was directed by Reaves Eason. Ethlyne Claire has the leading role and Slim Summerville is a member of the cast.

George Ovey, veteran comedian of over 200 two-reel comedies, has been signed to play a part in "Pals in Peril," the next Pathe Western featuring Buffalo Bill, Jr. Others in the cast are Olive Hasbrouck, Robert Homans, Harry Belmour, Raye Hampton, Bill Porter, Bert Lindley, Edward Hearn and Richard Neill.

Eddie Sturgis has been added to the cast of "After Midnight," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's newest vehicle for Norma Shearer in which the star is supported by Lawrence Gray, as leading man, Gwen Lee, Ruth Burdick and others. Monta Bella is directing.

"Out All Night," Reginald Denny's latest starring picture for Universal, has been completed and is now being cut and edited at Universal City. An original story by Gladys Lehman provided the source of the Denny picture which William A. Seiter directed. Marion Nixon is the featured feminine player.

"The Rush Hour," the Metropolitan picture which E. Mason Hopper is directing with Marie Prevost in the lead, has been augmented by the addition to the cast of Franklin Pangborn.

An inter-collegiate boat race, one of the last exterior sequences of "Hell's Kitchen," Robert Kane's latest production for First National, was shot at New Rochelle, New York, last week when Ben Lyon stroked his crew to victory over their opponents. Almost every one connected with the production played a bit in the picture, the co-directors, Joe Boyle and Frank Capra, and the producer being about the only ones to stay out of the camera's range.

Before he takes the leading male role in "Beau Sabreur," Gary Cooper is to play the starring role in "Nevada" under John Water's direction. Thelma Todd will appear opposite Paramount's Western star. The company is now on location in Utah. Cooper is taking sword instruction from a fencing expert preparatory to his role in "Beau Sabreur."

Rosita Moreno, Spanish dancer under contract to Feature Productions, a United Artists unit, is beginning her screen career under the supervision of John W. Considine, Jr., president of Feature Productions.

Ewart Adamson, F.B.O. scenarist, will write the continuity for "The Century Championship," a magazine story by Frank Richardson Pierce which will be made and released by F.B.O. under the title of "Deadman's Curve." No director or cast has as yet been chosen.

Gloria Swanson has signed George Barnes as first cameraman and Thomas Branigan as assistant cameraman for "Sadie Thompson," her second picture for United Artists. Production will start within a fortnight.

Walter Heirs left Hollywood last week for New York, where he will be stationed for a month, at least. While in the East he will attend the Shrine Convention in Atlantic City and will make several personal appearances before returning.

Alice Calhoun is playing opposite the star. Characterizations are given by Charles K. French, Jimmy Aubrey and Big Boy Williams. Charles K. Hutchinson is directing.

Jobyna Ralston has completed the title role in "Betty's a Lady," the Universal feature that also stars Charles Ray.

The mother in "Beautiful But Dumb," Vera Reynolds' newest starring film, is being portrayed by Claire McDowell. Frank Urson is directing the picture at the De Mille studio.

Wesley Ruggles is editing "Silk Stockings," his latest production for Universal. He has completely recovered from his recent operation for tonsilitis.

[illegible] Pathe Western release that features Buddy Roosevelt.

[illegible] has been signed by Harry Cohn, vice-president in charge of the production of Columbia pictures, to handle the megaphone for "For Ladies Only," an adaptation of "Down With Women," a story by George F. Worts. Jacqueline Logan, John Bowers, Edna Marion and Ben Hall are in the cast.

According to Devorska, a grand opera player who is now appearing in support of Max Davidson in Hal Roach's series of Jewish comedies, most of the grand opera performers give such funny portrayals in their serious attempts at acting that they are really missing their vocation. "They're funny and don't know it," says Devorska. "The average prima donna would tip the scales well over two hundred, and their so called 'acting' takes on more the appearance of burlesque than dramatics."

Shooting on the water-front sequences for "The Blood Ship" was completed this week by Director George B. Seitz, who is handling the direction of this first of the thirty productions that will come from the studio of Columbia Pictures during the coming season. Hobart Bosworth, Jacqueline Logan and Richard Arlen are the three principals.

John McDermott, comedy writer and director, will write the scenario of "Tillie's Punctured Romance" for Christie. McDermott has written for Al Christie before. "Tillie" will be made for Paramount, for whom McDermott has been doing work for some time past.

Minneapolis

WHEN Fairmont, Minn., was busy with its spring cleaning, recently, W. L. Nicholas, manager of the Strand theater, decided to lend a helping hand. He did away with the customary fee at a matinee and charged instead ten tin cans tied together. A large corn crib was loaned by a Fairmont implement dealer to receive the admission and was found able to hold 5,300.

The Lyric theater at Monticello, Minn., has been repurchased by M. J. Hu[illegible] who is planning extensive remodeling and decorating. Huss also owns the Crystal at Bird Island.

The Grand theater at Browerville, Minn., has been rebuilt, following its destruction by fire.

The new theater at Albany, Minn., will soon be put in readiness for opening by Werin Bros., who formerly owned the Winter theater at Albany.

Clarence Breilein has purchased a building at Bruno, Minn., and is remodeling it into a motion picture theater, which will begin operating soon.

An independent film exchange and supply house will soon be opened at Jamestown, N. D., by L. Gordon Evanson, who recently resigned as North Dakota representative for F. B. O. Mr. Evanson will distribute the Holmes projector in North and South Dakota and Montana and is seeking distribution rights on independent film.

Palmer J. Sougstad, owner of the Grand theater at Northwood, N. D., has purchased the Dakota theater at Hatton, N. D., which will be in charge of V. F. Champeaux.

Howard Varing has sold his lease on the Strand theater at Scotland, S. D., to Frank Simek, who recently disposed of his interests at Tri[illegible] S. D., to the opposition.

Minneapolis moving picture men showed a nice spirit of cooperation this week when they donated $288 to the Minneapolis municipal organ fund. A check for this amount was received from the Motion Picture Theater Owners of the Northwest, and represented the individual contributions of 288 theater executives and employees. Every officer of the M. P. T. P. contributed, and substantial sums were received from the Finkelstein & Ruben administration department, and the following theatres: State, Strand, Garrick, Lyric, Grand, Aster, Unique, Loring, Lagoon, Lyndale, Rialto, American, Empress, Shubert, Hennepin-Orpheum, Seventh Street, New Arion, Princess, New Cozy. The sum of $100,000 is being sought and about $30,000 has been raised, nearly all of it in $1 contributions.

Minneapolis' new $3,000,000 auditorium, which seats nearly 11,000 and ranks with the finest in the country, will undoubtedly affect the theater business in that city, but just how no one is quite certain. Many big attractions are certain to be presented there, and these will provide some heavy competition for the theatres. On the other hand, the auditorium will attract many large conventions to Minneapolis, and thousands of visitors will come to the city each year who would not ordinarily be attracted to Minneapolis. And the theaters will naturally profit by these big conventions.

A new method of procedure has been decided upon for the annual convention of the F. & R. managers, which is to be held in Minneapolis July 12, 13 and 14, at the Curtis Hotel. The three days activities will be in charge of three chairmen instead of one, as before, a different man for each day. The men have planned to dispose of all business matters in the morning sessions if possible and thus have the afternoons and evenings free for entertainment.

A permit granted in Minneapolis recently for $1,060,000 for the new Publix theater which is going up at Ninth street and LaSalle avenue, brought the city's building permits to a record point for the year. The new theater will cost $2,000,000. Excavating has been completed and the concrete is now being poured for the superstructure.

Work is progressing at a rapid rate on general improvements and renovations of Keith's Chestnut Street Theatre. Reed Albee, son of E. F. Albee, head of the circuit, has supervision of the work being done, with George M. Young and Joseph C. Dougherty, Philadelphia managers for the Keith interests, having supervision of the details.

Rapid advancement is being made on the two theatres which the Stanley Company is constructing at 20th and 21st and Market Streets, Philadelphia. The latter, which will be known as the Erlanger Theatre, will be a legitimate house and will be completed, it is expected, around the holidays. The other theatre, which will be named the Stanley, will have a capacity of 5,000 seats and will probably be ready some time during the spring of 1928.

Stanley Company officials have not yet set any definite date for the closing of some of their downtown and outlying houses that are generally idle during the summer months. Business during the next ten days will determine the policy of Stanley Company officials for the summer in regard to these theatres.

[illegible] Sesqui-Centennial year with fairly satisfactory results, but it is not believed that business this summer will warrant an extension of the policy.

Joel A. Levy, who was for six years publicity director for Wilmer & Vincent Theatres and prior to that time was Philadelphia salesman for Pathe exchange, has recently taken the position of manager of Len Berman's Embassy Theatre in Baltimore. Since severing his connections with Wilmer & Vincent, Mr. Levy had been city salesman in Philadelphia for Columbia Pictures. Although long connected with the shipping end of the industry, Mr. Levy has a decided preference for the exhibiting field and has established a reputation for himself as an exploiteer and business builder.

Al Blofson, manager of the Philadelphia branch of Tiffany Productions, has recently appointed Harry Brown salesman in this territory. Mr. Brown was formerly Cleveland and Washington branch manager for Universal and for some years filled the same position in the Boston exchange of Associated Exhibitors.

Portland, Ore.,

HAROLD B. FRANKLIN, president and general manager of West Coast Theatres, Inc., arrived in town last Sunday, in company with Herman Wobber, Western Divisional sales manager for Paramount, and Harry C. Arthur, Jr., who until recently was general manager of Pacific Northwest Theatres, but is now in charge of the Southern Division for West Coast. Franklin's visit was for the purpose of general inspection, it being his first official visit to this branch of West Coast theatres. After a tour of the city Sunday, Franklin called a meeting of all the circuit's Portland managers, at which various problems confronting their business was dealt with thoroughly. It was decided to close the Highway (suburban) for the summer, at least.

Dennis Hull was a Portland caller last week, transacting business in the interest of the Liberty Theater, North Bend, Ore.

The Lark Theater, McMinnville, which has been closed for remodeling, expects to reopen June 24.

George Hunt's Rivoli theater, Grant's Pass, is undergoing extensive repairs.

A. L. Oxtoby, branch manager of First National, has been transferred to the position of assistant branch manager for the company at San Francisco. L. E. Davis, formerly F-N manager in Minneapolis, and more recently assistant manager of that exchange, will succeed Mr. Oxtoby at the Portland office.

F. W. Horrigan, operating the Grand theater, Camas, Wash., will open his new theater in that city, the Granada, Tuesday night. The theater seats 1000, and is said to be a most beautiful house.

William Cutts, veteran Universal man, is in this territory looking over the Universal houses. No manager has bee appointed to succeed Eddie Smith at the Columbia, but the theater is being handled during the interim by Bert Levy, exploiteer.

Bob White, general manager of the Multnomah theatre, is spending a few days in Seattle. George Jackson, branch manager for U, is out in Eastern Oregon territory.

Gus A. Metzger, former manager of the Rivoli here, arrived in the city from Los Angeles Tuesday. Metzger is here in the interest of Morton Cohen, owner of the property on which the New Grand theater is located. The New Grand has been facing difficulties for some time and it is stated that the theater is now being operated by the sheriff.

Jay Gage, former Seattle branch manager for Educational, has affiliated with the Star Film Exchange here, to specialize on Tiffany productions.

Louis Stang, Paramount broker, arrived at his office this morning in a badly bent car, due to an accident en route.

Neal East, local Paramount chief, is in Seattle. Jimmy Lynn is doing the Western Oregon territory, on a managerial sales campaign for Fox.

Pantages has adopted a new schedule of summer prices. Matinees have been reduced from 35c. to 25c., excepting Saturdays, Sundays and holidays, and night prices are reduced from 60c. to 50c.

Miss Ethel Gaylord, of Universal's Rex and McDonald theaters, Eugene, was a caller the first of the week.

Edward Fitzgerald, the high-powered exploiteer for the local house, resigned, to affiliate with the Henry Duffy theatres. At present he is in Seattle, as advertising chief and exploiteer for the Moore theater.

Ned E. Depinet, general sales manager of First National Pictures, has appointed L. E. Davis manager of the company's exchange in Portland, Ore.

Mr. and Mrs. N. G. Freeman have taken the Arcade theater, Beaverton, back at the request of Joe Stiles. The Freemans own the building and formerly operated the theatre. Stiles' plans have not yet been announced.

Mr. Davis has been with First National for a number of years, first as a salesman in the Minneapolis branch when L. O. Lukan, now Western District Manager, was in charge of that exchange. Recently he has been sales supervisor in Minneapolis.

The appointment of Mr. Davis as Portland branch manager is in line with Mr. Depinet's policy of advancing men who have been with the company for a period of years and have made good in their work.

WHY?

WHY not make money from your screen by showing a limited amount of clever, attractive, short-length motion picture advertising?

WHY offend your audience by showing slides or cheap advertising trailers when you can get a service, changed weekly, that will often bring a laugh or applause, and actually add to your box-office receipts?

WHY wait for your money from a Service Agency when you can collect it yourself from the local advertiser?

WHY not handle YOUR OWN advertising service under your own Theatre name, from the biggest and best library of short-length ad-films in the U. S.?

WHY not write yourself, or appoint your assistant or operator or other local representative to handle it for you, and get details of the BEST proposition open to you?

BUSINESS MEN'S FILM EXCHANGE

Chicago

EDDIE TRINZ is changing the policy of the Chateau Theatre. Pictures will be discontinued and the house operated with a stage stock company headed by Harry Mintern as its attraction. Mr. Mintern's company met with considerable success at the Chateau when the house was under Asher Bros. management and has a considerable north side following. Competition of the new Sheridan theatre is said to be responsible for the abandonment of a picture policy at the Chateau.

Rex Loughead, well known theatre manager, is now connected with Schoenstedts' Piccadilly theatre. Mr. Loughead has been in charge of several large houses and opened the North Centre.

Stanley Brown, managing director of Saxe's Milwaukee theatres, was visiting on film row last week.

Dave Rice, who has been managing he Jackson Park theatre, is now in charge at the Atlantic and Manager Packwood has gone from the Atlantic to the Peoples Theatre.

It is reported that an Aurora syndicate will erect a handsome theatre in that city and that construction will start shortly. A. Hirsch heads the syndicate and it is said that the theatre which will be a 2500 seat house will be leased to Great States.

Illinois and Indiana Theatres, Inc., the booking circuit operated by Johnson and Rosecan, has added the Tivoli Theatre, Mishawaka, to its string of theatres.

The "Orchestraphone" was given its first public demonstration at L. & T.'s Pantheon Theatre last week where the music reproducing device accompanied the projection of "The Love of Sunya." Synchronization and tone were excellent and when eventually perfected the instrument will be useful to small theatres which seek to economize on operating costs.

Bob Julian has left the Chateau Theatre to become manager of Lubliner & Trinz Covent Theatre, Joe Glickman filling his former position at the Chateau.

Nat Wayne has been appointed manager of the Jackson Park theatre. Up to the time that Asher Bros. disposed of the Calo he was in charge of that house.

It is reported that the Admiral, one of Chicago's newest and handsomest neighborhood houses, has gone into the hands of a receiver. Meetings of the bondholders and others interested in the Admiral were being held this week and announcement bearing on the future of this theatre are expected within a few days.

Ascher Bros. have disposed of another of their theatres, the Oakland Square, 39th and Cottage Grove Ave., to James Coston, who is taking over the house at once. It is reported that Edwin Silverman, Fetcher and Nortman are associated with Mr. Coston in this transaction.

Max Gumbiner has disposed of his Harmony Theatre to Morris Salkin, who will book the house in addition to continuing his work with the Monarch Theatre Supply Co. Jack Rubin remains as house manager of the Harmony.

I. Von Ronkle is planning a vacation in Europe, following his resignation as General Manager of Schoenstadt Enterprises.

The Plaza Theatre at Kanakakee which has been dark for some time past has been reopered under the management of W. T. and T. C. Pierce.

Earl Johnson is due back at his headquarters at 845 S. Wabash Ave. the first of next week, following a week's fishing in the northern Wisconsin woods.

V. T. Lynch has closed a lease on the theatre which is to be erected in Lake Forest by the James Anderson estate, ground for which was broken this week. Mr. Lynch is steadily increasing his operations in Chicago suburbs, his most recent acquisition to his chain being the new Willard Theatre at Villa Park.

Floyd Brockwell, of Balbana & Katz Midwest Theatres, has appointed Louis Reinheimer as his assistant. Mr. Reinheimer has been connected with the Roseland-State Theatre.

Edward House has joined the musical staff of Marks Bros. and will rotate between the Madbro and Granada, alternating at the organ conaoles with Albert Brown. Mr. House formerly was a Balaban & Katz organist.

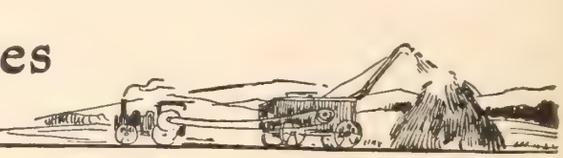
Andrew Karzas' Woodlawn Theatre, about which there have been rumors for many months, has been sold to B. F. Lindheimer, who has represented Lubliner & Trinz interests in various real estate transactions. The consideration for the property, part free and part leasehold estate, is reported to be $1,063,000 cash.

For some time past it has been said that Andrew Karzas was going to replace his Woodlawn with a gigantic motion picture theatre and in preparation for this, the interior of the theatre had been wrecked, and what disposition of the property will be made by the new owners is unknown.

The 63rd and Cottage Grove Avenue movie situation remains clouded, questions which interest Chicago motion picture men being, "Where is the huge theatre which Marks Brothers recently announced they would build, to be erected?" the future of the Woodlawn Theatre being the other leading question.

Balaban & Katz are vitally interested in this neighborhood, through their Tivoli Theatre, which is said to be one of the most profitable of their houses.

R. E. Churchill and William Benjamin, Kansas City, branch manager and special representative, respectively, returned from the F. B. O. sales convention in Chicago.



Last month was the biggest month in the history of the National Theatre Supply Company in Kansas City, according to T. F. Cole, branch manager.

"Red" Jones, Educational Kansas City branch manager, has returned from the annual sales convention of his company in Los Angeles.

So optimistic over the future outlook is Bill Warner, First National Kansas City branch manager, that he purchased a new Cadillac coupe last week.

Des Moines

YOUNGCLASS and Latta who are joint owners of the Roxy Theatre at Perry were in Des Moines last week and reported that though there has been a slight delay in the opening of their theatre that the house would be ready for its dedication soon. The theatre has been rechristened the Roxy, as it originally was called the Rex. The theatre is being redecorated and remodelled under the new management.

Tom Beitzell is the new shipper at the office of Universal. And Bet Thomas is the new assistant in the shipping department. Both are recruits to the film trade, and are successors to Charles Stephens who went from the shipping department at this office to act as booker for the St. Louis exchange.

With her return on Monday the discussion of when the Des Moines Film Board get-together and golf tournament will be held will be discussed.

Eloise Bolton is the new contract clerk for the office of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer while Marion Ackerson is promoted to short subjects booker.

B. I. VanDyke who for fifteen years operated the Royal Theatre in Des Moines, holding a record as the veteran independent exhibitor with no one to come anywhere near approaching his length of consecutive service, is closing his theatre next week. The lease on the theatre building has only a few months to run and Mr. Van Dyke is sacrificing his ownership at once. The theatre building, which is located on a prominent corner in the downtown section at Eight and Locust streets, will be torn out, as will also the Majestic Theatre building adjoining. The Marks Investment Company will build here a two story commercial construction. Mr. Van Dyke, as head of the Globe Amusement Company, states that conditions do not make it advisable for him to remain in the theatre game and while he will not retire from business, he will not continue as a motion picture man. He has not yet decided what he will do but is considering several propositions. The Majestic Theatre was one of the A. H. Blank houses though recently it has been operating under lease to companies playing vaudeville and musical shows.

New York and New Jersey

NEW JERSEY exhibitors are again reminded of the fact that the state M.P.T.O. convention will take place at the Berkeley-Carteret, Asbury Park, June 21-22-23. Recent reports indicate that an unusually large delegation will attend.

Walter Reade's new 3,000 seat house at Asbury Park is nearing completion and it is said to be one of the finest in the country. A tentative opening date has been set for the 16th of July. This house will probably follow a straight picture policy.

Reade's St. James Theatre, also of Asbury Park, has recently changed its policy from straight pictures to vaudeville and pictures.

S. H. Fabian, of the Fabian-Stanley Circuit is getting settled in his usual summer home at Bradley Beach while Charles Dooley, also of the Fabian organization, is preparing to spend the summer months at Avon-by-the-Sea.

Phil' Meyer, of the Pathe New York exchange, recently spent a short time in Albany, N. Y. Mr. Meyer is now Special Feature Representative out of the Home Office.

Leon Rosenblatt, president of the M.P.T.O. of New Jersey, was more than disappointed on not being among those present at the Columbus convention. Illness prevented his attendance.

Morris Kutinsky has acquired a piece of property at Canal and Broadway, New York City, where he will erect a 600 seat motion picture theatre.

The Verona Theatre, Second avenue, New York City, will reopen within the next few days.

They say that Ed. Carroll of the New York Pathe exchange is seriously considering the purchase of a Jordan Eight.

Work is progressing nicely on the new theatre at Hillside, N. J.

Fred Faulkner, New Jersey exhibitor, has recently taken over the new theatre nearing completion at Lyndhurst, N. J. He will also operate the Lyndhurst Theatre in the same town.

Faulkner's Strand Theatre at Asbury Park will be open for Summer business.

Pollack and Bratter's Arlington, Arlington, N. J., is expected to be ready within thirty days.

Jos. Stern, prominent New Jersey theatre owner, has returned from a tour of Europe which included stops at London, Paris and Berlin.

Over in the Pathe exchange vacations are beginning to be much in evidence: Max Fellerman leaves June 18; Julius Becker and Milt Kronacher, some time in July; (the latter is going to Canada, and for just what reason he does not state) Floyd Vogt will take the last two weeks in July for a motor trip through Northern New York and New England; F. H. Lovejoy will try out the mountain country of Maine, while Eddie Carroll can probably be found down around the South Jersey coast about the first of July with a surf casting rod—and plenty of fish we hope.

A new theatre in the course of construction at Cortland and Greenwich streets, New York City, has become the link in an unnamed uptown New York theatre circuit, according to report.

The Norwood Theatre, 3118 Fulton street, Brooklyn, property of Rosenzweig Bros., has been permanently closed, it is said, and due no doubt to the proximity of the two newly built houses owned by the same firm—the Concord and Embassy.

Manager Sachs, formerly with the Rialto, Jamaica, is at present in charge of the new Embassy, Brooklyn.

J. Celler, recently with the Cross Bay Theatre, Cross Bay Boulevard, Queens, is now manager of the Decatur Theatre, Decatur street, Brooklyn.

Another manager to shift positions is P. E. Pierce of Loew's 7th avenue. He can now be located at Loew's Sheridan Square, Greenwich Village.

Al Moley, of the Prudential Film Delivery, is threatening to quit rooting for the New York Giants if they continue to trade off his favorite players. He may even patronize Ebbets Field.

The lease on the Madison Theatre located on Station Place, Madison, New Jersey, has been sold for Messrs. Falkner and Seeley to the Roth Brothers of Morristown.

The theatre building was erected in 1926 by James Lyons of Morristown and has a seating capacity of over one thousand.

The [illegible] was booked through the office of Edgar B. Haines, [illegible] of New York City.

It is said that Manager William [illegible] of the Pathe New York exchange, and Salesman Bert Sanford, took a terrific lacing at golf from the hands of Ed Carroll and Andy Sawtelle on the course of the Greenbrook country club. Ten up was the result, according to report. It is further reported that Mr. Sawtell, who incidentally has a high standing with the schools and clergy in this community on account of his non-theatrical product, has also qualified for a try at the President's Cup at Greenbrook.

H. Rice is the new manager of the Cross Bay Theatre, Brooklyn.

The Livonia Theatre, Livonia avenue, Brooklyn, has recently been sold to Frank Penel and Charles Glassman. The firm name is the Tagson Amusement Company.

Fred Dollinger has left his position as manager of "Mike" Glynn's Glen Cove Theatre.

The Park Airdome, Cropsey avenue, Brooklyn, has recently opened under the management of Sarah Jacobson.

In addition to being well known from the lower East Side to the heights of Harlem, the name of Milton Kronacher, known as one of the star Pathe salesmen, spread itself all over New York air the other night from station WMCA. Pianist Jack Cohen and Wolffe Gilbert were the perpetrators.

Seattle

RAY GROMBACHER and Frank Zoerlin, theatre magnates of Spokane, Washington, are receiving the congratulations of the Eastern Washington residents upon the recent opening of the Granada Theatre. The house, formerly the Casino, was closed for several months, but has been entirely remodeled and renovated by the owners and is now taking its place among Spokane's leading showhouses.

Announcement was made here last week to the effect that the annual Film Golf Championship and Tournament for the motion picture trade of the Pacific Northwest will be held on June 21 at the Portland Golf Club, Portland, Oregon. The affair is sponsored by the Motion Picture Record, a territorial trade paper of the Northwest, and already Editor Clyde Walker has received a large number of handsome trophies and gifts to be presented to the fortunate mashie-wielders.

Reports received on Film Row last week indicate that a new state rights film exchange will open here within the next few months. It will be the Sunset Film Exchange, established by Anthony J. Xydias, president of Sunset Productions.

The Grey Goose Theatre, one of the newer neighborhood theatres in this city, last week was renamed the Beacon Theatre, and was reopened with elaborate ceremonies following a thorough renovation during the last few weeks. The house is one of the eleven suburban houses in Seattle operated by the Pacific Theatrical Enterprises, Inc. (Universal).

Art Hile, manager of the Bagdad Theatre in Portland, drove up to this city for a brief visit last week—the first time that he has been seen around this territory in many, many weeks. Will Starkey, head of the Starkey Amusement Enterprises of Spokane, was another stranger who put in a brief appearance on Film Row.

Mat Aparton, manager of the Universal office; Wally Rucker, handsome chief at Educational; and Jack Lannon, far-famed director of the Greater Features Exchanges, were the three self-sacrificing exchangemen who sat last week as members of the Film Board of Arbitration. Leroy V. Johnson, managing director of Jensen-Von Herberg's suburban chain; Will Starkey of Spokane; and Walter Graham of Shelton were the exhibitor members present.

William Heinicke, formerly associated with the Winter Garden Theatre in this city, last week was appointed house manager of the Strand Theatre here. The Strand is now being operated by John Danz as a week-engagement second-run house, operating on a straight 25c policy.

"Chuck" Charles, manager of the Everett Theatre in Everett, arrived in town for a short stay last week and reported a very successful Mississippi Flood Benefit Show at his house one night last week. A preview of a current release and several acts of specially-selected vaudeville were enough to fill the house to capacity and net more than $400 for the relief.

Further information received from Everett indicates that the Rose Theatre has been sold by State Senator Joe St. Peter to Pilz & Swanson. The house, it is reported, has been closed and will soon be replaced by a modern structure. In addition to its picture policy, the Rose was the home of Pantages vaudeville over the week-ends in Everett.

Walter Graham of Shelton, Washington, John McGill of Port Orchard, and Robert Berquist, who will open a motion picture show in the Columbia Beach Hall at Clinton, Washington, were all seen on Film Row during the last week, buying and arranging late spring bookings and dates.

STORAGE OF MOTION PICTURE FILMS

St. Louis

WITH big steam shovels busy on the site of William Fox's proposed 5000-seat theatre at Grand and Washington boulevards, St. Louis, the St. Louis movie Rialto is filled with rumors concerning other large houses that will soon be thrust upon the theatregoers of St. Louis, and the big question of where the needed patrons will come from is worrying the owners and managers of the houses now in operation.

With a seating capacity of 5000 the Fox organization will have to cash in not less than 75,000 patrons each week to keep the wolf from the door. And if the Fox house does draw 75,000 cash fares weekly it means that the existing houses are going to lose some of their present patrons.

But that is not all that is worrying those with vast sums invested in St. Louis amusement palaces. Gossip has it that United Artists will build a 3000-seat house in the Grand Boulevard district, and now Dame Rumor is talking about a new 4000-seat house for the Orpheum Circuit.

Within the next few months the new house now under construction on Gravois avenue at Ellenwood avenue will be ready for its opening. It is reported that the St. Louis Amusement Company will be in charge of it, but so far as can be ascertained the negotiations have not been fully completed.

Sigoloff Brothers also plan to start construction soon on their new house at Eighteenth street and Park avenue.

J. Dozier Stone, Columbia, Mo., capitalist, has decided to return to the motion picture exhibition field and has announced that construction will start soon on a new $250,000 theatre.

Stone will be president of the new corporation, and H. M. Banks, president of the Columbia Savings Bank, will be secretary and treasurer. The new house will seat 1500 persons and it will also contain stores and offices.

Harry Redmon, owner-manager of the Majestic Theatre, East St. Louis, Ill., has awarded the general contract for his new 2000-seat house on Collinsville avenue to H. Bancroft, 709 North Twenty-third street, East St. Louis.

Bancroft is now taking bids on all the sub-contracts and actual construction will get under way with a minimum of delay.

Plans for the new house have been prepared by Boller Bros., 114 West Tenth street, Kansas City, Mo., and call for a house that will cost approximately $750,000 complete. Included will be a $100,000 pipe organ.

The structure will cover a site 90 by 180 feet and contain a main floor and balcony and loges. It will be of reinforced concrete, steel, brick and terra cotta construction, with marble floors and other marble trimming.

It is hoped to have the new house completed by Thanksgiving Day.

Redmon has been looking forward to a new theatre for East St. Louis for a dozen years or so and apparently is soon to realize his ambition.

St. Louis film stocks closed June 11 as follows: St. Louis Amusement A $42 bid and $44 asked. One year ago $45. Skouras A, $40 bid. One year ago $48.

The Farmington Entertainment Company, headed by Dr. C. A. Tatley, is taking bids on a new house for Farmington.

J. Hal Lynch & Son, 412 Dolph building, St. Louis, Mo., has prepared the plans for the new theatre. It will be one story, 65 by 111 feet, and of reinforced concrete, brick and new construction.

Sidney O. Wall, assistant manager of the St. Louis Theatre, and Mrs. Lelia M. Keasey, of Chicago, were married on Monday evening, June 6, it has been learned by friends of the couple.

A motion picture machine in the Kingdom House at 1033 South Eighth street, St. Louis, on the night of June 10 started a fire which did damage at $400 to the machine and building.

A robber, armed with a revolver, held up Harry Redmon, owner-manager of the Majestic Theatre, East St. Louis, Ill., as he was turning into the drive way of his home, 912 Pennsylvania avenue, East St. Louis, at 1:30 a. m. June 8. The robber took Redmon's ring, valued at $2000 and $150 in cash.

Called to a point in Forest Park under the shelter house by a ruse William Power, an usher employed at the Webster Theatre, St. Louis, Mo., was attacked and robbed of $6.45 by two young men.

The Gem Theatre, Cutler, Ill., was destroyed by fire on June 5.

The Baxter Theatre, Novington, Mo., has been closed, as has the Idle Hour, Seymour, Mo., and the Majestic Theatre, West Frankfort, Ill.

Miss Ethellyn Davis has been employed by Universal exchange as billing and contract clerk. She succeeds Mrs. Nellie Baker Anderson.

Lee Darwin, who has been managing the Capitol Theater since it opened, is leaving June 10 for Tennessee. He is succeeded by E. A. Crane, formerly of Miami, who has had 12 years experience in the motion picture business.

Detroit

THE local Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer office force was well represented at the recent Los Angeles sales convention, where they received high honors for their work during the past year. Jack Flynn, division manager, and Frank J. Downey, Detroit branch manager, were elected to membership in the exclusive Legionnaire Club, comprising men who did the most meritorious work last season, which contains only 11 men in the entire M-G-M organization. In the 100 Point Club, three of its salesmen, Messrs. Davidson, Drew and Brown, are enrolled. All of these men have reached the highest efficiency in sales.

Bill Hurlbut and Mrs. Hurlbut left Saturday on their annual tour to Minneapolis, their former home. They will motor in the new coupe.

The Fox-Washington theatre has been closed for the summer season.

Assistance of Ernest Vetter, who operates the Majestic Theatre in Homer, and H. C. Schuckert of the Temple Theatre at Caro, resulted in more contributions to the Mississippi Relief Fund. Jackson exhibitors also cooperated in furthering the cause by turning over a sum of more than $600.

A new $400,000 theatre building will be erected in Muskegon by the Continental Realty Co., according to Ross W. Judson, of Detroit, who is head of the company and president of the Continental Motors Corporation.

Harlan Starr of Educational and James Allen, Warner Brothers, have entered an agreement to play 18 holes some time during the next two weeks. For other information concerning the side wager and just how it will be done, exchange men are being invited to consult Harlan or Jim.

W. R. Stebbins, owner of the Film Building, motored over to the Windy City last week.

The Butterfield Circuit added another house to its list last Saturday when the new Eagle theatre in Pontiac opened. It seats 1,000 and will be a "grind" house with four changes weekly. A. J. Kleist owns the property and building.

Atlanta

INDICATIONS are that there will be two meetings this month of the Atlanta Joint Board of Arbitration, the first on June 24 and the other on June 31. Because of the large amount of business before the board last month, two extra meetings were held in addition to the regular session.

E. L. Cole, secretary of the Atlanta Film Board of Trade, is now a full fledged lawyer, having been graduated from the Atlanta Law School on the evening of June 8, the exercises taking place at the Atlanta Woman's Club auditorium.

With the sales convention over, salesmen of Arthur C. Bromberg Attractions, working out of the Atlanta office, left early this week for their respective territories. G. Y. Harrell is covering North Alabama, and Tennessee; L. A. Callen is covering South Alabama, South Georgia and North Florida, with W. M. Snelson in Florida.

Oscar F. Neu, head of the Neu[illegible] York, manufacturers of rewinds and other equipment, was a visitor in Atlanta this week, being on a trip through this territory.

Word was received in Atlanta last week that the mother of Harry M. Williams and Percy C. Williams, Universal salesmen in the Atlanta and Memphis territories, respectively, was so seriously ill at her home in Brooklyn, N. Y., that she was not expected to live. The brothers arranged to go to her bedside immediately.

Major John W. Quillian, president of Enterprise Film Corporation, with headquarters in Atlanta, visited the Charlotte branch of the company last week.

Earle E. Griggs, Universal exploiteer for the Southeast, spent last week in the Atlanta office.

R. B. Williams, district manager for Universal, spent several days in Jacksonville, Fla., last week, returning to the Atlanta office Thursday.

Milwaukee

A. M. ROSECAN has been added to the Milwaukee M-G-M sales force. Mr. Rosecan was transferred from the Indianapolis M-G-M office. He will travel the northern territory.

Sam Miller of the Fischer Theatre Circuit, Chicago, was in the city during the week arranging bookings for the newly acquired Fischer houses in the state.

E. H. Brechler, manager of the Opera House, Fennimore, was a recent Film Row visitor.

The several new theatres being built in Milwaukee are making rapid progress. Saxe's Oriental will open within a week or two. Saxe's Uptown will be ready on or about September 1st, and Earl Rice is planning to open his Egyptian theatre about Labor Day. Saxe's new house on Third street is rapidly assuming form and will soon be completed.

William Wiske, manager of the Community theatre at Red Granite was in the city recently checking up bookings and visiting the exchanges.

The lease on the Bijou theatre at Green Bay, of which Sam Thirion is manager, recently terminated and Mr. Thirion was unable to renew it. Mr. Thirion has completely dismantled the house. His future plans have not as yet been announced.

Harry Hart, sales manager of Celebrated exchange, made a hurried trip out of town this week.

The Radio theatre has been closed indefinitely pending the settlement of difficulties about the lease of the theatre.

A. C. Accola, manager of the Bonham theatre, Prairie du Sac was in the city, announcing that he had just purchased an aeroplane. He intends to pilot the plane himself and exhibit a birdseye view of the country side to his patrons.

The State theatre is undergoing extensive redecorating.

Messrs. Read and Kalke of the Opera House at Eagle, were in the city for a brief visit recently.

Ed. Weisner takes over the management of the Bell theatre at Sparta on August 1st. The Bell was recently erroneously reported to have been taken over by the La-Crosse Theatre Circuit.

Neil Thompson of the Crystal Theatre at Ft. Atkinson, was among out of town exhibitors to visit exchanges this week.

P.D.C. Exchange is now covering the northern peninsula of Michigan which heretofore was handled by the Minneapolis branch.

Ralph Mosiman of the Rex theatre at Oshkosh was a recent visitor at the exchanges.

The Pathe exchange had its first golf match of the season this week when three members of the staff, Messrs. DeLorenzo, Baldwin and White, got out early one morning and played around.

E. M. Starkey of the Rex and Opera House at Berlin visited Film Row on Thursday.

Frank Cook of the Gem theatre, Sheboygan, was in the city and reported business fine in his town.

Mrs. Henrietta Eckhardt of the Palace at Wisconsin Rapids was in the city for a few hours on Thursday.

San Francisco

H. A. LEVINSON of Co-operative recently paid an extended visit to Co-operative accounts in the Sacramento Valley.

Wm. ("Bill") Citron and wife, accompanied by Mrs. Blumenthal, the wife of George Blumenthal, branch manager of Educational, have sailed on the "Maui" for the Hawaiian Islands.

Announcement has been made that F. A. Duino is now the manager of the Royer Studios on Turk Street. Duino succeeds W. W. Bradford, who became manager of the Plaza Theatre in Sacramento, recently opened by Max Weis and Roy Claire.

Dorothy ("Dot") Yates of the clerical staff of the Golden State, who has been with this theatrical circuit for several years, announces her wedding day as June 27th.

Walter Berger started his summer vacationing June 11th, taking Mrs. Berger and the child to Salt Lake.

Hannahbelle Gordon, the cashier of Pathe, is vacationing in Yosemite Valley.

Abe Markowitz of the Egyptian theatre and Earl ("Hoil") Cohen went fishing to Napa county, and brought back a string of poison oak tied all around their hands and faces. All are pleased they are better.

Gladys Williford, of the Golden State Theatre Corporation clerical staff, was another June Bride. The happy event took place June 11th.

Albany

CENTRAL New York was quite well represented last week at the Columbus convention, Harry Hellmand and Uly S. Hill being present from Albany, W. H. Linton representing Utica, while William Benton was on hand from Saratoga Springs and William Smalley from Cooperstown.

The Temple theatre in Pulaski played to an enormous crowd one night last week in connection with a benefit given for the American Legion in that village.

Jake Rosenthal is not an Elk, but he was a regular "Hello Bill" in Troy last week during the Elks' convention, and his theatre was decorated from top to bottom.

C. H. Buckley, owner of the Leland and the Clinton Square theatres in Albany, has "adopted" an orphan in the Near East campaign.

The Opera House in North Creek has changed hands following the death of the former owner, Claude Wade, and a Mr. Sullivan is now the owner of the theatre.

The new theatre built by Harry Lazarus in Kingston was opened last week and many of the film boys, as well as exhibitors in Albany, were on hand for the occasion. Frieder and Grossman of Hudson were also present. Mr. Lazarus was a former resident of Albany.

The Rialto theatre in Potsdam will continue to be the only theatre in the village for Sylvester Nicolette has decided to turn his new block into stores and offices rather than into a theatre. The change came as the result of negotiations between Nicolette and Mr. Papayanakos.

The Strand theatre in Ogdensburg was used last week for the graduating exercises of the high school there.

Richard Betts, of Batavia, who has been organist at the Olympic theatre for the past two months, in Watertown, and Miss Evelyn Hicks, cashier at the Palace theatre in the same city, were married last week. Mr. Betts is well known in Rochester, where he served as organist for some time before coming to Watertown.

The father of Mrs. Walter Roberts, wife of the manager of the Troy theatre, died recently at his home in New York City, following a long illness. Mr. and Mrs. Roberts are now at their summer camp on one of the lakes outside of Troy.

The theatrical bowling league of Troy, wound up its season last Friday night with a dinner that got under way at 12 o'clock midnight and lasted until dawn.

W. J. O'Brien, the new manager of the Strand theatre in Carthage, used amateur acts one night last week with such success that they will be continued during the weeks to come. Manager O'Brien gave a short talk before announcing the acts, and also sang a couple of songs.

There was a meeting in Syracuse last Friday night of all the district managers of the Schine circuit.

Matt Moran, of Coxsackie, who divides his time between his theatre and a trucking business, appeared on the streets of Albany last week with a brand new truck.

Miss Jane Holloran and Miss Edna Pfiester returned to Albany last week from French Lick Springs, where they attended a convention of the secretaries of film boards of trade. Miss Halloran will leave for New York shortly, where she will be connected with the Hays organization.

Sam Burns, an Albany film salesman, covered over 1,300 miles last week with his car in calling on exhibitors in the Catskill section.

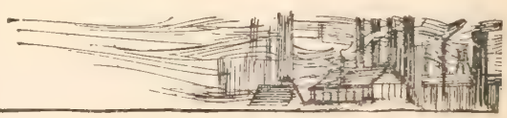
C. E. Taylor, of Cleveland, N. Y., has just purchased the Casino theatre in Antwerp, which has been owned and operated for the past seventeen years by W. C. Allen. Mr. Taylor will take over the house on July 1.

J. A. Fitzgerald, of the Strand in Hudson Falls, announces that from now on no children under five years of age will be allowed at the evening shows.

M. F. Silberstein, of Catskill, who runs the Community theatre, reports business as being exceptionally good these days, due to an early influx of summer visitors.

Father Blaise of Schroon Lake is making good progress on his theatre, with the men of the community contributing their labor without cost. Father Blaise will run the theatre, which is being so constructed that basketball games many be played during the winter months.

Phil Meyer, connected with the home office of the Pathe organization, was in Albany for two days last week.



Joe Ferlick, night shipper at the Pathe exchange in Albany, arose a bit earlier one day last week and, with his girl friend, journeyed over to Troy and watched the Elks' parade.

Clara King has been appointed to a stenographic position at the Pathe exchange.

Split weeks are now being advertised by some of the first run houses in Albany and Troy, due to a falling off in business on account of the summer weather.

Central Penn

ANNOUNCEMENT was made on June 1 that within thirty days from that date George J. Veach and M. Marks, of the Vemark Theatre Company, of Oil City, Pa., will be ready to advertise for bids for the erection of the new $800,000 Colonel Drake theatre to be built by the company at Seneca and Duncomb streets. Meantime Mr. Veach and Mr. Marks, accompanied by Duke Clarke, special representative of Paramount Pictures, Inc., of New York, planned to spend several days in Cleveland and surrounding cities to inspect theatres and obtain ideas to incorporate in the plans for their big new picture house. Rapp & Rapp, designers of the Roxy theatre, New York, and many other ornate structures, have been selected as the architects.

Interpreted as evidence that the Comerford Amusement Company, of Scranton, in cooperation with the Chamberlain Amusement Company, of Shamokin, both controlling large chains of motion picture theatres, are planning to begin work immediately on the construction of their proposed new $650,000 theatre in Williamsport, was the fact that the Comerford representatives in the latter city declined on June 4 to grant renewals of leases to tenants in the old Hotel Sterling building, which is to be the site of the new picture house. The hotel property was acquired more than two years ago by the two theatre companies, and about one year later they announced the plans for the erection of the theatre there but the construction had never been started. Around the first of last May, however, the tenants were notified to vacate within 30 days. When the period of notice was about to expire several tenants sought extensions but their requests were denied.

George J. Veach and M. Marks, owners of the Yenango theatre, Oil City, and who are planning the erection of the proposed big Colonel Drake theatre in the same city, were among the prominent exhibitors who attended the annual meeting of the M. P. T. O. of A., in Columbus, Ohio, the second week of June.

The experiment of putting on two feature film plays at one performance was made by the management of the Strand Theatre, Altoona, the week of June 6.

The Capitol Theatre, York, controlled by the Appell Amusement Enterprises is stimulating interest in theatre attendance during the summer by having a contest, the winners of which will be given free trips to Atlantic City and New York. The contest will close on August 20, when the winner will be announced in the theatre. Several merchants have cooperated by offering additional prizes of valuable merchandise.

Charley Jones, manager of the Colonial theatre, Harrisburg, left on June 1 for a vacation trip of two weeks. He visited friends in Ohio.

Charles Gaige, an expert musician, of New London, Conn., was installed as chief organist of Loew's Regent theatre, Harrisburg, on June 1. He succeeds Jimmy Walker, who resigned. Edward J. Melniker, managing director of Loew s Regent, claims that Mr. Gaige, who is only 20 years old, is the youngest feature organist now employed in any important theatre in Pennsylvania.

Bud Rogers, vice-president of Lumas Film Corporation, was a guest of Manager James H. Alexander, of the Columbia Productions' branch this week.

Samuel Jacobson, well-known film salesman, has announced his new association with the Capitol Film exchange.

Miss Ethel Herring, booker at the Paramount exchange, is receiving congratulations over the recent announcement of her engagement to Louis M. Price.

Manager Robert Mochrie, of the local P. D. C. branch, accompanied by Arthur Goldsmith, Oscar Bloom, Earl Booth and Louis Engel, is attending the company's yearly sales convention in New York City.

Lester Fenelon, traveling auditor for First National Pictures, is visiting the Pittsburgh branch this week.

Local film circles were extending their deep sympathy this week to Dr. Herman, owner of the Carnegie theatre, upon the death of his mother.

Joe Keliski, manager of local Educational exchange, has renovated the building, redecorating the walls and ceilings with a two-tone color combination, and hanging many new photographs and paintings of the stars.

George Tice, feature booker of the local Universal branch, passed around the cigars again this week, as a result of Mrs. Tice's presentation to him of a nine-pound baby girl.

Out-of-town exhibitors visting film row this week included: C. O. Baird, of Portage; Jim Velas, of Wheeling; George Schwitzer, of Titusville; Harry Petx, of Youngwood, and Charles Tran, of Smock.

Des Moines

Carroll, Iowa, will have a new motion picture house. The new house is to be erected by Joseph C. Staak who is the owner of the Royal and Strand theatres at Carroll. The new house is to be a $75,000 construction, with the most modern in stage equipment as well as motion picture machinery. Friends state that it will be one of the finest theatres in that part of the state. The property on which the theatre will be built was bought by Mr. Staak some time ago. It is located in the heart of the city.

South East

THE last steel girder was placed Wednesday on the new theater being erected in Ensley, Ala., by the Ramsey McCormack interests, at Avenue F and Twentieth street, for lease by R. B. Wilby and R M. Kennedy. The house will seat 2,000.

Construction of the theater has been under way for several weeks by the Holley Construction Company.

The new house will play first-run pictures exclusively, it is understood, and will also present vaudeville.

P. C. Tallent, who operates the Lyric Theater at Dayton, Tenn., took over the Empress Theater at Pikeville, Tenn., on June 6.

The Weeksbury Theater at Weeksbury, Ky., and the Wheelwright Theater at Wheelright, Ky., have closed temporarily on account of the flood in the Big Sandy Valley.

Due to the flood in the valley of the North Fork of the Kentucky River, the Virginia Theater at Hazard, Ky., is closed temporarily.

The Palace Theater at Clay, Ky., will close June 11. Also the Majestic Theater at Greenfield, Tenn.

[illegible] from the [illegible] convention at French Lick Springs, Ind.

Karl J. Sonin, of Metro and the Hayes organization, was badly hurt in an automobile accident in Cincinnati last week. Mr. Sonin is recovering at the Jewish Hospital in Cincinnati.

Roth Brothers, owners of the Eagle Theater, Asheville, N. C., have purchased the Palace Theater, Greensboro, N. C. (colored house).

F. M. Schnibben, of the Opera House, Florence, S. C., was in Charlotte during the week.

Fuller Sams, Jr., owner Auditorium theatre, Winston-Salem, N. C., reopened the Pilot Theater at Winston-Salem, [illegible] to a very large attendance.

Joe Goodenough, owner of Branwood Theater, Greenville, S. C., paid Charlotte a brief visit this week.

J. H. Shear, head of the scenery department of the National Theatre Supply Company, spent Tuesday and Wednesday in the Charlotte territory.

B. L. Hall, owner of Batesburg Theater, Batesburg, S. C., has purchased the Lyric Theater, Sumter, S. C., from E. D. Turner, president of Carolina Theaters, Inc.

A. F. Moses, owner, and U. K. [illegible] manager of Colonial Theatre, Winston-Salem, N. C., were visitors in Charlotte last week.

Mrs. Reynolds Wilbanks, wife of the local Paramount-Famous-Lasky branch manager, left Charlotte Sunday night, in company with Mr. and Mrs. A. K. Jones, of Atlanta, for a trip to New York and Canada.

Oscar S. Oldknow, of Atlanta, vice-president and general manager of the National Theater Supply Company, and Mrs. Oldknow, spent the week-end in Charlotte.

W. E. Wiman, manager of the Charlotte exchange of Liberty-Specialty, is the proud father of a daughter, Anna, born last week.

C. J. Bennett, auditor for Paramount-Famous-Lasky, New York, is spending several days in the Charlotte exchange.

The new Alabama Theater, Birmingham, Publix house, is rapidly assuming shape and proportion. Steel girders are now being erected and all other construction on this theater is being rushed to completion.

Birmingham has evidently the courage to back her opinions, because she has boasted of being a great theatrical town and now comes forward with three, and possibly four, new up-town theatres, to be opened the coming season, which [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Effect Lighting in Theatres

By J. H. Kurlander
Brenkert Light Projection Company

(Paper Presented Before the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, Norfolk, Va., April 25-28, 1927)

PART THREE

(Concluded in this issue)

FURTHERMORE, the centralization of such projection devices in the main projection room places the responsibility for their successful operation in one person's hands instead of distributing it among various persons about the theatre. This naturally assists the systematic departmentization of the theatre so necessary to efficient operation.

In its simplest form, the double effect projector is nothing more than a dissolving stereopticon to which have been added (See Fig. 11) horizontal and vertical framing shutters, iris shutters, dowser shutters, a hinged slide carrier for swinging out of the way, effect holders, mask holders, extra projection lenses, a means for quick altering (vertically) the direction of both light beams, and a means for quickly tilting or swiveling the entire projection mechanism so as to cover any desired portion of the "front of the house."

For projecting lantern slides, it is operated in the ordinary fashion like any other slide projector.

It can also be used in an emergency, although lacking in intensity, to project spots" or floods of special odd shapes by the simple expedient of placing a suitable cut-out in the slide carrier, or by manipulating the iris shutter.

As an effect projector, it can produce either single or double effects by placing a revolving disc effect unit in one, or both, of the holders attached in front of the condenser lenses.

The upper system in Fig. 11 shows the method of supporting such effects in place.

Blending or dissolving colors, projected to any portion of the front of the house, are obtained by placing a suitable color wheel in the front effect holder, as illustrated by the lower system in Fig. 11. Glass design slides, cut-outs, or ordinary lantern

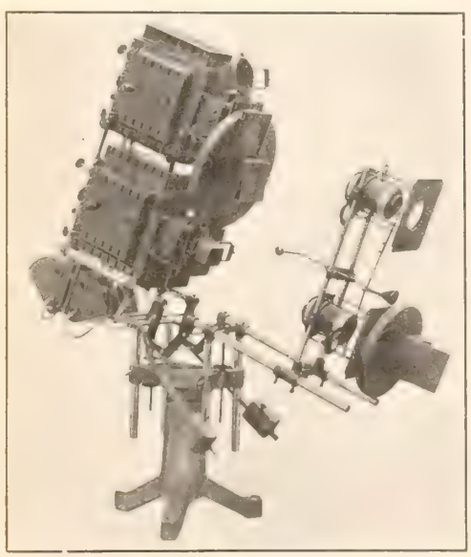

Fig. 11.—The standard double effect projector

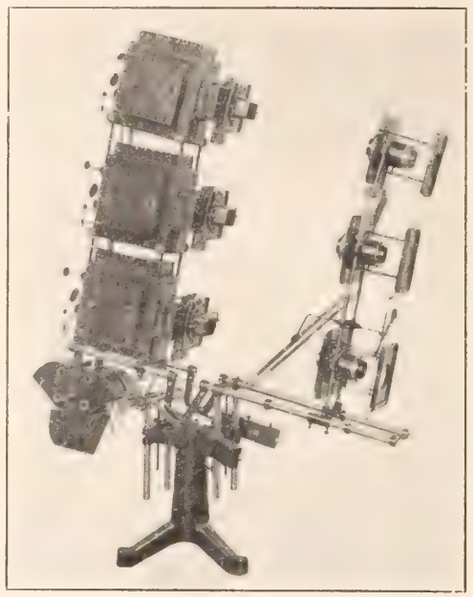

Fig. 12.—A special triple effect projector slides are places in the standard slide carriers located in the usual position before the condenser lenses.

The framing shutters, iris shutters, and special mask holders are attached, in complete assembly to the front of the lamp house in such a manner as to be between the condensing lenses and the standard slide-carrier.

Control over the area covered by the effects—whether projected on the motion picture screen or over the entire stage opening—is obtained by means of two projection lenses in each system. These lenses, one of which is of short focal length and the other of long focal length, are mounted at opposite ends of a lens barrel (See Fig. 11) and are pivoted to permit each being quickly swung out of the way so that a rapid selection of lenses is possible.

The short focal length lens is for projecting effects over the entire stage opening, any desired reductions in size being obtained by means of the various shutters provided, or by using a special mask. The long focal length lens (nearest the screen) is move commonly referred to as the stereopticon lens, since it is shown with a view to projecting pictures of the same size as that formed by the motion picture projector.

The picture size can be varied, of course, by substituting lenses of any required focal length, which operation requires but several minutes.

This projector is equipped with either arc lamps or high wattage projection type incandescent lamps, whichever may be desired. The latter are satisfactory on projection distances up to about 100 ft.

In the same manner that a spotlamp is limited to the showing of single effects, so also is the double effect projector limited to the simultaneous projection of two effects. There are occasions where the restrictions of the double machine are keenly felt, as for instance where it is desired to show dissolving slides along with a general animated effect.

Then, too, there are certain effects, such as a volcanic eruption where nothing but a triple-optic system device can be used. Such occasions, to be sure, are not as numerous as where double effects are desired; nevertheless there are times when the lack of these facilities is a drawback.

The triple projector is shown in Fig. 12. It is operated in the same fashion as the double type.

The constantly increasing size of the new motion picture theatres is making strenuous demands upon all types of projection equipment; not alone as regards spotlamps and effect projectors, but also upon motion picture projectors. A brighter source of light, the high intensity arc, has for some time past been used for motion picture projection, but it was only recently that the same source was applied to the projection of lighting effects.

Being an entirely new piece of projection apparatus, the potentialities of this high intensity effect projector (Fig. 13) have not, as yet, been fully uncovered, and its principal use, therefore, has been confined to producing colored floods, spots and odd-shaped illuminated designs.

In addition to being able to project single animated effects, color effects, and cut-outs, slides and the like, it appears to have unlimited possibilities in the way of special effects of a type hertofore impossible of attainment due to the limitation in intensity of illumination available for such purposes.

Its reception by theatres during the brief time in which it has been available has been, without exception, most favorable, so that it seems quite likely that it will find a place in the projection rooms of all de luxe houses.

Briefly, by way of description, it consists of essentially the same elements as found on the standard double effect pprojector in

M-G-M London Theatre Marks Departure in Design

THE New Empire, Leicester Square, London, the new M-G-M theatre in that city, will mark a departure in theatrical construction and equipment, according to news reports. It will be palatial in design, with a seating capacity of approximately 4,000 people, divided into the orchestra floor and one balcony.

Plans for the new house call for a stage large enough for the presentation of grand opera. The style of construction is a Georgian adoption of the classic renaissance. The front of the theatre will be stone, with a balcony off the street. Utility has bowed to beauty in that there will be no stores adjacent to the street but all architectural efforts will be bent toward a beautiful theatre front.

It goes without saying that the equipment will be ultra-modern, including lighting effects not yet in use any place in the world. The theatre will be cooled by a refrigerating system. Incidentally, it will be the only cinema house in England and the Continent so cooled. The architect in charge of construction, Mr. Thomas W. Lamb, has a long line of notable achievements to his credit, including the New York Capitol and Loew's State Theatre, on Broadway. Mr. Lamb's English associates are Frank Matcham & Co.

The New Empire site itself is a historic monument in London. At one time it supported a French Cafe Chantant, then a panorama, later a full-grown theatre, then a palace of [illegible]. In 1859 it was consumed by fire and remained in ruins for fourteen years. In view of this history, there is very little of the experimental about this site. It always was and probably always will be a good theatrical location. After the erection of the New Empire Theatre M-G-M will operate two theatres in London, the Tivoli and the New Empire.

Some Facts About Kansas City's New Midland

Although Kansas City's $4,000,000 Midland theatre, which will seat 4,000, is nearing completion on the exterior, it will be fall at least before the interior of the theatre is completed, M. B. Shanberg, general manager of the house, which will be controlled by Loew, said: The cooling system of the house includes a pond, 50 x 85 feet, on the roof of the theatre, where jets will spray water as it comes through the circulating system, cooling it for the return journey to the compressors in the basement, five stories below the level of the street. The electric voltage power to be transmitted to the theatre will be sufficient to light a city of 20,000. The lobby will be 55 feet high and extend the entire length of the building, which is one block. Elaborate wall hangings will adorn all rooms.

that the necessary framing shutters, iris shutters, special mask holders, and adjustable slide-carriers are mounted, in one assembly, before the condensers of a standard high intensity lamphouse.

Three (or as many as may be desired) projection lenses of graded focal length are used, these lenses being locked in position when once focussed. Each lens is mounted on an adjustable, pivoted arm to permit of its being swung to one side when not in use. The adjustment consists of a thumbscrew device for centering each lens in the optic system.

Should a "soft-focus effect be desired, each lens can be easily and quickly slid on the base tubes to the proper focal position. Means are provided for placing an interchangeable assembly consisting of a light shield, dowser shutter, and effect holder, before each projection lens and, when so placed, the unit is complete for that particular projection lens.

The entire working mechanism of the projector is carefully counterbalanced and can be easily swung from side to side, or tilted up and down. Effects or gelatines can be placed in holders, either in front of the condensers lens or in front of the respective projection lenses.

It is true, some difficulty is experienced in preventing the colored gelatine, when so placed, from burning up too rapidly, although this problem has been solved, after a fashion. Heat resisting, colored glasses seem to offer the best solution to this problem.

Conclusion

There is one other method of obtaining animated effects on which little has been said so far; that is, by means of motion picture films projected in the ordinary manner, or by rear-end projection through a translucent screen as is done in the Roxy theatre.

This would, after all, seem to be the most logical method—and, strangely enough, it has been but little used. Natural scenes, otherwise unobtainable, could then be used as the background for prologues and similar work instead of biulding up effect scenes by use of two or more animated effects.

The principal objection which, undoubtedly, has acted, so far, to limit this method to strictly special cases, is that it is a more costly means of obtaining something which, in the main, can be easily produced from the front of the house. Then, too, a certain minimum projection distance back stage is required so that most existing theatres would have great trouble in applying the method.

Lastly, strange though it may sound, effects projected by means of strip film, "movie" fashion, do not appear to be as realistic as those obtained in the usual manner. It would appear, therefore, that this method of projection is suited only to the showing of complete natural scenes, unattainable by any other means.

It is quite probable that the "movie" method will find more extensive application, especially in the new theatres, although it is quite unlikely that it will seriously encroach upon the now commonly accepted method.

Whatever the outcome, this much seems certain: that effect lighting in motion picture theatres is here to stay and will be even more generally applied in the future, since, to use a rather crude analogy, it represents the "sauce" which makes the "movie" more palatable to the average fan.

Stevenson Building Two in North Carolina

T. O. Stevenson of Waynesville, N. C., is building new theatres in Waynesville and Sylvia, N. C. The houses will be ready to open about the middle of June. They will be modern theatres in every respect, new buildings being erected from the ground up for theatres.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"The Missing Link"—Warner Brothers, Colony Theatre,

Graphic: "Hilarious entertainment. Clever new gags, pantomime scene that was really art in comedy and monkey which does one of the cleverest animal tricks ever seen on screen, furnish high spots. It's certainly worth time and money of those who take a trip to Colony."

Sun: "Worth buying loge seats to watch. Is exceptionally amusing."

Evening World: "Manages to elicit some hearty laughter. There are some undeniably amusing moments in this film."

Herald-Tribune: "Don't miss 'The Missing Link.' Never on screen have we seen anything funnier than love scene in which Akka participates though unknown to principals."

Times: "Succeeded in arousing many hilarious round of laughter. Almost certain to appeal to anybody."

Morning Telegraph: "Ariot. If Charlie Chaplin doesn't look out he will soon be known as 'Syd's brother.' In this extravaganza Syd settles comedy crown even more securely upon his shapely head."

Post: "Hilarious slap-stick piece. Expedition to Africa provides all that is needed to send Mr. Chaplin into buffoneries of his special privilege and he keeps picture at consistently rapid pace."

Daily News: "Audience loves it all. This was evidenced by unceasing outbursts of laughter and applause. Certainly this movie affords more than generous amounts of amusement."

Telegram: "Highly successful picture. Will no doubt prove amusing."

"Captain Salvation" — Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Los Angeles

Examiner: "Hanson superb. . . . 'Captain Salvation' has much effect of stirring novel. Only it has advantage of series of portraits that add to intensity and realism. . . . Holds your interest captive to end. . . . Character study excellent. Hanson's performance well nigh flawless. . . . Hanson greatest screen find in recent years. . . . 'Captain Salvation' daringly real. . . . Blood-curdling scenes that make one squirm. . . . Excel anything I have ever seen in movie. . . . Torrence's performance triumph and Pauline Starke utter surprise. . . . Titles literary gems. One feature I must not overlook in photography. Shots of sea particularly lovely. . . . One feels after seeing "Captain Salvation' what a vital thing a screen drama can be."

Times: "Virile drama of seafaring days, splendidly accoutered, well directed. . . . Sea-scapes look almost like etchings. . . . Above all in favor of this picture must be mentioned magnificent performance of Lars Hanson, and that of Ernest Torrence. Climax intensely thrilling. Hanson is splendid. Strikes a new note as Captain Salvation. Pauline Starke big surprise of picture."

Herald: "Among best pictures I have seen this year. . . . Has all virility of life. A tale which is not so very far removed from The Sermon on the Mount. . . . Hanson has part which gives him much greater opportunities and one which will elevate him a considerable distance up the ladder which makes for cinema greatness. . . . It is superb role that he depicts. . . . And there there are moments when he is portrayal of Pauline Starke. She displays more ability, more understanding and awakens deeper feeling than in anything in which I have heretofore been privileged to witness her. . . . Splendid artistic results attained. Titles above ordinary. Really worth while."

Record: "For lovers of sea, for admirers of dramatic and tragic thrillers, 'Captain Salvation' reproduces tense moments. . . . Pictorially wonderful revelations of directorial and photographic art. . . . Fine example of interesting and fascinating motion picture entertainment. . . . Hanson comes forth gloriously. . . . Pauline Starke never gave better performance. It is doubtful whether many actresses in the movie world could have handled part with deftness that Miss Starke offered. Genuine triumph for her. Film definitely one of stark characterizations. Camera work ranks with touch of director. It is positively beautiful."

News: "Intensely thrilling production. Beautiful scenic shots. Blood-curdling scenes. Stirring scenes. Pauline Starke does some outstanding work."

"Frisco Sally Levy" — Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Los Angeles

Record: "Apparently theatre-goers will never tire of film plays with Irish-Jewish plot, and there is no good reason why they should so long as pictures keep to standard maintained by "Frisco Sally Levy." . . . Rollicking comedy that alternates pathos with romance. . . . Cunning colleen, Sally O'Neill, easy to gaze on, needs but little assistance to put over any comedy, but she has plenty of support in this one. . . . Never an idle foot of film. . . . Kate Price cannot be improved upon as Irish mother, and Tenen Holtz gives fine characterization of Jewish father. . . . More than satisfactory."

"The Missing Link" — Warner Bros.' Orpheum Theatre, Chicago

Tribune: "Perfectly ridiculous and perfectly delightful. That great combination of actor and director which made 'The Better 'Ole' functioning again. If there were any place to roll at Orpheum I would probably be able to say with truth that audiences are rolling with laughter."

Examiner: "Chuck Reisner had mighty funny idea when he thought of jungle comedy 'The Missing Link.' Chaplin has never been funnier so what more can you ask?"

Post: "It will amuse all who enjoy comedy on screen."

Journal: "'The Missing Link' is bringing much laughter into Orpheum Theatre."

Evening American: "What acting honors Syd doesn't corral go to trained ape that plays with him. Regular slapstick stuff which, with plenty of new gags thrown in for good measure, is great fun."

Daily News "Excruciatingly funny. Everybody in cast excellent."

"Captain Salvation" — Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Allen Theatre, Cleveland

News "Powerful punch. . . . Virile tale of many conflicting human emotions, all comingled in screen story that will command attention from start until last reel. . . . Beautifully photographed. . . . No matter what your favorite mode in endings may be you will have little to complain of. . . . Hanson once more proves himself one of the screen's best dramatic actors. . . . Ernest Torrence is excellent. . . . Same and even more might be said of Pauline Starke. . . . One-in-a-hundred film story."

Plain Dealer: "Finest photoplay Allen has had this season. . . . In it are combined talents of exceptional players. . . . Deft and sure direction . . . most terse, pointed and fitting titles a screen play has ever had. . . . Story swings through tremendous emotional conflict. Players handle roles with naturalness and ease. Adding to recommendations already given, I write it is one of the finest pictures I have seen this season. Highly recommended."

"Seeing the World" — Pathe, Capitol Theatre, Cincinanti

Post: "Shorts are looking up. Offhand and without undue palaver, we might remark that the short at Capitol this week is best item on celluloid portion of bill. The short in question is an 'Our Gang' comedy. The kids take tour of world. By means of that magic peculiar to developing rooms, 'Gang' is seen in Paris, London and other points considerably removed from Hollywood. Big pictures receive so much fuss and adulation, we often are led to overlook smaller ones. Hence, in our best Boy Scout manner we attempt here to do good turn."

"Tillie the Toiler" — Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, State Theatre, Los Angeles

Herald: "Cleopatra and Helen of Troy were never half so wise as this little blonde stenographer. . . . Who but Miss Davies could portray character with same finesse, same whimsical humor, same grace? . . . Interpreting characteristics of girl of Tillie's type requires delicate shading and restraint. You don't have to take my word for it that Miss Davies excels herself in bringing Tillie to us. Simply [illegible] by fans . . . A long time since I have had as much fun as I did in viewing Tillie. . . . She's simply immense. Matt Moore splendid. Skillful hand of Hobart Henley evident throughout. He has taken advantage of every opportunity for comedy and has executed his task well. . . . Ralph Spence's titles bring many a chuckle."

Examiner: "Introduces something entirely new in screen heroines. . . . Human enough to win sympathy as well as laughter. . . . Not only is 'Tillie' Miss Davies' best characterization, it is most original delineation presented in any comedy this year. . . . Combines naive greed of Lorelei Lee in 'Gentlemen Prefer Blondes' with sympathetic nature of a Pollyanna. . . . You will love 'Tillie.' . . . Accomplishes difficult feat of transferring old familiar friends of comic strip to screen without disillusionment. . . . I can think of no one who could better absorb Mac's personality than Mr. Moore. What a characterization of the dapper little 'Whipple' George K. Arthur gives. . . . All of 'Tillie's' support do well by her. . . . By far the most satisfactory adaptation of a comic strip ever screened. Marion's 'Tillie' is marvelous. . . . The titles are classics. Will go down in film history."

News: "That clever brain child of Russ Westover promises to make as many picture fans happy as she has readers of comic strips. . . . Yesterday at State crowds packed in to see Marion Davies in title role. . . . She was delectable. Miss Davies carries out Westover's character to queen's taste. Delightful and decidedly entertaining. . . . Titles a scream."

Record: "Miss Davies appears to very good advantage doing some decidedly clever work. . . . Broad comedy and super-tragic moments. Bert Roach scores many laughs. George K. Arthur makes a perfect Mr. Whipple, a sap personified."

"Rich But Honest"—Fox Films, Hippodrome

"Take off the false face" sort of countenance. . . . Nancy Nash and Marjorie Beebee display intelligence. . . . For good round of unadulterated snickers you can't go wrong by seeing 'Rich But Honest.'"

Mirror: "Should you venture forth this week to Hippodrome you will be pleasantly surprised by 'Rich But Honest.' Story directly opposed to best movie traditions, a success with practically unknown cast. Theme essays to explode that article of cinema creed which makes poor men criterions of virtue and libertines and roués of more wealthy. Comedy continuous and usually really funny. Ted McNamara leads horseplay with his

Superiority guarded thirty-eight years

In 1889 Eastman film made movies practicable. And today the famous Kodak Research Laboratories still safeguard the superiority that has always marked Eastman Negative and Positive.

Superiority in film includes higher screen quality. High screen quality insures satisfaction to the public. And constant satisfaction is needed to maintain and increase box-office receipts.

Always specify prints on Eastman Positive, and look for the words "Eastman —Kodak" in the transparent margin.

The Mark of Protection

For the first time—Full Protection for Your Box-office

This "Mark of Protection" perforates every ticket that is issued through Model 28 Gold Seal Register. "The Cancellograph", says one exhibitor, "makes all other ticket registers obsolete". Large exhibitors all over the country are trading in their old ticket machines for the improved Model 28, equipped with our new Gold Seal invention—the Cancellograph.

Find out now how this "Mark of Protection" will guard your box-office against stolen and counterfeit ticket supplies. Remember—only the Gold Seal has the Cancellograph.

Write today for a strip of Cancellograph tickets, prices and terms on Model 28.

Cooled with a Wittenmeier—'Vitolyzed-Air' system.

The Crowd Goes Where It Is Cool

BECAUSE to the fans, it means comfort, rest and relaxation, no matter how hot and humid the weather may be in the street.

Not only does the astute exhibitor "jack up" his so-called Summer Slump by booking the best pictures available, but he makes plans to play havoc with the heat, humidity, and discomfort which used to drive his patrons to the beaches and parks. He installs an air conditioning apparatus.

The Wittenmeier—'Vitolyzed-Air' conditioning system is becoming a bank account saver to many a wise exhibitor, for he knows that his revenue won't shoot down when the old temperature shoots up.

From coast to coast, in hundreds of theatres, Wittenmeier-'Vitolyzed-Air' installations are conditioning, ventilating and cooling the air. You can't beat perfection, and the theatres listed on this page are profit-producing examples of the effect that this system has on the box-office.

Entirely at your disposal is our great organization backed by a nation-wide experience, our specialized knowledge, and our skilled engineering service. Please feel free to call upon us at any time for any information you may desire. It is yours without a penny's cost.

Charm that delights theater patrons

Just as Crane fixtures are contributing new beauty and comfort to homes, hotels, and clubs, they have been found well suited to the atmosphere of charm which delights patrons in a theater retiring room.

The glistening white of Crane twice-fired vitreous china and solid porcelain; the graceful lines of fixtures designed by artists; these are two reasons why architects like to work with Crane materials. Theater-builders too are finding in Crane valves, fittings, and piping, the same dependable, enduring efficiency that led to their installation in the Tribune Tower, the American Radiator building, the American Telephone and Telegraph building.

When you plan the theater which is to be the outstanding achievement of your business life, ask your architect and plumbing contractor about Crane materials and go with them to the Crane Exhibit Rooms for a personal inspection.

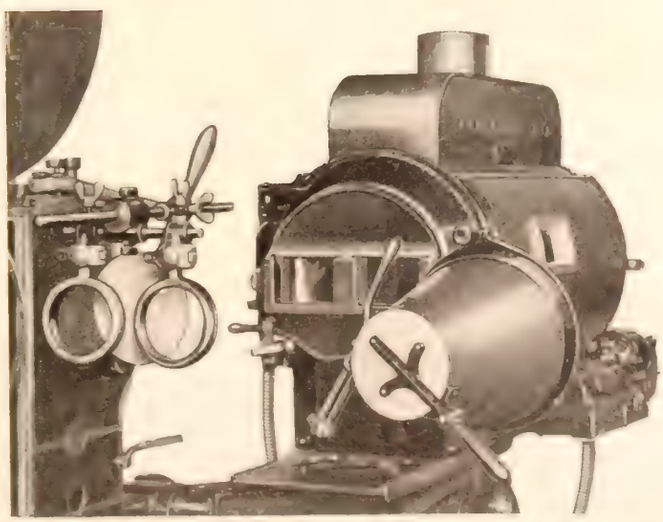
"The Super Reflector Arc Lamp"



PEERLESS Leadership has been undeniably established by its actual performance record over a period of time greatly exceeding any other equipment now on the market.

PEERLESS Reflector Arc Lamps are conservatively priced; their dollar for dollar value is by far the greatest; and their ability to deliver satisfactory service continuously, even years after their installation, has never even been questioned.

DISSOLVING STEREOPTICON ATTACHMENT

And now, in addition to the many superior features of PEERLESS, we have made possible the projection of dissolving views with the new PEERLESS.

This attachment opens a wide field of projection possibilities, for pleasing stage and lighting effects may now be had in addition to dissolving stereopticon views.

Remember that to really have all of the advantages reflector arc lamps afford, PEERLESS must be your choice and in conclusion ask—

Meet Every Decorating Need for Foyer, Lounges, Auditorium and Stage

THE modern motion picture theatre is more than merely a place to house a show. It is a show house in itself. The decorations in every part of the house are always "before the footlights" and, if well planned, have a monumental effect in enhancing the charm of the interior.

The decorator who uses Hexter fabrics to help him secure his effects is betting on a sure thing. The reputation of this more-than-a-century-old house, and fabrics with years of proved durability, underwrite his creative artistry. The wide range of colors, textures and patterns to choose from lends him inspiration and play for his skill.

Hexter fabrics include the famous imported "Sol" Fabrics loomed and dyed by England's ablest weavers in 40 guaranteed fast colors, with a lustrous sheen of marvelous beauty. Also a wide selection of SATINES; MOHAIRS; VELVETS; SILK TAFFETAS, plain and iridescent; FRENCH MARQUISETTES; GLAZED CHINTZES, and many other fabrics.

Prompt deliveries assured by full stocks.

Less than 2 Cents:

It costs you less than two cents per exhibitor subscriber to reach the theatres of the United States, first runs, second runs---all of them large and small through Motion Picture News.

And the editorial prestige of years of building the strongest paper in the industry thrown in without cost to you.

Compare this with any other method of advertising---high cost, no prestige behind it, and a tremendous waste basket loss.

Complete coverage through Motion Picture News is the answer.

A Carrier Conditioned Theatre

ROXY THEATRE

Glistening like a gem in ever changing Manhattan, the creation of master architect and builders for a master showman. To Roxy, to Mr. Walter W. Ahlschlager the Architect, to the Chanin Construction Co., Inc., to Mr. P. R. Moses, the Consulting Engineer, and to the public we extend our greetings, our pleasure in the achievement and the promise of —

"Every day a good day"

The Roxy

SIX THOUSAND people are seated comfortably in the Roxy. Other thousands stroll through spacious halls and lobbies awaiting their chance to be carried away by the spirit of entertainment in which Roxy is supreme. ¶So it will be day after day, visitors will come from afar to see this great theatre. And when they enter, they will realize that Roxy has fulfilled one more great obligation to his public. He has included in his theatre the marvel of Manufactured Weather. ¶This is a Carrier Conditioned Theatre providing to the patrons a copious supply of air that is washed and purified, air that is warmed and humidified for ideal comfort in Winter, air that is cooled and dehumidified for invigorating comfort in Summer, air that is gently diffused throughout the theatre without the slightest draught. ¶As specialists in air conditioning, we are proud to have contributed this health-giving comfort to the Roxy and to a rapidly growing list of theatres throughout the country.

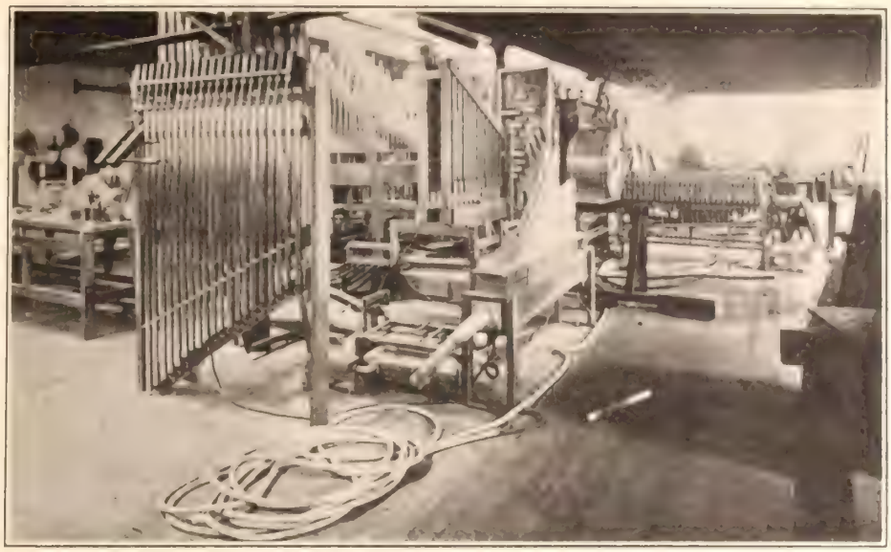
6200 BEAUTIFUL CHAIRS



"The largest and finest theatre in the world" does not adequately describe the magnificent new Roxy Theatre. It is a highly efficient business institution enveloped in art and beauty. Much time and study were given to the selection of all its appointments. "Roxy," able and wise showman, selected Heywood-Wakefield seats only because he was convinced they had the character and comfort needed to assure the success of this great undertaking. Heywood-Wakefield designing and engineering facilities produced for the Roxy 6200 beautiful chairs with so many new and modern features that we believe they mark the beginning of a new era in theatre seating.

In the majority of press comments, feature stories, and special articles on the new Roxy Theatre, the luxurious seats were repeatedly mentioned, and the adjective "comfortable" was used over and over again. Since theatre comfort depends so largely on seats, you can readily see how outstanding these 6200 Heywood-Wakefield chairs must be—and why they are keeping the box office busy at the new Roxy.

theatres must have properly controlled light

TODAY theatre owners, designers, and architects do not argue the question of lighting. They admit, and appreciate, that light—properly controlled—is a factor of prime importance in successful theatre operation.

Ward Leonard Vitrohm Theatre Dimmers were specified and installed in more than 400 large theatres in the past two years.

Vitrohm Dimmers were chosen in these installations, as in thousands of others in the past 25 years, for the reasons given below:

1 Number of effective steps. Vitrohm Dimmers have the greatest number of effective steps. Control is not concentrated in the first short movement of the control lever.

2 Flexibility of system. Vitrohm Dimmers can be banked to any desired capacity. Necessary increases in dimmer capacity are made easily and quickly.

3 Space. A Vitrohm Dimmer of a given size will control more lamp "watts" than any other dimmer.

4 Ease of Control. The mechanical movement of Vitrohm Dimmers is smooth and easy. Stationary contacts are ground to a uniform level and the movable contacts are "Cophite" brushes of large area, held in position by two springs with a construction unique with Ward Leonard.

5 Unit Spacing. Only in Ward Leonard Dimmers will the advantages of Unit space engineering be found. Each plate in the dimmer bank is immediately replaceable by another of different capacity. There is a total lack of the many difficulties associated with double-sided plates.

6 Dissipation Rating. Vitrohm Dimmer Plates will handle a greater load than any equivalent enclosed resistor. And all Vitrohm Dimmers are rated for continuous operation at their full rated load.

7 Research Facilities. Ward Leonard engineers have worked on the problem of theatre lighting control for more than a quarter of a century. The world's largest stages are Vitrohm Dimmer equipped—developed by Ward Leonard Engineers.

8 Manufacturing Facilities. Ward Leonard has manufactured theatre dimmers for more than 25 years. The opening of no theatre has been delayed, due to non-delivery of Ward Leonard equipment. Manufacturing service is complete.

Vitrohm Dimmer Plates are designed for continuous duty at full rated load without overheating.

The resistance wire in the Vitrohm element is embedded and entirely surrounded by vitreous enamel, permanently protecting the unit from corrosion, oxidation, or mechanical injury.

Heat developed is dissipated evenly and rapidly over the entire surface of the light, unbreakable metal plate supporting the resistor element.

Ward Leonard Vitrohm Theatre Dimmers are the only dimmers which embody all of these features. Send us your specifications for estimate.

THE interior of a theatre is ruined or made by its decoration. Every cent spent on carefully planned painting and decorating is a solid investment which is bound to pay good dividends.

The people go to the theatres which are most beautiful. It is wrong to say that people have no taste and it is a costly experiment to try to ignore it. It has been proven that people revel in the luxury and beauty which is beyond the means of the masses and which can be afforded only by such institutions as our churches, hotels and theatres. People love the wonderful and beautiful. Rambusch can give you a wonderful and beautiful house that people will love.

When you engage Rambusch you get not only a decorator but a person and an organization long experienced in the supervising of lighting effects, the selecting of drapes, etc.

Some of our recent theatres on Broadway are the Cameo, Colony, Warner Brothers' and the Embassy. Those now under study and execution, Roxy, New York City, and the Palace, Stamford, Conn., and the Marboro, Brooklyn, N. Y. It will be noted that the above theatres were executed for old established organizations which over a long period of time have experimented with other decorators. When you engage Rambusch on your interior you are guaranteed a modern American and beautiful interior, one that people will like and one which will pay you dividends.

Consult us early and avoid costly complications.

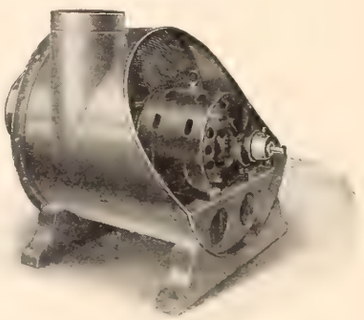
Luxuriant Carpets of the Roxy Kept Immaculately Clean

That the Spencer Central Cleaning System was chosen for cleaning all the dirt from the luxuriant carpets, drapes, floors, etc., of the world's largest theatre, the Roxy, is an endorsement of the highest order.



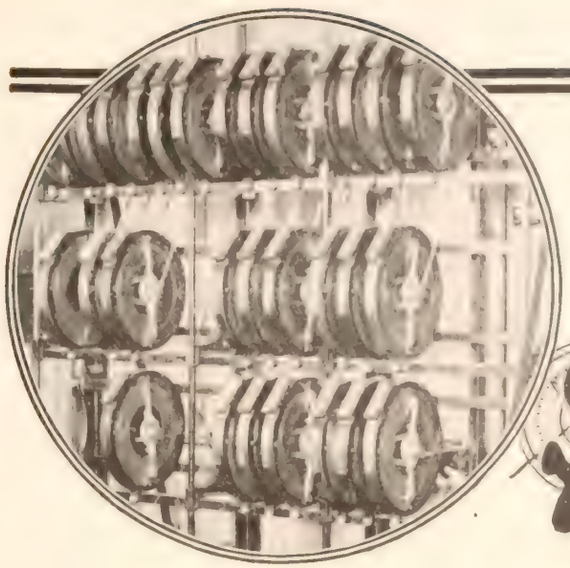
Spencer installations are efficient and flexible, enabling the operator to clean the aisles, underneath seats, the stage, walls, furnishings and the most inaccessible places with equal ease.

The ventilation problem of a theatre is largely solved by this dustless cleaning system that discharges the dustladen air out of the building.

The Spencer Central Cleaning System is installed in hundreds of the country's leading theatres. There is a suitable Spencer unit for your size theatre.

Spencer Vacuum Cleaner and separator for use in motion picture theatres.

"Orgoblo" Installed in Roxy Theatre



The Spencer "Orgoblo" enjoys the distinction of furnishing wind for most of the largest and finest American Organs. One of the most recent and noteworthy installations of this equipment is at the Roxy Theatre.

Not only does the "Orgoblo" excel in the larger installations but there are also legions of smaller ones, everywhere, giving satisfactory service.

There is an "Orgoblo" of the proper size for every organ made. They range in size from small 1-6 H. P. units, suitable for student reed organs, to mammoth 75 H. P. multi-stage, multi-pressure machines such as may be found on some of the largest organs in the world.

Lighting Control

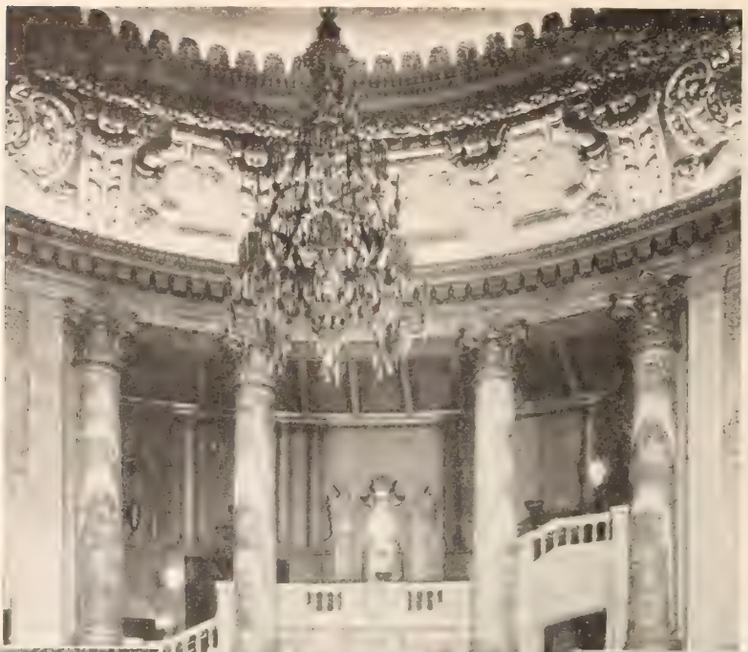
—the Talisman of profits

SOFTLY falling, smoothly fading light makes a big difference in program presentation. Therein lies your chance to establish preference for your theater—to make it the talked-of recreation center of the community.

Beautiful lighting effects—so easily produced with C-H "Simplicity" Dimmers—help your patrons forget the cares of everyday. They leave your theater rested—satisfied—resolving to come again.

Superior design make C-H "Simplicity" Dimmers almost the universal selection of discriminating managers. Such features as low ratio rack and pinion drive, eliminating back-lash—110 distinct steps of contact from full brilliancy to black out assuring smooth fading and crescendo of light without a trace of flicker. Every desired color blend is produced with ease. C-H Dimmers don't overheat or burn-out—installations have been in continuous service for over 20 years.

C-H Dimmers are adaptable to every theater—regardless of size. Ask your architects or electrical contractor about them. Get an estimate of the cost. You will find it surprisingly low.



The C-H Book, "Illumination Control for the Modern Theater" explains all details—lists by name and address over 800 theaters using C-H Dimmers, including most of the largest, newest and best—points your way to steadier patronage and consistent profits. Write for your copy.

Theatre Lighting

WRITTEN by one of the foremost lighting engineers in the country, this new book on theatre lighting will suggest to you many ways for using light to increase the attractiveness of your theatre. It is written in clear, concise language and is profusely illustrated and covers every angle of the subject in a most interesting and understandable manner.

IT TELLS

How to apply light at the entrance of your theatre to attract the passing crowd.

How to light the foyer—what size, color and types of lamps to use and what systems of lighting have been found effective.

Important points to keep in mind when planning lounge room lighting.

How the auditorium should be lighted.

The most up-to-date practices in stage lighting.

Specific examples of correct and incorrect lighting in every part of the theatre.

How to make the most of your present lighting facilities.

In the Lounge Room

"There must be no glare. The light should be soft and decorative. The proper use of colored light makes beauties of furnishings ordinarily unappreciated, stand out and become high spots in the decorative scheme. For example——"

The Auditorium

"No two theatres are identical. Decorations are widely different. However, certain general principles should be followed in lighting the auditorium. A few schemes of illumination that can be recommended are——"

Lighting Systems

"Totally indirect lighting systems provide soft, well diffused, glareless illumination. Equipment concealing the inverted reflectors and lamps should be made decorative. The following examples illustrate a few of the wide variety of styles which are possible——"

The first step toward good lighting is to use the right lamps in the right sockets. The right lamps are those that give maximum light from current consumed.

KIMBALL ORGAN

Big Feature of the ROXY THEATRE

The LARGEST UNIT ORGAN ever built

Not even the magnificence of the interior dims the glory of the living voice of the ROXY THEATRE, which is the KIMBALL ORGAN. The musical possibilities are almost limitless, and nothing like it has ever been attempted in organ construction.

THREE GREAT CONSOLES--THREE ORGANISTS PLAYING

Something you have not seen in any theatre before—three organists playing at the same time. The music pervades the whole theatre, and gives voice to the pictures before you. It may be called "the organ with a million voices."

Mr. S. L. Rothafel—"Roxy", in awarding the contract to the W. W. Kimball Company said:

"It is not a question of money, although we are spending more than any other theatre has ever spent on an organ. The mere fact that you were awarded this contract under the keenest of competition is a credit to you"

In addition to the main organ with its three consoles, a KIMBALL SOLOIST ORGAN is installed in the GRAND FOYER, which accommodates 3,000 persons, and in the Broadcasting Studio a special Kimball unit organ and a Kimball concert grand piano. The programs "on the air" will feature both the Kimball organ and piano.

Masters, Each

THE ROXY Theatre happily symbolizes the culmination of years of experience in two widely separated, yet related, lines of endeavor.

Master Showmanship on one hand—Master Equipment Construction on the other. The combination of these two factors makes for entertainment results which cannot fail to be of the highest order.

And be it said in "Roxy's" favor that he clearly recognized the necessity for obtaining the highest calibre of equipment to assist him in demonstrating his in-born qualities as a Master Showman.

Small wonder, then, that in the matter of spotlamps his choice, logically, was

BRENKERT C-14 Spot Flood lamps and BRENKERT High Intensity Floods

Fourteen BRENKERT C-14 Super-Spot and Flood Lamps and Five BRENKERT High Intensity Flood Lamps are Roxy's assurance of the very best spotlighting results obtainable.

HENRY I. CHANIN

The Builders of the Roxy

THE story of the founders of the Chanin Construction Company, engineers and builders of the Roxy Theatre, is one of romance and adventure. Eight years ago, Irwin S. Chanin and Henry I. Chanin were hard-pressed for the capital for their first building venture, two small frame dwellings. Their plans for 1927 call for the completion of about $25,000,000 worth of construction—the $10,000,000 Roxy Theatre as well as three theatres and a hotel, valued at $15,000,000 for themselves.

Irwin S. Chanin brought home from the War the determination to work for himself. He began his first two houses, modest dwellings of the type at that time needed to relieve the war-time building shortage. They were finished and sold. Then came four, then eight. Henry I. Chanin, now recovered from war injuries, joined his brother.

A little at a time the Chanins discovered that their love for the beautiful was not altogether gratified in the field of commercial construction. They determined to build a theatre. That theatre, the Chanin, opened in February, 1925, introduced the stadium style of seating, a different, more comfortable type of theatre chair, new notes in decoration and advanced stage equipment. Having completed it, they leased it and went to Coney Island to build a theatre and office building.

The theatre was in the Chanin blood. It was work they enjoyed. They determined to build a group of independent playhouses which they would both own and operate. In December, 1925, and February, 1926, the Biltmore and the Mansfield were completed and opened. In January and February, 1927, they opened the Royale and the Theatre Masque. On March 28, a fortnight after they had completed the Roxy Theatre—opened March 11, 1927—they completed their Majestic Theatre. The Royale, Masque and Majestic Theatres are a part of a huge $12,000,000 building operation which also includes the Hotel Lincoln, a structure of thirty stories and 1,400 rooms, to be completed before the end of the year. In the spring of 1927, they began work on a fifty-story office building, near the Grand Central station—the tallest structure in the Grand Central Zone.

Irwin S. Chanin and Henry I. Chanin were born in Brooklyn thirty-four and thirty-two years ago, respectively. "Speed, Economy and Safety" is their building slogan. It built the Roxy Theatre in eleven months, eight New York theatres in twenty-five months and 148 buildings in Greater New York, valued at $80,000,000 in less than eight years.

Irwin S. Chanin is president and Henry I. Chanin is secretary-treasurer of the Chanin Construction Company. The former is also a bank director and member of the advisory and finance committee as well as director of a title guarantee company.

Theatre Building & Equipment Buyers Guide

Published Semi-Annually as a Supplement to Motion Picture News, 729 Seventh Ave., New York City

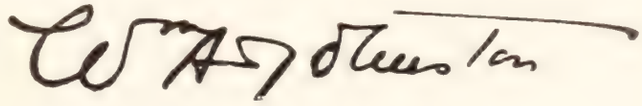
The Showman of the Future

WALL STREET is supplying the millions for big theatres—and the theatres are being built on a lavish scale.

But one thing Wall Street can't do is to supply the showmanship manpower to make the theatres pay.

That's the showman's job. What happens to the big picture palace after it is built depends entirely on his ability to please the public on the widest possible scale.

The theatre itself is part of the show nowadays. The beauty of architecture and furnishing; the efficiency of staff; and mechanical means to comfort, safety and delight all count heavily with the public.



The administration of a big theatre is an executive job of the first order—like being the head of a corporation or the master of a big ocean liner. The task is exacting, because it demands many different elements. The managing director of the picture palace must be business man and artist, in equal proportion, at the same time.

Happy is the man who can have the big theatre built precisely as he wants it; who can watch it grow from a hole in the ground to a remarkable structure; and then open it to the public, and keep it supplied with the pulse-beats of showmanship fifty-two weeks in the year.

Such was and is Roxy's experience. He calls his house "The Cathedral of the Motion Picture"—and that term describes it as no other could. All the showworld now knows that the theatre itself is a wonderful achievement, architecturally and show-wise. So it stands as the finest house of its kind in all the world.

We are giving over this issue of Motion Picture News Buyers Guide to a publication tribute to this remarkable theatre; adding, thereby, service information to the industry's store of knowledge about the great strides now being made in exhibition.

We add, too, our sincere compliments to Walter W. Ahlschlager, architect, and Roxy, creators of a great entertainment enterprise.

WALTER W. AHLSCHLAGER

The Roxy

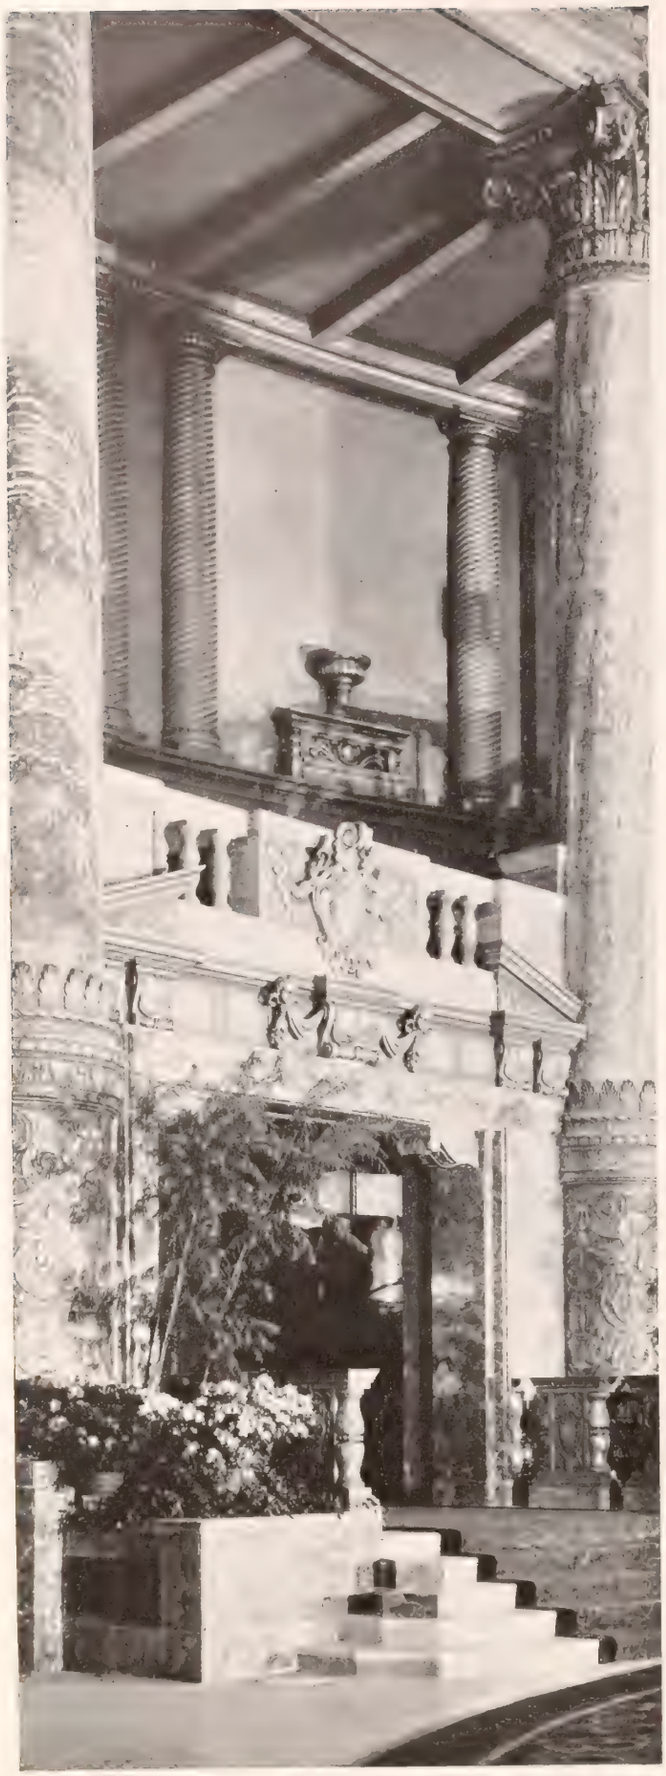
Demonstrating a noteworthy Principle of theatre design

by Walter W. Ahlschlager Architect

IN building a motion picture theatre for a community where unlimited patronage is available, the outstanding ambition of the theatre owner is to provide himself with an auditorium wherein the largest possible audience may derive the utmost enjoyment from his productions. He desires, furthermore, to furnish a pleasant environment to those who must wait for seats. And it becomes quite obvious that, capacity being large, everything connected with immensity assumes a similar proportion compared to the basic idea—"A Theatre." Each functioning part—the stage, the orchestra, the production, crowd control, personnel control, comfort to patrons, first aid, etc., expands with the idea of utmost capacity in the auditorium and the project evolves into a mammoth one.

It has been often said that auditoriums are limited to a capacity of not more than 4,500 seats. There seems to be a prevalent idea that architectural planning and design cannot overcome the pitfalls of distant vision, inaudibility and elephantine discomfort; pitfalls that some planners of the average large theatres have fallen into.

Roxy Auditorium Mountainous but Not Elephantine



The Roxy Theatre, for example, has a mountainous auditorium containing 6,076 seats. The auditorium, while well adapted to sight and hearing from every seat, represents a careful study as to scale. Quite true, it is mountainous, but its parts are not elephantine; its patrons are not discomforted by open vastness. Each thousand is seated in its own environment, with the surrounding architecture brought down to the scale of that particular thousand. The proscenium enframement was so designed as to tie all these divisions into one architectural phantasy. And last, but not least, the color scheme employed was a kind to draw the walls together rather than to make them recede.

The auditorium of the Roxy Theatre is the presentation room of the actor, the producer and the scenic artist, where personalities are put across footlights to meet a spirit of acceptance on the part of the audience, the latter taken collectively as a mass, meaning one and not two, three, four, five or six thousand people, each sitting in a separate seat, each thinking differently, incoherently and with a different viewpoint. If to make it so be the problem, it becomes evident, since an audience is under no condition liable to be of one frame of mind on entering the theatre, except to be entertained, (for they have paid money for only one purpose,) the task of creating a coherent spirit of thought lies in the architecture and decoration of the theatre. It is likewise true that this task shall not only be confined to the auditorium, but to the lobby and foyers through which this audience must pass.

Of assistance to architecture and decoration is lighting; and lighting is again dependent upon architecture to produce atmosphere. Atmosphere produces coherent reaction in a mass of people; and to permit the actor and audience to work best, the type of initial atmosphere should be a restful one.

Few Laws Established For Decoration of Auditoriums

Upon lighting of public auditoriums much has been written. But upon the decoration of a public auditorium or of a theatre, few laws have been established, with a result that many well designed theatre interiors have looked well and appeared to be in perfect harmony with the architect's plans and supporting illustrative drawings, up to the actual completion of the house. At this final point of construction a sudden change has taken place. Every bit of scaffolding has been removed, perhaps weeks previous, without effecting a change. Lighting effects have been tried out during construction without a surprising change. It has been a foregone conclusion that everything would function as expected—a dashing bit of red here would bring out this particular bit of ornament, this gilded creation would tie in with the entire ensemble. And so on—yet the entire finished interior is not the restful quiet conception of the architect's drawing. Something has happened! The stage with its lights and curtains, its colored scenes; the auditorium with its dome, its colored lights; the occupied chairs with the audience present; are now all a jumbled mass. Ornaments and architecture have ceased to count. The entire ensemble that seemed to work so beautifully to a point of magnificence has been torn apart. The various colors employed have either been lost under certain color effects and distance, or have been intensified to a strength that utterly distorts the beautiful architectural proportions of the plastic decorations. And last, but not least, the stage opening exists merely as a disturbing effect on the architectural creation, rather than its focal point, and is no longer enframed by the entire ensemble.

THE IMMENSE SCALE OF THE ROXY THEATRE IS SHOWN IN THE ENTRANCE TO THE MEZZANINE STAIR FROM THE GRAND LOBBY
WALTER W. AHLSCHLAGER, Architect

Therefore, taking all that has been said into account, is it not fair to conclude that everything in a theatre interior must be coherent in order to inspire coherent thought? There must be nothing disturbing in the entire ensemble, and above all in the auditorium itself, the stage must hold the undivided attention of the audience. The architectural and decorative scheme must be such as to draw the audience to the stage and the stage to the audience, thereby giving the production a chance to meet the audience more easily across the line of footlights. The audience must form a veritable part of the stage and as the stage has its lighting effects so must the audience, yet these effects must not detract from the stage.

The function of lighting which is so important in helping to create atmosphere must not be handicapped. A wall tint must be employed which will act favorably under any tone, any color, or a uniform distribution of light. The proportions of the architectural forms must not be disturbed with detracting colors, save the illuminating colors which light them uniformly. Above all a showman should never be handicapped by wall tones of his auditorium so that he cannot work his auditorium lighting as he does his stage lighting in producing atmosphere and enframing his production.

Roxy a Composite of Three Theatres Under One Roof

The Roxy Theatre is in reality a composite of three theatres under one roof, the largest theatre being the orchestra of 3,000 seats; the second largest, the balcony theatre of 2,000 seats; and the remaining theatre, the mezzanine, of 1,000 seats. Therefore, an unusual traffic problem was presented to the architect when called upon to handle the patrons going to, or from three theatres simultaneously, each theatre, so to speak, differently located and differently priced as to admission. At the same time the three theatres must have certain things in common, such as access to their proper ticket office, or offices, of the foyers located at the 7th Avenue entrance and access to the rest rooms, smoking rooms, foyers, promenades and similar subordinate departments. The public has conceded that the most fortunate traffic scheme was arrived at by giving the patrons to the balcony their choice of elevators, or of climbing the 16′ wide circular marble staircase. This staircase travels 40′ in height to the mezzanine foyer and is broken up by three platforms, even though the staircase is in one continuous line. The width of the staircase and location made it possible for the architect to design it with all the feeling and grandeur of a private foyer to the balcony, with the result that 65% of the balcony patrons of their own volition today choose the staircase as their method of approach to the balcony, and almost the same percentage use it to exit.

The access to the orchestra seats is by means of a continuation down the center line of progress and through the grand foyer.

The mezzanine, or de luxe theatre, within the Roxy Theatre, has its own private approach and staircase designed along the same generous lines of the balcony staircase, and it is complete within itself as an individual foyer. So thoroughly does it function as the one and only desired means of access and exit from the mezzanine that it was found unnecessary to install elevator service to the mezzanine floor.

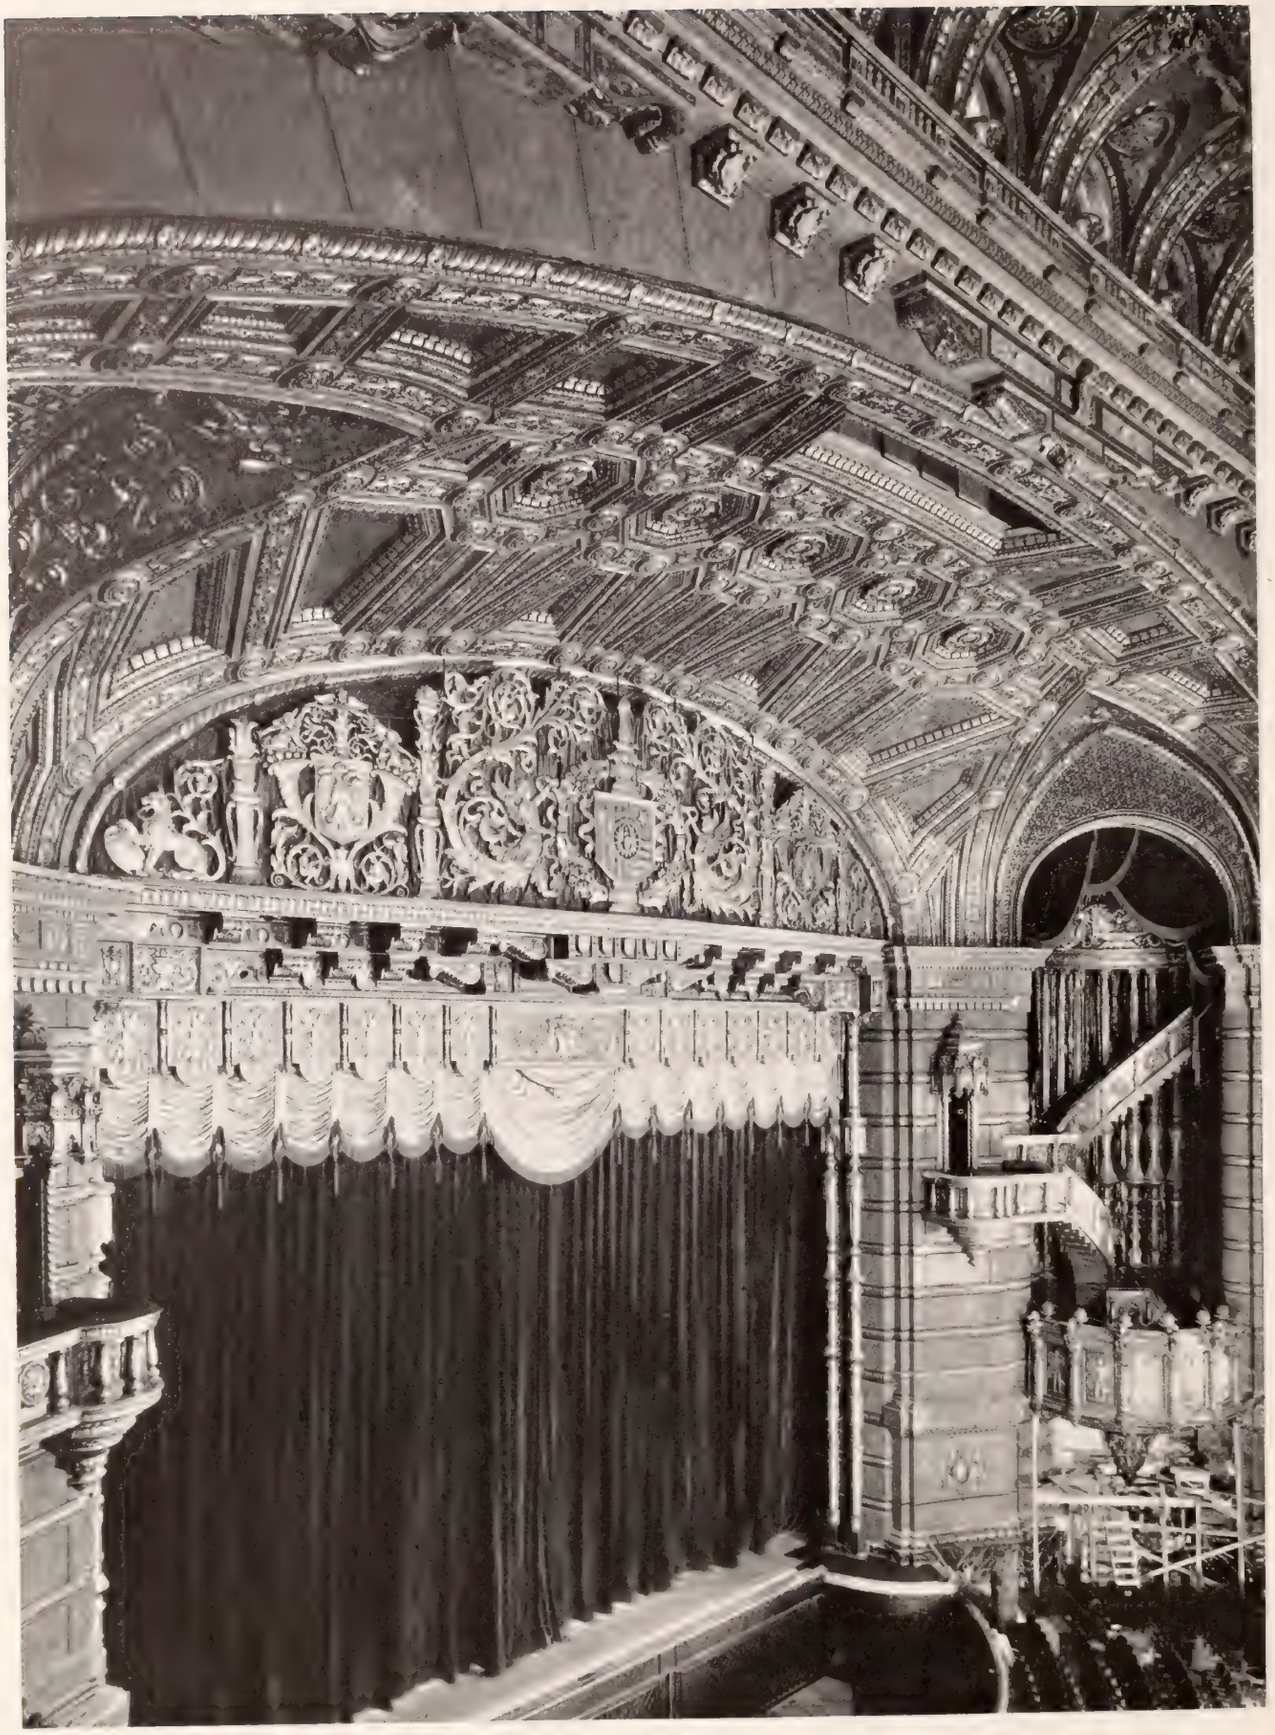
It has been very correctly estimated that when the Roxy Theatre is filled there are 9,000 people under its roof, which volume of people may be grouped approximately as follows:

Roxy Theatre When Filled Contains Nine Thousand People

Seated, 6,076; standees viewing the show, 500; standees in the foyers and rotundas who have purchased tickets and are awaiting vacant seats, 1,750; orchestra and musicians, 100 to 110; ballet, chorus, artists, stage hands, 175; theatre operative department including such departments as ushers, pages, ticket sellers, restroom, smoking room and wardrobe attendants, hospital corps, 300.

To provide complete and proper equipment to scientifically condition the air for an audience so great in number, and to insure the health and comfort of the patrons and staff, presented an engineering problem of unusual proportions. To refrain from boring technical discussions has been the predominating thought in the preparation of this article, but it is difficult to resist the temptation to dwell in short upon some of the more important mechanical features of the theatre, among which the "manufactured weather" of the Roxy is one of the most interesting.

Many new problems were encountered in designing the equipment for a theatre of such large proportions. The size of the auditorium as a single enclosure, its great cantilever balcony and mezzanine overhanging the main floor, the unusually large proscenium opening, the fact that the theatre was to be occupied for nearly eleven hours daily, made the designing of adequate air conditioning equipment extremely interesting. The apparatus itself had to be installed in difficult locations so that it would not interfere with the design and decoration of the building or occupy space more valuable for other uses. Finally, the greatest care had to be exercised to keep the entire system noiseless while in operation.



Air Condition Under Control During All Seasons

Three huge fans, each a part of a separate air conditioning system, draw air from out of doors through a fresh air intake located above the highest point of the theatre roof. Before reaching the fans, the air passes into a chamber within which a perfect cloud of atomized water is sprayed through hundreds of small nozzles. Within these chambers, the air is completely washed and its state of humidity is fixed. By various processes the air is then mixed with a quantity of warmer air and is discharged into a network of metal ducts through which the air is conveyed to the main ceiling of the theatre, to the soffits of the balcony and the mezzanine and to the various foyers, rest rooms, etc. The air is then discharged through numerous openings in these ceilings which are merged into the architectural design. These openings, or grilles, are so constructed that the air is blown through them without perceptible velocity that would create a sensible draught upon the audience, rather the air is diffused or "poured" into the theatre so gently that one is not conscious of the source of refreshing atmosphere. Mixed with the somewhat warmer air of the theatre, the fresh supply is forced towards the audience until it reaches the breathing zone, at which point the automatic control of the conditioning apparatus is so regulated that the air, as it reaches the audience is at a scientifically correct temperature and relative humidity.

The air is then passed over the audience gathering bodily heat, moisture and odors, thence to the floor grilles and ventilators through which it is drawn into the re-circulating system to be washed, cooled and mixed with a copious supply of fresh outdoor air.

It is within the spray chamber which was mentioned as a part of each of these systems that the really important effect of air conditioning is produced.

During the winter season the water sprayed within this chamber is maintained at a temperature that gives the correct amount of humidity or vapor moisture which is to be added to the reconditioned air.

During the summer, the water supplied to the spray chamber is cooled and accomplishes two purposes in that the air which passes through this dense spray is cooled and the excess humidity of the outdoor air which so much affects our comfort is caused to condense in just the same manner as one observes the moisture from the air condensing upon the sides of a pitcher of ice water.

Air Dehumidified and Washed Before Entering Theatre

It seems a paradox that the humidity of air may be reduced by blowing it through a cloud of water. However, it is a fact that the air leaves the chamber with a dewpoint temperature many degrees lower than when it entered. The dewpoint, to be more explicit is the temperature at which the water vapor in the air begins to condense or form a cloud. If air is cooled by any means whatever to its dewpoint temperature, condensation begins and continues as the temperature is lowered.

The temperature of the water in the spray chamber is always maintained at the same point, so that if the dewpoint temperature of the entering air is higher than this, water is condensed from the air; if it is lower, water vapor is added to the air.

The process of condensing water from the air is called dehumidification and, as you know, the secret is that the water which issues from the spray nozzles has been artificially cooled to a predetermined temperature under automatic control.

CORNER OF THE ATTRACTIVE STUDY OF S. L. ROTHAFEL (ROXY) IN THE ROXY THEATRE
WALTER W. AHLSCHLAGER, Architect

For this artificial cooling, it has been found after many costly experiments that the usual supply of city water is not of a sufficiently low temperature to cause the necessary condensation. To thoroughly cool the water which lowers the temperature of the air and thus reduces its relative humidity, centrifugal refrigeration machines, capable of refrigeration equivalent to the production of 500 tons of ice per day were installed. Of course, no ice is actually produced or used, as it is not necessary to cool the water used in the spray chamber to the freezing point, but one can more easily visualize the hugeness of the plant by this comparison.

All of the equipment in connection with the foregoing system produces an effect which has proved to be one of the most important factors in the successful operation of the modern theatre, as an audience cannot justly appreciate the producer's efforts to entertain it unless its physical well-being is taken care of from every angle.

This effect, while a component part of the atmosphere differs from the atmosphere created by lighting only to the extent that the one appeals to the physical sense and well-being of the patron while the other appeals to the artistic sense of the patron.

Electrical Equipment Installed Provides For All Lighting Effects

Faithful followers of the Roxy productions have gratifyingly shown their appreciation of the many varying and gorgeous ensembles of color effects that the master showmanship of S. L. Rothafel, Roxy, has produced. To place at the disposal of so imaginative a mind the electrical equipment and mechanical features that would interpret the idea which motivates each lighting effect and stage production, provided one of the most interesting problems encountered in the planning of the theatre.

It can be said with pardonable pride that the Roxy claims the distinction of being the most complete, electrically equipped theatre of today.

This we feel can readily be appreciated by the fact that the theatre equipment is energized by four separate electrical services, one of direct current and an alternating current service on the Fiftieth Street side with a similar provision on the Fifty-first Street side. These services are so arranged and interconnected that a failure of any three of the services would readily be compensated by the ability of the remaining service to provide sufficient current to bridge over the emergency period.

Four Separate Electrical Services Insure Against Power Failure

The interpretative color schemes of the magic-like lighting effects are obtained entirely through indirect lighting, which feature is particularly emphasized in the grand foyer by the subdued amber glow of the ceiling fixture. On entering the foyer, one is impressed by the coziness and comfort in this vast and spacious hall. As we pass into the auditorium, this feeling seems to grow upon us by the character of illumination which lends itself so admirably to the mood of entertainment and of the audience. The glare of harsh lighting which tends to disturb one's comfort is conspicuously absent and a feeling of restfulness and an appreciative mood is the result. The stage itself is a masterpiece of electrical artcraft containing every imaginable feature of mechanical equipment necessary for the successful and artistic presentation of the Roxy programs. A few of the more outstanding features will bear brief description as it is not within the province of this article to describe them all in detail.

Colored Light Effects Controlled by Switchboard with 250 Units

Of these, undoubtedly, the stage switchboard is the most important for it has been claimed by those well versed in switchboard design that it is the largest and most complete board of its type. There are some two hundred and fifty or more control units mounted on the stage or pilot-board by means of which various color combinations can be effectively pre-set. The stage, which is triangular in shape is equipped with every modern device of stage craftsmanship. In addition to the regular stage equipment there are numerous spotlights mounted on light bridges on either side of the proscenium opening. A back-stage projection booth equipped with two rear projectors makes possible animated back drops. Two stage lifts or elevators set directly in front of the cyclorama make possible a succession of platforms varying in height from stage trap room level to ten feet above stage.

Orchestra Pit Has Elevator Capable of Carrying 110 Musicians

The orchestra pit is provided with an electrically operated elevator capable of carrying 110 musicians. In addition to the main lift, there are three individual organ console lifts and a separate piano lift, all of which are so synchronized as to be controlled from the stage switchboard or leader's stand either independently or jointly with each other and with or without the orchestra lift. The organ consoles which are controlled individually or together at will make it possible to have any of the three organists perform as a soloist if so desired. The main unit of the several organs in the theatre, are uniquely placed directly under the forward part of the stage. The swell shutters and tonal grilles face the orchestra pit proper thus making the blending of the organ and orchestra tones quite imperceptible. This blending of the organ and orchestra is quite apparent when the organ chambers are located above the proscenium boxes.

In the grand foyer, a three-manual console was provided, controlled by an automatic device operating from hand-played rolls reproducing the music of the masters. Above the main ceiling of the auditorium are located the fanfare organ and chimes chambers. The chimes are of especial interest due to the fact that it is the first installation of its type and size in any theatre.

One of the outstanding features is the method of playing them. There is no tugging at ropes. The chimes are played by the organist from the organ console. There is also a supplementary keyboard that looks exactly like a small section of the organ keyboard itself which is placed so that a member of the orchestra may play the chimes entirely independent of the organ. With the aid of the world's greatest servant, electricity, the heavy plungers of the actions (there is one for each chime) are propelled forward with lightning-like rapidity as the corresponding keys of the keyboard are depressed.

Design, Location and Operation of Roxy Assures Record Receipts

The foregoing are just a few of the many thoughts which bring us to the conclusion that the natural result of the proper location, proper designing and planning this theatre, the marvelously conducted showmanship of S. L. Rothafel is a gross box office return in excess of $129,000 per week which has been reached and $125,000 has been averaged for weeks at a time. It is, I believe, correctly predicted that the Roxy will time and again do a gross business of $150,000 per week with its present relatively low admission charges. It is also correctly predicted, I believe, that patrons of the Roxy will soon, for a dollar or less, be able to hear, in addition to the standard show, such artists as Fritz Kreisler, Geraldine Farrar, Mary Garden and Giovanni Martinelli.

Predicts Theatre Seating One Thousand More Than Roxy

Size and volume of a building so architecturally and artistically treated spell only beauty. Regardless of the millions of dollars expended in this creation, unless the building itself increases our happiness, our knowledge, our comfort, in which event, at the same moment becomes a vehicle for the transaction of sound business, then and only then does it justify its inception, and then only does it surround itself with the fullest requirement of a well conceived and designed architectural masterpiece.

The wonderful growth of the moving picture industry is due principally to the fact that a moving picture theatre sells its merchandise upon the same principle as a large department store or a chain store business. In fact, almost any large business owes its growth to ever increasing volume, which means lower unit selling prices, lower proportionate overhead and operating expenses, lower unit profits, but greater aggregate profits.

I venture the prediction that within a very few years, the Roxy, today the world's largest motion picture theatre, will be superseded by one of 1,000 seats greater capacity.

Those superb lighting effects

HOW best to produce them is one of the uppermost thoughts in the minds of architects and others interested in theater designing. The multitude of scenes must be changed quickly and accurately.

Westinghouse, with years of switchboard design experience, has produced various types of theater switchboards which, through their reliability, ease of operation, beauty and perfection of design have established Westinghouse as one of the leading manufacturers of this type of equipment.

The many successful installations that have been made stamp Westinghouse as among the foremost in advanced design and manufacture of theater switchboards.

Do you have a copy of Circular 1702-A? It contains a complete description and fully illustrates our various types of theater switchboards.

Air Cooling for Theatres

Kills the Summer Slump!

Old Man Summer Slump Has Seen His Day—At Least In York Cooled Theatres

Entertainment and comfort go hand in hand, and unless you can keep them inseparable your box office suffers.

YORK AIR COOLING SYSTEMS have been installed, or are being planned for the houses shown above—the World at Omaha, the Fox leased theatre in the National Press Club, Washington, the Capitol at Nashville, the Stanley at Baltimore, the Winter Garden, New York, the Earle at Philadelphia and the Stanley at Pittsburgh.

In addition, plans are being formulated for YORK COOLING SYSTEMS in the Colonial at Allentown, the State at Easton, the Rose Marie, New York, Cameo, New York, Loew's State at Newark, Loew's Astor, New York and Loew's 86th Street Theatre in Brooklyn.

Write for full information on the YORK SYSTEM.

BROADWAY THEATRES

decorated by

HENRY JACKSON

"The Pony Express" banner 50 x 100 feet with sewed letters 18 feet high which covered the entire front of the Rivoli Theatre. Another banner of the same design covered the front of the Rialto Theatre when the "Pony Express" ran at both theatres the same week. The letters and border were blue on a white background. Both banners were made of bunting.

The New

DEBRIE-PARVO

Model "L"

Does Everything!

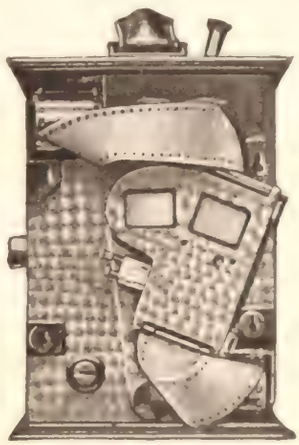
New Features

1—Direct focussing on ground glass, without prism, and full size of frame. The only apparatus with this feature.



2—Pilot register pins, located under frame, assuring absolute steadiness and the perfect stoppage of film at any point for super-imposition (double exposure, etc.)

3—Gate which automatically releases the film, after every exposure, preventing friction marks, scratches, etc.

The first-named feature permits you to focus with absolute accuracy on ground glass by the simple movement of a conveniently located lever. This movement automatically moves the film in such a way that it is out of the exposure field. Upon returning the lever, you are at once ready to continue turning. It is never necessary to move either lens or camera, and all adjustments may be made in your usual position behind the camera.

POSITION DURING EXPOSURE

POSITION DURING FOCUSSING ON GROUND GLASS

Now, more than ever before, with the many new features and improvements of the Debrie, it is the most adaptable apparatus for studio work on productions of every variety.

Here are a few other features of this marvelous new Model L:

Direct focussing ON FILM while turning and when stopped, without prism.

Instantaneous indication of diaphragm in use.

Automatic dissolve by shutter—always of same duration no matter at what opening shutter is set.

Automatic stop of crank at end of fade-out and fade-in.

Any lens may be used, regardless of focus or aperture.

Veeder counter, with dual indicator.

All operations visible and controllable from the back.

It is the lightest in weight and most compact 400 foot professional camera on the market.

Outfit complete with 2 in. F3.5 Krauss Tessar lens, 8 magazines, case for camera, case for magazines, sunshade, 2 sets masks, rewinder, and Precision Ball Bearing Tripod—$1,350.00

Electric equipment allowing control at a distance. (additional cost.)

CAMERA MEN and DIRECTORS!

You Need This

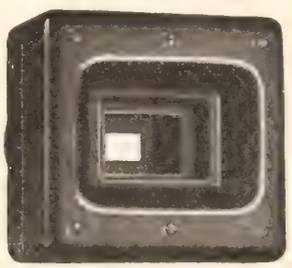
VISOGRAPHE

VISOGRAPHE OPEN

FIRST— To indicate the field and angle of the picture being taken.

SECOND— To indicate what focal length lens to use.

THIRD— To determine the angle or field with any given focal length of lens.



FOURTH— To indicate the exact proportion or dimensions of the subject to be photographed.

FIFTH— To indicate the portion of the picture affected by masks employed.

SIXTH— To indicate the photographic values of colors and tones in the subject. A blue-green glass is conveniently located to pull down over eye piece.

The Visographe was devised by Debrie to save the valuable time of both director and cameraman. It is a device of the finder type, entirely constructed of metal. Dimensions when closed 3 x 3 x 1¾ inches. It weighs less than a pound. Carried either in the pocket or by a light strap like a binocular.

The Visographe is composed of two parts forming a box. These parts are separated or brought together by a set of lazy tongs, and will indicate angles of view taken in by any motion picture lens up to 8¼ inches. Measure on one side indicates focal length of lens, after looking through back of apparatus to find field or angle.

This Investigation Will Help You Sell

MOTION PICTURE NEWS has taken the "guess" out of the motion picture industry through a complete and thorough analysis of theatres. We know who owns them—buys for them—builds them—and their relative buying powers.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS has a circulation that covers every buyer of consequence. Our records—the result of an investment of over $50,000, spent to study and know our own field—are open to your inspection.

The only analysis of its kind in the industry.

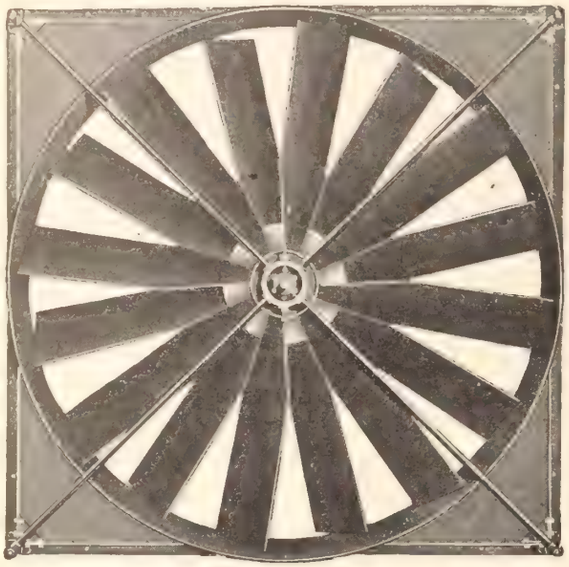
When it's 90° in the Shade, you need HELP.

You need something to keep your house cool and comfortable—something to hold business up to the mark.



Only one thing will do it—fresh AIR. And lots of it—cool, refreshing breezes that will bring them back night after night. That's the only way you can be sure of good profits the whole summer through. Typhoons prove it in 2,000 other theatres.

Let's show you how easily it's done.

About your products!

MOTION picture theatres today represent the finest class of buildings in this country. Each year is finding their scale of construction enlarged upon. Millions are expended on individual projects where costs have no influence on the choice of only the best products.

This year there are being built over 1,000 new theatres. Nearly as many houses will undergo complete remodelling and renovation. Also, 14,000 theatre owners are always buying equipment for those houses under constant operation.

Here is a field spending between $200,000,000 and $300,000,000 annually on all kinds of building materials and equipment. And the buyers spending this enormous sum are progressive---eager to try new apparatus and methods.

These are the facts that have made possible the unparalleled success of Theatre Building and Equipment Buyers Guide. For with this book thoroughly fulfilling the needs of this tremendous buying power, it is natural that advertisers should secure exceptional results and that every reader should keep his copy of Buyers Guide as a source for continuous reference.

Buyers Guide is published semi-annually by Motion Picture News and offers the best selling opportunity ever afforded manufacturers in the motion picture theatre field. Write now for full information concerning our Fall Edition. Address

DIAMOND FLASHER BUTTONS

make your Electric Signs SPARKLE

A new view of Curtis Street—Denver's movie row—taken from 17th Street.

The tremendous number of electric signs that you find in every city makes it much more difficult for any one sign to "stand out" over others.

Yet there IS one device—the DIAMOND FLASHER BUTTON—which, at very moderate initial cost, and at a SAVING in sign upkeep, FORCES ATTENTION to the signs in which it is placed.

The DIAMOND FLASHER BUTTON placed in a lamp socket causes the light to flash off and on thus drawing the eye of the passers-by. And at no one time are so many lights out that the message of the sign is not instantly readable. You have, therefore, 60 seconds of attention value in every minute.

The DIAMOND FLASHER BUTTON is a sure, proved method of increasing sign "visibility." In addition it reduces lamp upkeep and decreases current consumption 35% to 50%.

If your supply house hasn't DIAMOND FLASHER BUTTONS in stock write us for the name of our nearest distributor.

note this:

DIAMOND FLASHER BUTTON, slipped into any lamp socket, flashes the light. It is the only patent-protected flasher button and guaranteed for 1000 hours of steady use.

DIAMOND FLASHER BUTTON decreases current consumption 35% and increases the life of lamps.

DIAMOND FLASHER BUTTONS pays for itself many times over in operation saving alone.

CAN YOU AFFORD NOT TO USE DIAMOND FLASHER BUTTONS?

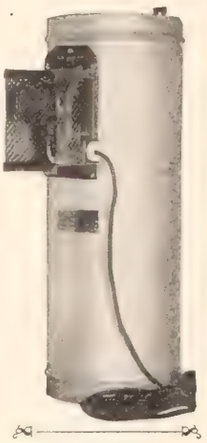
And in the Specifications Include---



EVENHEETERS

WHEN you are planning the organ chamber for that new theatre, investigate this method of organ protection as well as the organ itself and include EVENHEETERS in your specifications.

Again when you are planning your equipment don't forget this protective device for the organ. Stipulate EVENHEETERS in those plans too, to be doubly sure they are purchased.

EVENHEETERS have been specified in the plans of most every large theatre. Architects realize their value. They realize that this protective measure will save maintenance costs in the future.

Protect your client against loss of organ use and save him from costly delays due to breakdowns caused by temperature changes and dampness by specifying EVENHEETERS in your plans. They are a wonderful investment in organ welfare.

The SYNCROVERTOR Guarantees Dependable Projection at Lower Operating Cost

THE trend today in motion picture equipment is in the direction of greater efficiency at less cost. The development of the Liberty Syncrovertor for current rectification is therefore a matter of chief interest to every theatre owner—present or prospective.

The Syncrovertor has, quite convincingly, proven its ability to save 25% in costs of current rectification over other types of installations. In addition to its normal function of rectification its transformer also acts as an emergency unit if anything happens to the motor element. Where the Syncrovertor is used the "change-over" is effected without any flicker whatever on the screen.

The Syncrovertor is made in four types as follows: Type 25 and Type 25B for rated capacity of 25 amperes; Type 26 for rated capacity of 50 amperes, and Type 28 for rated capacity of 100 amperes.

Write today for detailed specifications and prices.

CINEPHORS are

Screen Tested

And with a reflecting arc at that,—the most difficult and positive of all tests.

The rigid test to which every B. & L. CINEPHOR projection lens is subjected assures the Projectionist of an unusually high degree of uniformity. It guarantees that every CINEPHOR lens is equal in quality to every other CINEPHOR lens,—and that the field is flatter, the contrast between black and white is more pronounced, and the intensity is greater than in any other projection lens obtainable.

FILMUSIC PICTUROLLS

LIBRARY OF MORE THAN 1050 NUMBERS

are the only organ rolls especially selected, arranged and played for pictures. The exclusive full organ arrangement in these organ rolls will bring out in your automatic organ than can be played by most high-priced organists. The NEW PICTUROLLS have the hand-played feature expressly arranged for the following instruments: Fotoplayer Pit Pipe Organ; Cremona 88 note; Wurlitzer YO, YU, YK, etc. Any other 88 note organ or 88 note player piano. Only organ roll with special solo arrangement.

100% MORE MELODY AND ACTION

Unlike the thin texture of piano rolls, our popular PICTUROLLS have tremendous, almost orchestral force and volume. Write for Catalogue.

Special Price, 10 Picturolls, $10.00 (on standing order).

Organists!

Here is the Seat You have Been Looking For.

The value placed on Howard Wonder Organ Seats by all of America's most famed theatre organists is demonstrated in the following letter:

My dear Mr. Howard:

Needless to say I am still very much enthused over your organ seat. It demonstrates its worth very effectively and I can't imagine myself doing without it. It is a Godsend to Organists and I am sure you will be unable to supply the demand once they become aware of its existence.

(Signed) Jesse J. Crawford

Many important theatres have all installed the Howard Wonder Organ Seat.

New York: Paramount, Roxy; Buffalo, Shea's Buffalo; Chicago: Chicago, Tivoli, Riveria, Uptown, Oriental, Roosevelt, McVickers, Capitol, Diversey, Norshore, Pantheon; San Francisco, Metropolitan. THE PAGE ORGAN COMPANY
521 N. Jackson Street,
Lima, Ohio

THE Page Organ Player solves the problem of the best music at low cost. It furnishes wonderful pipe organ effects from ordinary 88-note piano rolls that are purchaseable anywhere. A patented device makes it possible to play the solo or obligato alone. The Page Player is ideal wherever it is difficult to secure a competent organist, or for use as a relief organist. Installed anywhere. Surprisingly low prices and terms.

ELIMINATE DEFECTS ON THE SCREEN THEATRES AND EXCHANGES

Do you realize what cloudy, rainy and flickering effects mean on the screen? NO—for if you did, would you not eliminate these defects? We are the manufacturers of the machines which can do the work of removing cloudy and flickering effects on the screen. The most important item in a well equipped theatre is—that the patrons be absolutely satisfied with the pictures on the screen. If there are these defects YOU THEATRE OWNERS and EXCHANGES are the people to blame—for it is up to you to see that your films are free from any defects, and how can they be—when these defects cause eyesight strain? You have no doubt read our article on this subject. The cost of cleaning a film is so small that we know if we can only reach you, you will be the first ones to insist on film free from defects.

We manufacture cleaning processing and laboratory machines. Hand control rewinds for exchanges, fire-proof power control for theatres. Write for catalogue.

USE BANK SAFETY TO GUARD YOUR CASH

You deposit money in the bank for safety, and the bank uses the world's finest vaults for its protection. But what of the money you take in evenings, or on Saturdays and Sundays, when your receipts are greatest?

Guard this cash in York Burglary Chests, made in the same way and by the same concern that has made the finest bank vaults for over forty years. You will be entitled to the lowest burglary insurance rates. The saving thus made will pay for your York Chest in a reasonable length of time.

Give your funds the finest protection against burglary, even before you place them in a bank—guard them in a York Chest. Send the coupon today for the booklet that tells all the facts.

Bigger Audiences for You!

It takes a perfect screen to assure perfect projection — projection that makes even the best pictures appear better! And that means satisfied audiences—bigger audiences!

Your patrons will quickly appreciate the clearer, brighter projection of a Minusa Screen. And their appreciation means dollars and cents to you!

Install a Minusa De Luxe Special. It will pay you!

MINUSA CINE SCREEN COMPANY
Bomont at Morgan Saint Louis

THE BEST MINUSA De Luxe Special SINCE 1914

Super-Lite Screens Are Equivalent to more Light

Pictures that on the average screen are dull, shadowy and tiresome, snap out clear, lively and bright on a Super-Lite Screen.

That is because practically all the light that falls on the silvery surface of a Super-Lite Screen is reflected.

Super-Lite Screens give the equivalent of higher intensity light sources at a fraction of their cost. They are made from fine, sturdy material and last for years.

Why Keep These People Out— When Seats Are Vacant?

Every minute the crowd stands outside, it means many prospective patrons are forced away. Those in the "line up" become dissatisfied. And when seats are actually vacant, you pay for them!

That's the truth that makes no profits for you. And yet it is a daily happening in too many theatres.

An Acme Usher Signal System will find those vacant seats—locates them instantly. It keeps the ushers busy turning in the flood of dollars and it keeps your patrons in a better frame of mind. That's profitable.

Why not look into this matter now—today—this very minute! Write us and let us tell you the facts, send the illustrated Acme Bulletin and quote estimates. It is all free!

---anything as good at the price
---anything better at any price

With hundreds of successful installations all over the country and with the majority of theatre managers, owners and architects proclaiming the wonderful service given, there should be no doubt about the choice of theatre lighting control for your new house.

Here is a flexible, practical, safe, preselective system that combines the successful features of many years of engineered switchboard. It is both an all-master preset and double throw control.

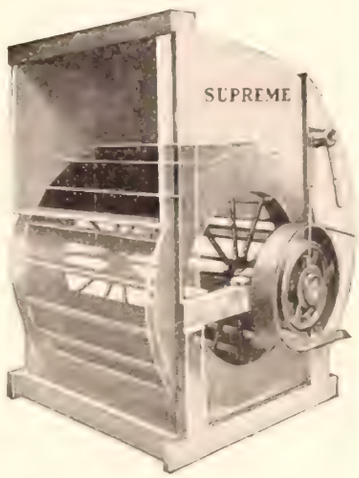
POSITIVE
COOLING & VENTILATION
EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR



If you want a Blower that will operate efficiently under all conditions—one that will keep your theatre positively cool and comfortable in hot weather and can be slowed down to provide a moderate breeze, just enough for ventilation, in cool weather, you will find what you are looking for in the

SupremeBlower

Extra Large Size

Greater Air Volume — Higher Outlet Velocity
Vibrationless 10-Spoke Spider, All-Steel Wheel
Scientifically Cupped Blades — Noiseless Operation
Horton Variable Speed Control — Adjustable Diffuser

The Supreme is built oversize, big enough to do its work properly. Its large size means greater air volume and higher outlet velocity—the two essentials for successful cooling. You can slow down the Supreme in cool weather, but you cannot increase the capacity of a small blower in hot weather. Get the facts on the Supreme. Send in the coupon:

ARCTIC NU-AIR COMPLETELY CONTROLLED VENTILATION

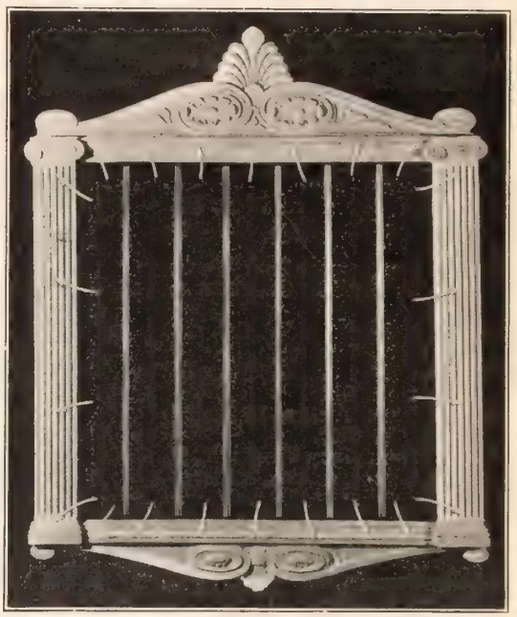
ARCTIC NU-AIR

Proven by the Performance of Over 2,000 Installations

WHEN you buy an Arctic Nu-Air Cooling and Ventilating System your good judgment is confirmed by an enviable record of success in the theatre field.

A roll call of Arctic Nu-Airized theatres reads like a "Who's Who" of the exhibitors' world. Here are hundreds of your fellow exhibitors—many of them probably well known to you—who can be relied upon to give you the benefit of their experience—facts based on actual performance.

Many of these exhibitors have written letters of enthusiastic praise for their Arctic Nu-Air Systems—letters that ring with the sincerity and conviction that can only come of a highly satisfactory experience.



A booklet filled with this kind of evidence, the names of Arctic Nu-Airized theatres, and a complete description of other improvements that will improve your business, is yours for the asking. It also tells why more Arctic Nu-Air Systems are being installed than any other system.

There is a type and size of Arctic Nu-Air to fit your theatre and your pocketbook—with a year's time in which to pay for it out of the added profits and savings it effects. Send the coupon—get the facts about the most complete, the most profitable, cooling and ventilating system you can install—there is no obligation.

AIR-O-SWITCH

Exclusive Feature of Arctic Nu-Air System Gives You Both EXHAUST and BLOW-IN Ventilation

A move of a lever changes from blow-in to exhaust ventilation or the reverse. You can draw foul air out, or fresh air in. Makes system readily adaptable to cooling, heating, recirculating, conditioning or exhausting. Multi-purpose, year 'round ventilation at less cost than some systems designed for hot weather cooling only.

Practability and Beauty Combined in the new DUAL DEFLECTOR

Another exclusive feature of Arctic Nu-Air which deflects 49 currents of air into every nook and cranny—without ducts—without draft. Beautified with art flanges and outwardly appearing like a golden grill—practability without becoming an eyesore.

Standard Automatic

Eyemo is a hand-size Bell & Howell Camera that has made professional history since its introduction. Leading producers use it for stunt shots, news reels, locations and all action wanted in a hurry. All exploring expeditions of note use it to record standard motion-picture evidence. It is used by theatres to take "neighborhood" movies —and by newspapers who conduct a news film service. Light, convenient, professional in every respect, Eyemo is the camera you want for every motion picture purpose not requiring the Bell & Howell heavy-duty Pioneer Standard. Price $264.00. Write for descriptive Eyemo circular.

This shows how "follow focus" or iris dialing is possible with Eyemo in operation. Iris dial and focus numbers are plainly visible in spy-glass viewfinder. To operate, simply locate scene in viewfinder and press the button. Fourteen lenses with accurately matched viewfinder pieces are interchangeable with regular Taylor-Hobson-Cooke Anastigmat F2.5 Standard lens. Eyemo takes 100 ft. daylight loading rolls or 120 ft. dark room load, standard (35 mm) film.

This is the Bell & Howell Pioneer Standard Professional Camera used by leading producers all over the world. It is the standard camera with which all others are compared
